LABELED SPY; HELD 6 DAYS BY GERMANS

Carolyn Wilson Thrown Into Prison; Given Little Food and No Rest.

WRITER TELLS ORDEAL.

BY CAROLYN WILSON.
[STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]
[Copyright: 1915: By The Tribune Company.]

BERNE, Switzerland, Feb. 17.—I went into Germany care free, joyous as on returning home after a long absence, and I left it skulking fearfully across the border, afraid lest at the last moment some one should arrest me again.

I went over to Berlin from France by way of Hamburg, expecting to get in the German capital—where I had once lived and studied for some years—news of what people there were doing and thinking; news especially of womankind that would prove interesting to the women who would see my letters in THE TRIBUNE. I am now in Switzerland, en route back to Paris, with an abundance of experience, the most vivid being a memory of six days in a Berlin prison.

Six Days in Prison.

I have been broken on the wheel of German militarism. For the six days in the German prison all the power of the embassy, the consulate, the foreign office, of scores of old friends in Berlin, or the help of loyal newspaper colleagues, could not get me out.

However, I don't want to prejudice you in the first place by giving the impression that I have come out of Germany furious with the entire government, anxious to do anything I can for revenge That is absolutely not the case. I think German officialdom is stupid—hopelessly, painstakingly stupid.

And it seems to me when every member of our American embassy and the consulate went individually and in chorus to each of the different bureaus which were concerned with me and demanded my release, and were willing to be personally responsible for me until such time as the government could be satisfied with my claims, that I should have been released before six days of solitary imprisonment had gone by.

Must Trace All Complaints.

Of course I realize that when a complaint is made they must trace it to the end in these perilous times, and the incident has in no way prejudiced me against the wonderful condition of affairs in Germany. It will in no way affect the articles I shall write on the spirit among the German people and their lives during these war days.

Do you want to hear about prison life? Are you interested in the trials of a "spy" presumed to be in the pay of the French government? And shall I start right at the beginning?

They came to get me while I was at luncheon on Saturday, Feb. 6—two nice, gentlemanly looking policemen, who looked through all my things, took all my papers, and requested me to go with them to the police station.

Asked a Thousand Questions.

They asked me a thousand or two questions, harping on the fact that I was inimical to Germany. Incidentally I got so tired of the two words, "deutschfeindlich" and "deutschfreundlich," that I hope I never hear them again as long as I live.

At about 4:30 in the afternoon, when they were tired out asking me everything about my past life, my plans for the future, and my hope of immortality they smilingly informed me, much with the air of hosts giving an invitation, that they were regretfully obliged to detain me there for the night. I was slightly staggered, but their pleasant faces calmed me, and I saw in prospect a room, not too large, but comfortable, a student's lamp, perhaps, by which I could read until midnight, and then early in the morning out again.

Denied Aid of Friends.

"Can't anything be done," I asked. "Can't I phone to the embassy or the consulate, where I am known, and let them explain for me?"

They would not give me permission to phone either of the American representatives, but said I might send word to the American Woman's club, where I was staying, in order that they shouldn't worry about me there.

I didn't want to make a useless pother over just one night, so I rather laughed over the matter on the telephone to the secretary of the club, and asked her to accept for me a dinner engagement which I had just received for the following night—so sure was I that I should be

"Dope" Slaves, Deprived of Drug, Besiege Doctors

Hospitals Also Stormed as Law Cuts Off Addicts' Supply.

The suffering of "dope" victims as the result of interruption of drug habits of many years' standing became apparent yesterday. Those who were scantily supplied with drugs when the new federal law went into effect besieged doctors, public officials, and institutions for relief from the torture that comes from being suddenly deprived of their potions.

Mrs. Anna Ekdahl, who lives on West Erie street, near North Racine avenue, and who has been a morphine addict for thirty years, made a pathetic appeal at the office of the collector of internal revenue. It developed that she works in an overall factory, sorting rags for $1 a day, and each week pays $1.50 for sixty grains of morphine, according to Dr. A. H. Burr.

Hospital Refuses Her.

Mrs. Ekdahl presented a letter from Dr. Burr to the county hospital stating that she needed treatment. She was unable to get into the hospital, however, owing to the fact that attendants there told her the hospital did not handle drug cases.

F. E. Doesburg, a deputy collector, gave Mrs. Ekdahl enough money to go to the hospital again. She reported that she was refused admittance the second time, and then went with her sister to see Dr. Burr.

Doctor Prescribes Drug.

"I filled out a prescription for thirty grains of the drug under the new law and sent her to a druggist to get it filled," said Dr. Burr. "It is hard to tell what might have happened had she failed to get morphine. She was weeping hysterically and trembling violently.

"She says she acquired the habit in a hospital when young."

At the bridewell it was estimated that the prisoners brought in included 50 per cent more than the average of "dope fiends."

Bare Drug Syndicate.

"Tremendous stores" of cocaine, heroin, opium, and other enslaving drugs have been concentrated at Gary, Ind., Hammond, Ind.; Aurora, Ill., and other middle western cities, to be used by a "syndicate of gigantic proportions" in evasion of the Harrison federal law, which recently became effective, according to a statement yesterday made by Federal District Attorney Clyne.

The announcement came as a climax to a rigid investigation which federal agents have been quietly conducting ever since it became certain that the Harrison law would pass congress.

BRITISH POUR SHELLS INTO SMYRNA FORT

Pound and Damage Turk Stronghold; To Concentrate Troops.

PUSH ON IN STRAITS.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, March 6.—The combined activity by the allies in the Dardanelles was overshadowed today by the official announcement that a British squadron of battleships and cruisers, under command of Vice Admiral Sir Richard Pierse, had begun the bombardment of the fortifications at Smyrna.

The fleet drew up before Fort Yenickale at Yassi Kale, at the entrance to the Gulf of Smyrna, yesterday and for two hours a continuous rain of shells was poured in on the stronghold from long distance.

FIGHT CLOSE TO FORT.

After considerable damage to the fort the squadron came to closer quarters and continued the fire.

The fire of the Euryalus, which flew the flag of the vice admiral, from its after 9.2 guns was deadly and was not returned.

As the weather conditions are good, the squadron will continue its bombardment of the fortifications, the reduction of which, the report says, is "a necessary incident in the main operations."

BOMBARD ALONG COAST.

The lighter cruisers of the combined fleet are working with Vice Admiral Pierse. They are attacking the fortifications along the coast of Asia Minor, from Besika, which is near the entrance to the Dardanelles, to Smyrna, doubtless with a view to preventing reinforcements being sent to the straits, where there already are a large number of Turkish troops with whom the marines who were landed to complete the destruction of the forts at the entrance to the straits have been in contact.

LOSS TO LANDING PARTY.

It was in this land fighting that the allies suffered casualties, according to the British report, of nineteen killed, twenty-five wounded, and three missing. The Turks, however, place the British casualties at a higher figure.

According to a dispatch from Paris the ministry of war has announced that on account of the situation in the Dardanelles and in order to meet every eventuality the government has decided to concentrate in North Africa an expeditionary force which will be ready to put to sea at the first sign that it is needed and be directed to the point where its presence is required.

BELIEVE BIG FORTS GONE.

The news that the fleet is within three miles of Fort Chanak in the Dardanelles makes authorities here believe that possibly the guns of this stronghold, as well as Kilid Bahr on the European side, have been silenced, although no word to this effect has been received.

It is known, however, that the British battleships Queen Elizabeth and Prince George and the battle cruiser Inflexible with their eight 15 inch guns and an even dozen 12 inch guns yesterday opened an attack on the principal forts on the European side of the narrows. Two of the forts were damaged and the magazine of a third was blown up.

REAL BATTLE IS NEAR.

With these forts silenced the real campaign begins. The "narrows" of the Dardanelles, which the fleet must pass, is the strip of waterway one and one-fifth miles in width, leading past Gallipolis and into the Sea of Marmora. Once the allied fleet passes the narrows, which is thickly strewn with mines and commanded by modern forts, the way will be clear to Constantinople.

REPORT ON DAY'S OPERATIONS

An official communication from the French ministry of marine on the day's operations in the Dardanelles says:

"At the Dardanelles during the day of March 6 three cruisers stationed in the Gulf of Saros bombarded by indirect fire across the Gallipoli peninsula the Turkish forts at Kilid-Bahr, which guard the European coast of the narrow strait between that point and Chanak.

"The fire was directed and rectified by four vessels stationed at the entrance to the Dardanelles. The results of the bombardment were satisfactory.

LITTLE MOTHER GETS 'FRED' FREE

Child's Plea, "Mamma Died Today and Johnnie Is Hungry," Wins Brother's Liberty.

A peaked faced girl of 15 and a boy of 12, who looked as if he might develop into a dangerous character if turned loose in an unguarded restaurant, wandered into the Criminal Court building yesterday and found their way to the office of Edward J. Fleming, State's Attorney Hoyne's secretary.

"Please let Fred Riesen go," said the girl, abruptly.

"Who's Fred Riesen?" Fleming wanted to know.

"Our brother."

"But I haven't got him," protested Fleming.

"Somebody here has got him locked up," said the girl, positively. "They say he's a robber, but me and Johnny—that's my little brother here—we know better. 'Cause why? Well, 'cause if Fred was bad he would not have taken care of Johnny and me and mother the way he has ever since papa died."

Then the Tears Come.

Fleming's shabby little visitor paused for breath. The pause was fatal to her poise. She dabbed at her eyes with a handkerchief that gave evidence of much recent use for the same purpose.

"Johnny and me wouldn't have bothered you if—if mamma hadn't died this morning," she went on, struggling to keep her voice even. "She had cancer."

"You've just got to let him go, mister. Johnny hasn't had a bite to eat since yesterday and he ain't used to it. With us women it's different, but Johnny's got to have his meals regular. That's the last thing I promised ma."

Fleming took his visitor to Judge O'Connor, to whom the worried little mother repeated her story.

"I'll act for young Riesen if you'll bring him out," volunteered Attorney Benedict J. Short, who had overheard.

Fred Gets Freedom.

So Fred, a pale, undersized boy of 17, was brought into court. He turned a shade paler when he heard the news of his mother's death. Judge O'Connor, after listening to a brief argument by the volunteer counsel, told Fred he was released on his own recognizance.

Fred fished a crumpled dollar bill from his pocket and handed it to his sister.

"You kids go fill yourselves," he directed. "I'm going to try to get a job. You run home now, git!"

ROSTAND'S TRIBUTE TO SARAH BERNHARDT

PARIS, March 6.—Sarah Bernhardt after a slight relapse is once more on a fair way to recovery, and is already busy with her plans for the future. She sits up on her couch, reading newspapers and the thousands of letters and telegrams that reach her from all parts of the world, except Germany and Austria.

Yesterday she recited to her son some lines entitled "To Sarah," which Edmond Rostand composed and dedicated to the creatress of "La Princess Lointaine," "La Samaritaine," and "L'Aiglon," the day after her recent operation. The poem, roughly translated into free verse, runs as follows:

Thou whose genius has been one heroism
unbroken,
Fail not to envy the rôle of those
Who, fighting to defend height or valley,
Each moment fall.

"That wound," thou didst exclaim, "I must have for myself,
Since they struggling yonder have it, too,
And suffering may bring me closer to death."

But a wing on each shoulder wilt thou retain,
For thee one heel alone doth suffice
To stamp the earth and set it a-quiver.

To the winds of the headland may you hoist your sail,
We need a Samothrace—
When it assailed the muse,
The steel gained a victory.

"TRIBUNE" WRITER BRAVES PERILS OF NORTH SEA TRIP.

E. F. Weigle Reaches The Hague from England—Saw Floating Mines but No Submarines.

BY EDWIN F. WEIGLE.
[STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER OF THE TRIBUNE.]
[SPECIAL CABLE.]

THE HAGUE, March 6.—I arrived here today, after making the trip from Hull, England, via Rotterdam, on a British steamer. We left Hull with eleven passengers aboard and came through the North sea and across the English channel to Rotterdam.

The voyage was thoroughly exciting for all of us, knowing as we did that we were running the gamut of the German submarines and floating mines. All the passengers had life belts on constantly.

We saw no German submarines, and for this we were thankful, but we saw and passed three floating mines, one of them only fifty yards away. The voyage took about forty-eight hours, what with the ship feeling its way along at slow speed and always prepared to make a run for it if the periscope of a German submarine should be sighted above the water.

In ordinary times the trip from Hull to Rotterdam is a matter of fifteen hours.

When we reached Rotterdam we learned that the betting there had been four to one that our ship would not reach port.

KING OF GREECE BALKS WAR PLAN

Cabinet Resigns After Ruler Refuses to Approve Intervention Program.

ATHENS, March 6.—The Greek cabinet resigned in a body tonight, following a conference regarding the possible entrance of Greece into the European war. It was announced that this action was taken because King Constantine flatly refused to approve the program advocated by Premier Venezolos.

Bombardment of the Dardanelles forts by the Anglo-French fleet created a crisis in the Greek capital. A strong war party, favoring Greece's entrance into the conflict on the side of the allies, suddenly appeared.

Ministry Leans to War Party.

The war party leaders argued that Greece had nothing to gain by remaining neutral, while she undoubtedly would be rewarded if she sent troops into Turkey and aided in the conquest of Constantinople.

Premier Eulelerios Venizelos, who was also minister of war, and other members of the ministry were reported to favor yielding to this demand. Even the newspaper Hestia, one of the most cautious government journals, gave assurance that the people were ready to endure any sacrifices if the government declared itself with the allies.

King Insists on Neutrality.

King Constantine, whose wife was the Prussian Princess Sophia, a sister to Kaiser Wilhelm, insisted that Greece maintain her neutrality, it was reported. Following a cabinet meeting last Monday the crown council was convened and has been in session all week. Not only present members of the ministry but former premiers have been called to the conference to discuss Greece's future policy.

EVANSTON MAGICIAN HELD FOR AVENGING PETS' DEATH.

Jacob Dries Accused of Planting Glass and Thus Causing Wounds to Neighbors' Dogs.

Jacob Dries, 921 Davis street, Evanston, a magician, owned a trained duck, a weasel, a rabbit, and a snake until a week ago, when three venturesome dogs owned by Harold H. Hermes of 923 Davis street, a dog fancier, dug their way into the barn in which the trained animals were kept and killed all.

Then Dries prepared a flower garden, imbedding large pieces of broken glass around it.

Yesterday the dogs made directly for the flower bed and in doing so cut themselves severely on the glass. Hermes had Michael McDonough, an officer of the Illinois Humane society, procure a warrant for Dries' arrest, charging cruelty to animals.

LINER LA TOURAINE CARRIES GIFTS OF CHICAGO WOMEN.

Steamer Sails with 500 Lafayette Kits for Soldiers Fighting in Trenches in France.

Five hundred Lafayette kits being rushed to the soldiers in the trenches in France by Chicago women were on board the liner La Touraine which caught fire yesterday in mid Atlantic. The kits represented four weeks of labor on the part of the women workers and an expenditure of approximately $1,000.

The Lafayette kit fund was organized in Chicago about a month ago. It was the aim of the committee in charge to ship 500 kits to the trenches every week. The first shipment left New York on Saturday.

Mrs. Joseph Coleman, a member of the committee, said last night she had been informed that the first shipment had gone on La Touraine.

"It will be too bad if they are destroyed," said Mrs. Coleman, "for it will mean another week's delay in getting them to the soldiers. You see we wanted them to get them while the weather still remains cold, and they will be more serviceable. We are going to send the second lot this week, though, and I hope we have better luck this time."

VICE FORCES LUCY FLOWER GIRLS' SCHOOL TO MOVE.

Ella Flagg Young Announces That Noted Institution Is Unable to Cope with Surroundings.

The Lucy Flower High School for Girls must be moved from Twenty-sixth street and Wabash avenue. Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools, made this announcement at the annual luncheon of the Illinois Congress of Mothers in the Hotel Sherman yesterday, following a brief eulogy of the school by Dr. Nathaniel Butler of the University of Chicago.

"For a liberal education one should visit the Lucy Flower school for girls," said Dr. Butler. "This school expresses Mrs. Young's educational ideals more accurately than any other."

Mrs. Young then explained that the school, which is able to do so much for deficient girls, is unable to overcome the evils of its neighborhood.

"The Lucy Flower school must leave the place on account of vice," she said. "The Wendell Phillips High school several years ago left the location for the same reason. This is a subject for you to ponder."

Kansas City, Mo., March 6.—William Rockhill Nelson, editor and owner of the Kansas City Star, who has been ill at his home here since December, was announced as in a serious condition tonight.

A decided turn for the worse which took place last Friday has been unchecked, his physicians announced.

AID REACHES 280 ABOARD LA TOURAINE

Other Ships Told Their Assistance Is No Longer Needed.

EXPLOSIVES IN CARGO.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, March 7, 2 a. m.—Wireless reports received soon after midnight this morning said the big Holland-America steamship Rotterdam had reached the side of the French liner La Touraine, which has been afire in the Atlantic 400 miles west of Ireland since yesterday morning.

The message said the Rotterdam is prepared to give every assistance, including the transfer of passengers if necessary.

Wireless messages have been sent to the steamers Arabic, Cornishman, Swanmore, and Stanford, which were rushing to the rescue, saying that their assistance is not required.

CRUISER'S AID NOT NEEDED.

Before the Rotterdam arrived to rescue the 280 persons aboard La Touraine a British cruiser on patrol duty in the Atlantic received the "S. O. S." call and proceeded at top speed to the assistance of La Touraine.

The aid of the warship is not considered necessary, as the captain of the Rotterdam has promised to stand by the stricken ship until it is safely navigated to port.

When the Rotterdam reached La Touraine the crew of the latter vessel was fighting the fire with every means at its disposal.

GREAT ANXIETY IN LONDON.

The message from the Rotterdam ended a day and evening of great anxiety in London. It was early yesterday morning when the first call from La Touraine for help was received by the wireless station at Valentia, Ireland.

This message told of the fire and gave the position of the ship.

Later a message was received by way of Queenstown which said the fire was "fierce." Then the wireless appeals ended.

The fear of the hundreds who gathered around the London offices of the French line was increased by the fact that La Touraine had on board 500,000 rounds—more than eighty tons—of cartridges, which were being taken to the allies on the continent from America.

It was thought these might be reached by the fire and exploded, blowing up the ship.

SHIPS GO TO RESCUE.

This fear was not allayed by a message received from Paris in the afternoon which quoted a director of the French company as saying:

"From a wireless dispatch we have received we are given to understand that fire was discovered on La Touraine at 6 o'clock this morning. Four ships which were within wireless range have gone to its assistance. Among them are the Arabic and the Rotterdam."

He added no word had been received concerning the ship with the exception of this message.

This director stated that the fire "apparently was serious."

HEAVY SEAS A MENACE.

As the hours went on and nothing was heard from La Touraine alarm increased, because it was known the liner was equipped with a powerful wireless plant.

The only explanation made by the French line office here was that the wireless might have been destroyed by the fire.

Another cause for alarm was the fact that captains of incoming vessels reported unusually heavy seas off the Irish coast.

This gave rise to many rumors from Irish and English seaports and it was expected that the scenes at the burning of the Volturno might be reënacted.

When the Volturno burned, a ring of big vessels surrounded it, powerless for many hours to take off the passengers because of the high seas.

It was Capt. Caussin of the La Touraine who put over one of the first boats. Defy-ing mountainous seas he sent his men to the relief of the burning liner. For their bravery Capt. Caussin and his crew were awarded medals.

SHIP CARRIED 281 PERSONS.

New York, March 6.—When the liner La Touraine sailed from New York for Havre on Saturday there were on board thirty-eight cabin passengers, forty-three steerage passengers, and a crew of approximately 200. Among the passengers were three surgeons and ten nurses who were going to France for service in the battlefields on the continent.

The first cabin list contained the following names:

Alphonse, Robert, New York.
Andrews, Mrs. Alice O. L., Boston.
Andrews, Ralph, Boston.
Craib, Mrs. Agnes, Havana.
Craib, Miss Helen, Havana.
Delpuech, Benoit, New York.
Foguet, Paul, New York.
Feinberg, B., Brooklyn.
Fosdick, Wood, New York.
Fravel, Edmond, Montreal.
Gautrand, Louis, Poughkeepsie.
Goulet, Auguste, Montreal.
Levy, Gaston, New York.
Maurer, Joseph L., New York.
Mozet, Eugene, San Francisco.
Pares, Emile, New York.
Simpson, Ralph, New Haven.
Repusseau, Francois, New York.
Swoboda, R. R., New York.
Treault, J. S., Montreal.
Walker, Mrs. J. C., New York.
Wettach, Miss Cecile, Bainbridge, Mass.

Five Surgeons on Board.

The five surgeons, all of them from the French hospital in New York, were:

Braddock, W. J.,
Irwin, John S.,
Jimines, A. V.,
Walker, J. C.,
Wheelwright, J. L.

The nurses who are in the party were Florence Gordon, Eugenia H. Lyons, Mollie McGrath, Dorothy O'Connell, Victoria Francfort, Cathlyn O'Hanlon, Ellen O'Hanlon, Alina Marie McCormick, Nellie Burdette Parsons, Beda L. Peterson, Carolyn O'Hanlon, and Thomas J. Burke Jr.

Two Chicagoans are listed in the second cabin. They were Mrs. Eliza Pidow and child.

Loaded with War Munitions.

La Touraine was heavily loaded with munitions of war. Besides the 500,000 rounds of rifle and small arms cartridges, it carried 139 rapid fire guns and a varied assortment of supplies for the allies' commissaries, both foodstuffs and clothing. Twelve hundred tons of the cargo consisted of uniforms, cloth for uniforms, sweaters, and hosiery for soldiers in the trenches.

There were 1,500 cases of machinery aboard as well, many hundred wagon wheels, and 275 bars of silver. In addition there was a large assortment of foodstuffs.

Although the vessel was thought to be out of range of most of the wireless stations on this side of the Atlantic, repeated efforts were made to reach it all day.

Figured in Other Affairs.

La Touraine, a steamer of 3,878 tons under command of Capt. Caussin, is one of the older transatlantic liners, having been built in 1891.

Since it was launched La Touraine has played an interesting part in the history of ocean travel. It arrived in New York on Oct. 28, 1913, with forty-two persons whom it rescued from the Uranium liner Volturno, which burned at sea with the loss of 132 lives. Capt. Caussin was one of the first commanders of rescue steamers to get a boat over in the heavy sea to aid in the rescue work. The captain and crew were decorated with medals for their bravery on this occasion.

It was the captain of La Touraine who warned the ill fated Titanic of the presence of icebergs in its course.

Found Afire at Havre.

Once before the steamer was threatened by fire when flames were discovered in the staterooms while it lay at its dock in Havre on Jan. 21, 1903. There were no passengers aboard, and the damage was not serious.

La Touraine was withdrawn from service for a time in 1907 because of serious damage to its machinery. The discovery was made just before it was due to sail from New York. On another occasion a member of the crew was killed by the bursting of a steam pipe.

When the European war began the entire carrying capacity of La Touraine was reserved for Americans struggling for passage home from France. La Touraine arrived in New York on Dec. 18, 1914, thirty-six hours overdue, because of hurricanes it encountered. High seas swept its decks while the passengers were battened down below.

The steamer is 520 feet long, with a beam of 56 feet and a depth of 34.8 feet.

The message was signed by Anna A. Gordon, president.

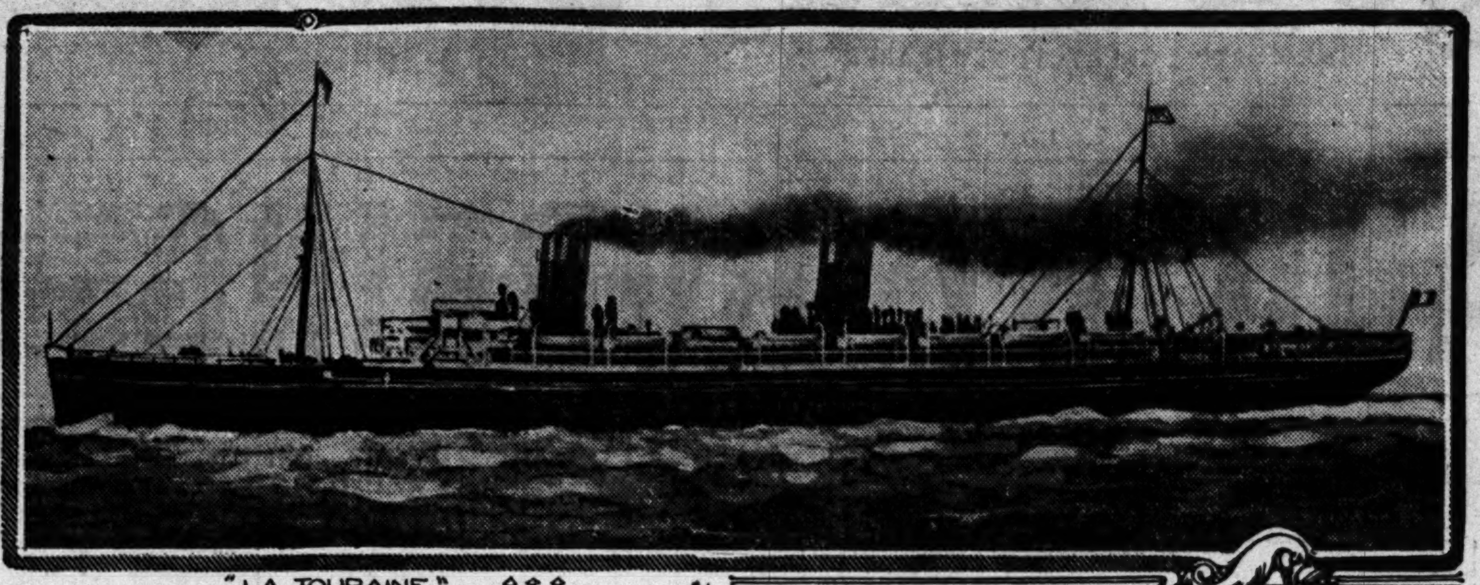
French Liner La Touraine Reported on Fire in Mid-Atlantic.



"LA TOURAINE"

BLAZE ON LINER REVIVES PLAN FOR SEA SAFETY

Two Means to Guard the Passengers and Crews Will Go Into Effect Soon.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—The interest of federal officials in the problem of insuring safety at sea was revived today when reports of the fire on board the liner La Touraine were received.

Two great moves which were designed to safeguard passengers and crew are pending. The seamen's bill, which was signed by President Wilson on Thursday, gives the United States authority to prescribe the safety equipment of foreign vessels entering American ports, but does not become operative until July 1.

The London convention for safety at sea was ratified by the senate in December, but it is not effective, not having been ratified by all the signatories.

Demand for Stricter Laws.

The echo of the Titanic disaster in 1912 was a cry from all over the world for stricter laws to guard the safety of passengers and crews at sea.

Senator La Follette reintroduced his seamen's bill and incorporated in it complete safety at sea provisions, including not only for a sufficient number of lifeboats but for their being manned by crews of able seamen.

The owners of vessels, both transatlantic and coastwise, combined in an attack upon the La Follette bill. It was passed by the senate, but the merchant marine and fisheries committee of the house rewrote it, making it much less drastic. Senator La Follette finally forced it into conference, from which it emerged less drastic than the original bill, but not as much in the interest of the shipowners as the house bill. The conference report was adopted by the house several weeks ago and it went through the senate a week ago.

Demands Made by Committee.

An inquiry by a senate committee resulted in these recommendations:

1. Sufficient lifeboats to accommodate every passenger and every member of the crew.
2. No less than four members of the crew skilled in handling boats should be assigned to every lifeboat.
3. The assignment of passengers and crew to lifeboats before sailing.
4. Two electric searchlights on passenger steamers.
5. Wireless operator on duty all the time and direct communication by telephone, speaking tube, or messenger between wireless room and bridge, so operator does not have to leave his station.
6. Better wireless apparatus required and legislation to prevent interference by amateurs.

The only recommendation which congress carried out in full was the passage of the bill relating to wireless telegraphy.

SEES GERMAN SUBMARINE SINK BIG MERCHANT SHIP.

Captain of Ryndam Describes Attack on Unknown Vessel in North Sea 30 Miles from England.

New York, March 6.—The attack on Feb. 24 of a German submarine on a big merchant ship that flew no flag was witnessed from the Dutch liner Ryndam in the North sea about thirty miles from the British coast, according to Capt. Van den Huevel of the Ryndam, which arrived here today from Rotterdam.

"We heard a muffled explosition," said the Ryndam's captain, "and when we looked a great white cloud of steam and smoke was rising from the ship. The steamer had been struck amidships. We stopped and prepared to lower our lifeboats, but we saw the merchantman lower its own boats and some of its crew go over the side.

"Then came the vessel's wireless calls for help. In ten minutes a British destroyer steamed alongside and began searching for the submarine. The destroyer signaled that no assistance was needed and advised us to proceed on our way cautiously.

"The merchantman apparently was sinking when we left. It had developed a sharp list to port. We could not make out its name and it carried no flag. It was a vessel of about 6,000 tons."

GERMANY HALTS ITS BLOCKADE

Delay in Attack May Be a Move to Win Favor of Neutrals.

BY J. W. T. MASON.
[Written for the United Press.]

New York, March 6.—The quiet of German submarines in the new war zone about the British Isles has been the central fact of the week's war news. It is probable that several of the submersibles have been sent to the bottom, but this cannot readily account for the sudden cessation of Germany's new warfare on British merchantmen.

German statesmanship may have concluded that it is better to keep the submarines quiet until the neutral answers to the British embargo policy become known. Further torpedoing of British merchantmen might strengthen Great Britain's position in her controversy with neutrals, while otherwise neutral protests against Great Britain's unofficial blockade may be more effective than submarine raids in securing for Germany the food and raw materials she wants.

Dardanelles Holding Out.

The allied warships have made little progress during the week's bombardment of the Dardanelles fortifications, notwithstanding extravagant reports from Athens and Rome have been in circulation indicating remarkable gains by the warships and successful maneuvers by a large allied army on the Gallipoli peninsula.

The reported intention of Russia's Black sea fleet to force the Bosporus and reach Constantinople unaided, is unbelievable. The Bosporous is eighteen miles long, is heavily fortified, and is only from one-third to one and one-half miles wide. If the Slavs overcome these handicaps they will win the highest honors of the war.

Fighting on Eastern Front.

Unofficial dispatches from Petrograd describing the Austro-German campaign in eastern Galicia and the Carpathians as collapsing, are not confirmed. It is evident that an intense struggle is proceeding for control of the Dneister river and the Slavs are holding the important highway crossing at Halitz and the railway crossing a mile and a half to the east. Beyond this fact there are no reliable details.

The Russian rally, which came after Von Hindenberg's victory in East Prussia, has decreased in violence during the week. The Slavs have been stopped some distance from the East Prussian border and their attempt to move forward along the northern bank of the Vistula has not been successful. At the same time the counter offensive of the Russians, although checked, has prevented the Germans making headway toward Warsaw on the north.

German Gains in Alsace.

German successes in Alsace have been the most important results of the week's fighting in the western war area. The Germans have regained a third of the territory recently won by the French, and a readjustment of the French Alsatian campaign must be made.

In Champagne, French efforts to reach the German line of communications from the southeast have continued during the week wth meager gains, which hold out scant hope of ultimate success. Elsewhere in the west little has occurred to disturb the hibernating trenchmen.

PORTUGAL SPLIT IN TWO NATIONS; NORTH SECEDES

Gen. Barreto Proclaims Self President of Section Which Leaves Republic.

LONDON, March 6.—Gen. Antonio Zavier Correia Barreto has been proclaimed president of the Republic of Northern Portugal by a congress of Democrats who have been in session at Lamego, according to a dispatch received today by the Fabra News agency from Madrid. This news reached Madrid by way of Badajoz.

The course of the republic of Portugal since its establishment five years ago, following the assassination of King Carlos, has been marked by political dissension and strife.

Reports of Royalist agitation from Lisbon have been more or less frequent and these latterly have been superseded by indications of another movement, the democratic or radical, which in the last few months has showed itself strongly opposed to the existing republican government.

There was an uprising in Lisbon Jan. 15 of the people against the military.

An attempt was made during the latter part of February to assassinate Alfonso Costa, a former premier and one of the leaders of the Democratic party. A 14 year old boy named Silva tried to shoot Señor Costa as he was boarding a train.

Red Cross Worker, Before Return to Europe, Appeals for Funds to Save Incapacitated Soldiers.

Funds to aid wounded husbands, brothers, and fathers of Belgium are asked in a statement issued yesterday by Mme. Marie Depage, who is in this country in the interests of the Belgian Red Cross Field hospitals.

Mme. Depage in her appeal says it will be necessary for her to return to Belgium in April. In her absence Dr. L. L. McArthur of 4724 Drexel boulevard, Joseph M. Cudahy of 1415 Astor street, and Dr. Cyril Vermeren, Belgian consul, have volunteered to forward gifts and supplies.

PREDICTS GIANT ZEPPELIN RAID

Expert Says Germans Will Descend on Britain in Fleets of Fifty.

New York, March 6.—[Special.]—How often has it been said that "the Zeppelins have not made good." There is one man whose experience and studies amply entitle him to a hearing, who declares the answer to the Zeppelin question is still to come, and he believes it will come soon. Not only that, but he believes the Zeppelin will vindicate itself in a raid on England.

The man who advances these views is Thomas R. McMechen, aeronautical engineer and president of the Aeronautical Society of America. His British company is now building for England five dirigibles of a new type—"Zeppelin destroyers"—for defense against the larger craft.

Conclusions of Aero Expert.

Briefly, Mr. MacMechen's conclusions are these:

The flight and weight carrying capabilities of the Zeppelins under all except abnormal weather conditions are proved and as certain and as dependable as the navigation of a steamship. A hurricane will wreck the latter as quickly as the former.

The wrecks of Zeppelins are printed and known. There are less than a dozen all told. The actual flights under all sorts of conditions run into thousands. These are not heard of.

The attacking Zeppelins will do their destroying with armor piercing guns rather than with bombs.

Raids by Big Fleets.

The raid will be not by three or four, but by a great number, not less than fifty, possibly by a hundred, accompanied by aeroplanes.

The high angle gun has been proved, even when used under daylight conditions, to be useless as a defense. Aeroplane defense is useless by night, which is the Zeppelin's best time for operation.

AUTHORITY CALLS BRITISH ACTION "LAWLESSNESS"

Prof. Charles Cheney Hyde Denounces Blockade of High Seas.

Prof. Charles Cheney Hyde of Northwestern universtay law school, an authority on international law, told the members of the Iroquois club yesterday, in an address delivered after luncheon in the clubrooms, that England's latest position on neutral shipping is one of "absolute lawlessness.

Prof. Hyde commended President Wilson highly and said he believed he held the opinion of all the people of the United States when he insisted that this country will back up the president "to a man" in demanding our rights as a neutral nation in the matter of shipping our products to the neutral nations of the world and even to the civilian populations of the belligerents.

"England's announcement of March 1," said the speaker, "is wholly untenable. It violates every precedent of international law of the last 100 years. There is not a work in the English language that denies to neutrals the right to furnish foodstuffs to neutral nations and even to the civilian populations of belligerents.

"England's position, that she will stop the importation of all foodstuffs into Germany from whatever nation is nothing short of absolute lawlessness.

Commends Germany's Reply.

"On the other hand, Germany's reply to our note on the blockade is commendable. Germany recognizes the principle which always has obtained in international law that no belligerent has the right to attack and sink merchant ships without first resorting to an investigation to determine whether such ships belong to belligerents

"Germany has agreed practically to every point set forth in the American protest against the blockade—to search vessels before an attack—provided England will agree to observe international law at this time.

"If England, instead of arbitrarily saying to the world that she will allow no foodstuffs transported to the civilian populations of belligerents, would go as far as Germany, our troubles would be about over. Both sides are at fault in their dealing with this government in assuming that their attitude toward us shall depend on what any one of the belligerents may agree to.

Against All Bias.

"The United States, regardless of what difficulties they are in over there, has the unmolested right to the high seas, and that right cannot be abridged, except it be in violation of international laws and all the precedents for which civilization has been working for a hundred years.

"Above every other thought of our people at this time should be our devotion to the United States."

U. S. NOTE CALLS ALLIES' POLICY PERIL TO TRADE

Belligerents Told That America Must Enjoy the Privileges of Home Industries.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—The American note of inquiry in response to the Anglo-French announcement to neutrals respecting the intentions of the allies to cut off trade with Germany and its allies was drafted at the state department today.

It is practically certain that the document will be in the hands of the American ambassadors at London and Paris in time for presentation to the British and French foreign offices on Monday.

The note to Great Britain and France, while described as an inquiry, will be sufficiently comprehensive in nature to constitute a complete statement not only of the views of the United States government toward the proposed policy of the allies but also will set forth the position in which this country will be placed by the threatened detention of all goods in transit to or from Germeny and its allies.

Hope to Shape Allies' Policy.

Developments abroad in the last two days have strengthened the view of officials here that it is the part of wisdom for this government not to await the forthcoming British orders in council before making representations to the French and English governments on the subject of the new policy.

Many indications are seen that the two governments are having difficulty in deciding upon the details of the proposed operations against trade with Germany, and it is believed that the American representations will be received before the orders are issued and may therefore have some influence in shaping them.

It was indicated today that, while the American note will set forth clearly the views of this government as to the extra legality of the allies' announced program it has not been drawn with a view to the complete overthrow of the proposed policy.

The object aimed at by these representations is to bring about concessions upon the part of the allies which will make the operations under their proposed program less ruthless than indicated in their announcement.

Must Assume Responsibility.

It will be shown to the allied governments that this government expects them to assume the usual responsibilities accompanying such acts if they propose to cut off all trade with Germany.

The menace to certain American industries which will be caused by preventing the importation from Germany of dyestuffs and certain other German products will be explained with the statement that if it is the allies' desire to achieve this end they should be willing to proceed in the manner recognized by international law—that is, a blockade of some or all of German ports.

The statement made in the British parliament indicating that British industries needing these and similar products shall continue to be permitted to replenish their supplies from Germany has been noted by officials here.

It is understood that the note to Great Britain and France will make it clear that the United States certainly expects that it shall enjoy all the privileges granted to English industries in this connection and to the same extent.

J. J. O'Connor, director of central states of the American Red Cross, with headquarters in the Merchants Loan and Trust building, yesterday received a telegram from the headquarters of the organization in Washington. It follows:

"Based on reports from abroad, the American Red Cross begs to announce the special need of donations of sheets, pillow cases for single beds, and of towels for use in hospitals of Europe. Supplies of this kind must be absolutely new.

"They should be addressed to the American Red Cross, Bush Terminal No. 19, Brooklyn, N. Y., with the boxes marked distinctly as to the contents. Chicago supplies should be addressed to the Pugh Terminal, 365 East Illinois street, Chicago, Ill."

Embassy at Washington Gives Out Statement in Regard to Firing Torpedo at Asturias.

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—The German embassy tonight issued a statement practically amounting to an apology for a torpedo attack on the British hospital ship Asturias on Feb. 1. The statement said:

"The German government is sorry to admit that the British hospital ship Asturias was attacked Feb. 1, at 5 p. m. The ship was taken for a transport conveying troops. Fortunately, the torpedo failed to explode.

"The moment the ship was recognized as a hospital ship every attempt at further attack was immediately given up."

URGES JAIL FOR RAIL LOOTERS

Receiver Lust of Frisco Would Put Roads on the Same Par as Banks.

J. W. Lust, receiver in charge of earnings and disbursements for the Frisco, who was the principal witness yesterday for the western railroad in the freight rate advance hearings before the interstate commerce commission in the Hotel La Salle, unfolded a plan for bringing back prosperity to the railroads, security holders, railroad employés, and for dealing with the rail looters. Receiver Lust was president of a St. Paul bank for twenty years.

"The interstate commerce commission and the various state commissions should establish the same system used in the control of national banks. The professional looters should be jailed.

Fate of High Financiers.

"During my career as a banker I saw the controller of the currency put a whole colony of bank presidents behind the bars.

"Now, regulation of the raiyways of this country by state and interstate bodies have come to stay. Every one realizes this. The trouble with the present situation is that the commissions, backed by public opinion, are now punishing the railroads, the operating men, for the sins of others. We do not get the looters. Do you know of a single railroad wrecker who is now in the penitentiary?

"The commissions should deal fairly with the railroads and not strangle them by cutting their income and driving them to ruin. They should allow them to make just enough to pay their honest debts. They should have experts to go over their books at irregular intervals and see that the money is being spent in the right way. Every single dollar should be traced with the greatest care.

How to Avoid Trouble.

"Then all this trouble that we are now having would be avoided. If some gambler should decide to buy control in one of our railroads he would suffer the consequences and the hundreds of innocent stockholders and employés would be untouched."

Receiver Lust explained that the Frisco is paying interest on but $92,000,000 underlying bonds, just one-half of the assessed value of the property. He testified that on Feb. 1 the railroad had but $27,000 in cash in its treasury to run a line of 5,000 miles.

"The railroad presidents," he said, "in the past have been afriad to tell the real situation existing in the railroad business, because they were nervous over their credit and afraid of Wall street."

Rail Accountant Testifies.

L. E. Wettling, accountant for the railways, presented statistical and financial data, based on reports of the railways to the interstate commerce commission, covering fourteen years of operation by the forty-one systems affected by the appeal, comprising sixty-four railways operating 98,000 miles of lines west and southwest of Chicago.

"While the investment in these railways," said Mr. Wettling, "increased 69 per cent between 1901 and 1914, net income has risen only 35 per cent. Return on investment in 1901 was barely 4.77 per cent. By 1914 it had fallen to 3.81 per cent."

GREAT NEEDS OF BELGIANS TOLD BY PROF. M'CLENAHAN.

Princeton Man Says Stars and Stripes Are Honored Because of America's Relief Work.

Princeton, N. J., March 6.—The needs, condition, and treatment of the Belgian people are recited in a report which Prof. Howard McClenahan, dean of Princeton university, today submitted to President John Grier Hibben of the university of his recent visit to England, Holland, and Belgium. Prof. McClenahan was sent abroad by the university authorities for this purpose.

In England and Holland Dean McClenahan found that Belgian refugees were treated with every kindness, and in both countries, he stated, every effort was being made to furnish employment.

Of general conditions in Belgium, Dean McClenahan said:

"The outlook for Belgium seems black as night. If America and the other neutral nations fail her she will surely succumb to starvation."

In concluding his report Dean McClenahan said:

"The gratitude of the Belgians to America is the most touching thing one can imagine. It is shown in many unmistakable ways. It is evidenced by exalted regard for the Stars and Stripes, which never goes unnoticed. It is expressed in broken tones of all classes of people whenever any opportunity offers."

JAPAN WILL RULE MANCHURIA ROAD

China Concedes Extension of Lease for 99 Years After Peking Conference.

PEKING, March 6.—At the conference today between Japanese diplomats and statesmen of China the Chinese republic conceded an extension for a period of ninety-nine years of the present Japanese railroad system in Manchuria.

The conference at which this conclusion was reached was one of a series inaugurated some two months ago, immediately following the Japanese occupation of Kiau-Chau, the former German concession in Shantung province. At these conferences Japan has been discussing its various demands made on the Chinese republic.

China has been contending for the retention of a clause permitting it to repurchase the South Manchuria railroad at the expiration of a period of thirty-six years from the date of the original lease of this line to Russia, but it now appears that its efforts have been fruitless.

The Chinese authorities are reluctant to grant to Japan the requests it is insisting on concerning land ownership and trading rights in China. This because of the condition of extra-territoriality which accompanied the presence of all foreigners in China will extend Japan's legal jurisdiction throughout South Manchuria and eastern Mongolia.

The Chinese are fearful that Russia, if these concessions are granted to Japan, will subsequently insist that similar privileges be accorded it.

At the Chinese-Japanese meeting held here March 3 China extended to Japan for a period of ninety-nine years the leases of the ports of Dalny and Port Arthur.

RUSSIANS CRUSH AUSTRIAN PLANS TO FREE GALICIA

Teutons, Beaten at Stanislau, Retreating in Bukowina; Germans Driven Back.

PETROGRAD, March 6.—The Austrian army of the Archduke Joseph Ferdinand has suffered a severe defeat in the fighting around Stanislau in East Galicia, the war office claimed tonight. The right wing, which advanced north from Stanislau to within three miles of the important Dniester river crossing at Halicz, is retreating south of the Dniester river, abandoning heavy guns and baggage trains and hotly pursued by the Russians, who recaptured Stanislau on Thursday. The Petrograd newspapers describe this retirement as a "rout."

The left wing of the Austrian army, according to dispatches printed in Petrograd newspapers, has been driven out of Nadworna, sixty-seven miles northeast of Czernowitz, the capital of Bukowina. This retirement imperils the Austrian right. The advancing Russians are making desperate efforts to cut off several Austrian regiments north of Stanislau and force their surrender.

Germans Lose on Both Wings.

Large numbers of Germans, engaged in the attempt to relieve Przemysl through the middle Carpathian passes, have been surrounded and made prisoners north of Uszok pass, according to the Russian general staff.

Having abandoned the offensive along the northern front, the Germans now are seeking merely to fortify the Russian territory taken in the advance from East Prussia and establish a defensive line. This line, roughly, parallels the border, extending from Simno to Seree, Augustowo, along the Bobr river and on to Mlawa.

The Russian successes in the Lomza district threaten to compel the withdrawal of the Germans from Grodno or imperil maintenance of their communications between these two portions of the German forces in the north.

Russian Official Statement.

The following official communication was issued today:

"On the left bank of the Niemen river the Germans have been driven back behind the railway station of Simno and also in the district of Leipouny, near Suvalki. The distribution of troops on the right bank of the Narew river shows no essential change.

"On the road in the direction of Lomza obstinate fighting continues. On Friday night we dislodged the enemy from a commanding height on the west side of the high road from Stawiski to Lomza. Near the village of Karwowo we captured seven machine guns.

"In the Carpathians the Austrians continue their futile attacks in the direction of Baligrod.

"In eastern Galicia we are continuing the offensive after having driven the Austrians from their fortified positions on the Bistrica river, where we captured 100 prisoners."

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, March 6.—The German war office today issued the following statement:

"Our entire war booty in the forest district northwest of Grodno and around Augustowo has been collected in spite of energetic Russian counter measures. Our troops which were employed for this task are now at our disposal for other operations.

"Northeast of Przasnysz a Russian attack broke down with severe losses to the enemy. Northwest of Plonak a Russian attack was also repulsed."

GERMANS TAKE BRITISH TRENCH

Berlin Report Tells of Gains at Other Points on West Front.

FIGHTING IS FIERCE.

BERLIN, March 6.—The capture of a trench from the British near Ypres and successes over the French troops at several points are reported in the statement issued by the general staff today.

"Southeast of Ypres," the statement says, "we made a counter attack and captured an English trench. An attempt by the French to take the conquered positions on Loretto heights failed. We took fifty French prisoners.

Repulse Champagne Attacks.

"In the Champagne district the French continued their attacks near Perthes and Lemesnil, but were repulsed.

"Near Perthes we captured five officers and forty French soldiers.

"In a counter attack we occupied the small wood north of Perthes and the Piro trench of their position near Lemesnil. The French attacks against our positions near Vauquois and east of Badonviller and north of Calles were unsuccessful."

French Official Statement.

PARIS, March 6.—The ministry of war tonight gave out the following official statement:

"In Belgium our artillery has executed effective firing on the heavy batteries of Westende.

"To the north of Arras, in the region of Notre Dame de Lorette, our counter attacks have continued to progress. At this point the Germans, who employed large forces, suffered a serious check.

"In Champagne, to the northwest of Beausejour, a German counter attack has been repulsed.

"In Alsace the progress made by us in the Vosges at Hartmanns-Weilerkopf extends over 325 yards of German trenches.

"On the evening of the 5th we repulsed a counter attack opposite Uffholtz and blew up an ammunition depot at Cernay. Last night we swept with our fire the enemy's advance post, who attempted to establish themselves on the Sillakeroff, east of Honneck."

CAROLYN WILSON IN BERLIN PRISON SIX DAYS AS SPY

Writer for "Tribune" Gets Little Food and No Rest; Calls German Officials Stupid.

out. For they assured me at the police bureau that an officer would come and get me in the morning and take me before the commandant.

I asked the club secretary to send me some food and books—neither of which by the way I was allowed to receive, and then I was led away to my cell after depositing my valuables with the jailer.

Women Attendants Cruel.

First I was stripped and searched while the women attendants stood around and made remarks about the disgrace of being a spy and wasn't I ashamed to be hiding under a false flag—this when my American flag was taken from my bag.

I got angry at that and told them what I thought of them. They then locked me in a cell so cold that even in the almost complete darkness I could see my breath—and since I could hardly speak as a result of the cold which I already had, I begged for a warmer cell and got it. This was the only request the women keepers granted me. On the whole, they were cruel, telling me tales of three months' imprisonment and always refusing to take any of my petitions to the director. The men, on the contrary, were uniformly courteous.

In my cell—the warmer one to which I was transferred—it was impossible to see anything. One could feel a bed and one stumbled over a stool. Quickly all idea of a comfortable room with a student lamp was banished from the mind.

Cell Clean but Desolate.

All night long I lay dreading to touch the coverlet of the bed, still entirely dressed, for fear I might come in contact with a straw mattress which had been there since time immemorial and fearing lest rats and cockroaches and worse were all about the cell.

But that would be a libel on German thoroughness. Nothing like an animal or insect was inside the cell, it was tolerably clean, and if the straw filled mattress and cover had been there forever, at least there was a clean sheet in which I pinned myself carefully each night after the first, as they do children in the nursery.

However, the beds there aren't built for sleep. They rather resemble the Alps, with deep hollows and high crests, the pillow leaks straw all over the place. My bed stood immediately under the window, so that when it is open the steam comes in and trains rush and roar and rumble past continually through the night.

Describes Prison Quarters.

Possibly you are wondering what the cell was like. Well, I could touch all four walls from the bed. That gives you some idea of its dimensions. The only other article of furniture was a little table in shape and size like a milking stool. The rules on the wall said that you were to sit on this table between meal times and not lie on the bed, otherwise you would be punished.

Then on the wall was a sort of shelf with unesthetic tinware—a wash basin, big, a wash basin, small—this to eat out of—and as I had no eating utensils, I suppose one ate as nature intended. There was a tin mug for coffee, and that was all.

They took away every smallest thing from me. I had absolutely nothing to do all day long. I simply lay there, listening to the shuffle of the slovenly servant—one of the prisoners—in the hall, the tantalizing dangle of keys near by, the faintly distant ring of the 'phone—perhaps it could be to say I was free.

And every once in so often, silently, creepingly, some one would come unheard to the cell and the covering would be lifted from the peephole, and the only warning I would have that some one was near was the peering eye, which would be immediately withdrawn if I observed it.

Nothing to Do All Day.

Think what it means to have nothing to do all day; to lie there without communication with the outside world; not to be able to see out the window; to see no one the livelong day.

On Monday some of my things came from the club, a brush and a nail file, which they promptly took away from me—I might saw my way out with it—my soap box, a buffer—O, yes, and my tooth brush.

It was dark when they came. I was already in bed. One is punished if one is not in bed by 6 p. m., even as one is punished if one is not up at 6 a. m. Do you know, I felt those things over in the dark, and I cried over them. As simple a thing as a buttonhook, on which I traced with caressing fingers the familiar inlaid monogram, could arouse that much emotion in me. They seemed like friends.

However, to return to the business side of the question. On Sunday I didn't eat any breakfast, nor had I touched supper Saturday night. Black bread and coffee out of a wash pail were served at both these meals. I didn't eat, for I said to myself, "O, I shall be out by 10 in the morning."

No one came, and finally they said, "Today is a holiday; be patient until tomorrow."

Sunday dinner came, a formless, unrecognizable mess, in the same wash pail, and I refrained after a glance, though I was really hungry by that time. The day passed somehow, and I lay through the twelve dark hours thinking, "Surely in the morning."

It was now Monday, and again nothing happened until I was taken downstairs and asked another thousand or so questions, all of which were faithfully entered in a ledger built extra large for the purpose. By this time I was eating sparingly at times of the food they brought me.

On Monday, at noon, they gave me permission to write to the consulate, where I had many good friends, and I sent that letter off by special messenger, and it was delayed until the next day at 5. The consul general's reply was likewise delayed eighteen hours.

Quizzed to the Limit.

Each day at 3, with irritating punctuality, they would call me downstairs to contribute another ten pages to the book. They asked me so many irrelevant, ridiculous questions that I used to sit through the séances with one silly idea in my head: "In a minute they are going to ask me if I have ever heard Anna Held."

I told them my every amusement since I had arrived in Germany, every question I had ever directed to any one, how much my salary was and how I received it, what my sentiments were toward the allies, if I played poker; had my paper sent me there to deny Mr. Bennett's stories?—and a thousand more.

But all this time people were not idle in Berlin. For some reason the charge against me had been lodged at the marine Amt, and every one who knew me was trying to find some way to release me. Our ambassador, Mr. Gerard, applied repeatedly for my release and vainly for permission to see me, only being granted that permission on the fifth day.

I was told I was a clever spy, and that these very things which appeared so harmless in my life in Germany—the concerts I went to and the quiet dinners at the homes of my friends—would be the things a clever spy would do to divert suspicion.

But at last it was settled, on the day after Mr. Gerard had sent the cable to THE TRIBUNE telling them to get Ambassador von Bernsdorff to advise his government of my integrity, and my release was arranged for before any answer could come back, and in spite of the fact that an officer from the Marine Amt had told me, as per schedule, "to be patient; that it would take another three days."

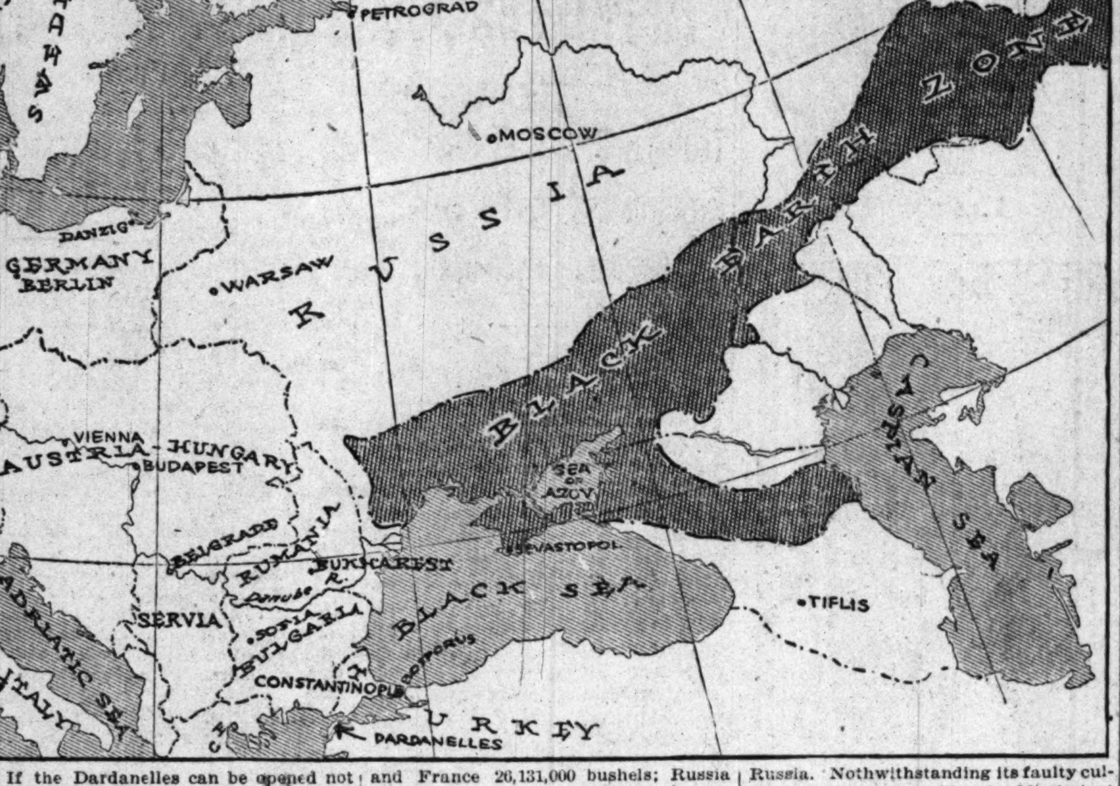
Forgives German Government.

I think they were finally convinced that they had made a stupid mistake. But did they apologize to me? Jamais de la vie, as they say in the good old town I am going back to as quickly as a train will take me. They were positively abject to the embassy, but I merely got a scolding and a warning.

I've forgiven the German government, even if I haven't entirely forgotten the experience.

Still, I shall hereafter never have to imagine again the anger, the helplessness, the despair of the prisoner. I shall not have to fancy what he thinks alone all day in his cell, what he dreads, what he longs for. Now I know.

One of Russia's Granaries to Supply Allies When Dardanelles Are Opened.



If the Dardanelles can be opened not only can the Russian battleships now in the Black sea be freed but the allies can be supplied with wheat from the great granaries of South Russia.

In 1913 Russia raised 962,587,000 bushels of wheat—these figures include ten governments of Asiatic Russia. In the same year the United States raised but 763,380,000 bushels.

The year before that the United Kingdom imported 203,322,000 bushels of wheat and France 26,131,000 bushels; Russia that year exported 96,868,000 bushels of wheat.

The black mold belt, which extends across southern Russia, is one of the most fertile as well as one of the most extensive arable plains on the globe. It owes its name to a layer of blackish humus varying in thickness on the average from one foot and a half to five feet.

This black mold belt stretches in one long band across the whole of European Russia. Nothwithstanding its faulty cultivation this region, like the Mississippi valley, is one of the world's immense storehouses of grain.

To the south of the black mold belt and bordering the southern seas are the steppes. The steppes with productive soil resemble the black mold fields and are full of rich promise; in other places they are made up of sand, stone, and salt, and apparently will ever be unfit for producing good crops.

BRITISH FLEET POURS SHOT INTO FORT AT SMYRNA

forts exploded. None of the vessels was damaged."

HISTORY OF OPERATIONS.

The following announcement concerning the operations of the British fleet, which is attacking the Dardanelles in cooperation with French warships, was made tonight by the admiralty:

"Further reports have now been received from Vice Admiral Carden concerning the operations on March 3 and subsequent days.

"No action was possible on March 3 until 2 p. m., when, although the weather was still unfavorable, the Irresistible, Albion, Prince George, and Triumph resumed the attack on Fort Dardanos and the concealed guns in this neighborhood. These were less active than before and were dealt with by the ships with more certainty.

"A useful seaplane reconnaissance located several encampments and two permanent batteries.

LANDING PARTIES WIN.

"On March 4 the weather became fine, and sweeping and bombardment operations within the straits continued steadily. Meanwhile demolition parties, covered by detachments of the marine brigade of the royal navy division, were landed at Kum Kaleh and Seddil-Bahr to continue the clearance of ground at the entrance to the straits.

"The party at Seddil-Bahr discovered and destroyed four Nordenfeldts. Some skirmishing ensued on both banks, and the enemy was found to be holding villages in force.

"On this day, also, farther down the coast, the Sapphire silenced a battery of field guns north of Kikili, in the Gulf of Adramyti, and the defenses of Besika were shelled by the Prince George.

"The following casualties were sustained on the 4th: 19 killed, 3 missing, 25 wounded.

Queen Elizabeth Kept Busy.

"On March 3 the attack was begun by indirect fire from the Queen Elizabeth upon the defenses at the narrows. This attack was supported, in dealing with the howitzers, by the Inflexible and the Prince George.

"The fire was confined to Forts Rumilieh, Mejidieh, Hamidieh No. 2 and Namazieh, which are armed as follows: Fort J., two 11 inch guns, four 9.4 inch; five, 3.4 inch; Fort L, two 14 inch; Fort T, one 11 inch, one 10.2 inch, eleven 9.4 inch, three 8.2 inch, three 5.9 inch.

"The Queen Elizabeth fired twenty-nine rounds with satisfactory results. The magazine in Fort L, which is an important fort armed with the best and heaviest guns, blew up. Two other forts were damaged.

"The fire of the Inflexible and Prince George was observed from inside the Dardanelles by the Irresistible, Canopus, Cornwallis, and Albion. Although these vessels were much fired at by concealed guns, they were not hit.

Bombardment of Smyrna.

"On March 5 also the commander in chief of the East Indies, Vice Admiral Sir Richard Peirse, arrived with a squadron of battleships and cruisers off Smyrna. A methodical bombardment of Fort Yenickale was carried out during the afternoon for two hours. Considerable damage was inflicted on the fort and there were two heavy explosions, apparently magazines.

"The Euryalus, which flew the flag of the vice admiral, shot with remarkable accuracy from its after 9.2 guns. The fire was not returned.

"Bombardment at closer range has now begun, weather conditions being good.

"Reduction of the Smyrna defenses is a necessary incident in the main operations."

Turk Official Report.

CONSTANTINOPLE, via London, March 6.—The following official statement was issued here this evening:

"Yesterday evening the enemy's fleet, under a strong fire, attempted to land troops at some points on the coasts near Seddil-Bahr and Kum Kaleh, out of range of our artillery. At first we let the enemy proceed, but later we replied to his fire.

"Sixty enemy soldiers who disembarked near Seddil-Bahr fled to their slopes and retreated, leaving behind twenty dead and wounded. Four hundred enemy soldiers who came ashore near Kum Kaleh were driven away, losing some sixty dead and wounded. We lost six dead and twenty-five wounded in both fights.

"After yesterday's failure the enemy's fleet divided into several parts and bombarded the open and undefended ports of Dekili, Sarmsak, and Avalik, on the Aegean sea.

"Two airmen who flew across the Gulf of Saros fell into the sea. The aeroplane disappeared in the water."

GERMAN INTERESTS WITH U.S.

Washington, D. C., March 6.—Germany has asked the United States to care for its diplomatic interests in Constantinople should the allied forces occupy the capital of Turkey.

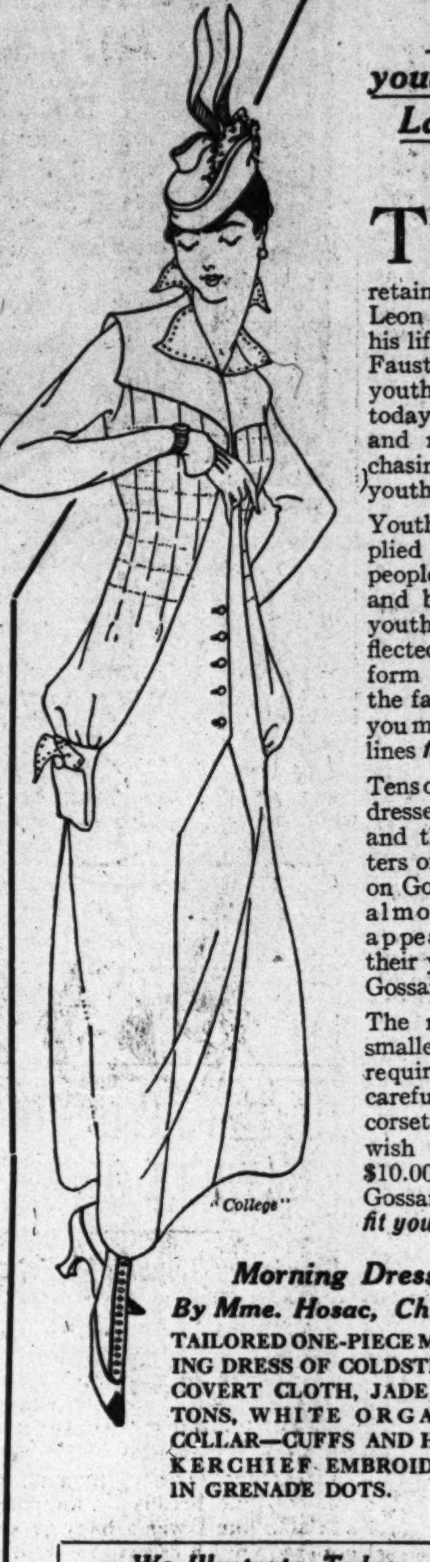
Ambassador Morgenthau has been instructed to assume that duty when the German minister to Turkey leaves with the Ottoman government for Eskichehir, the newly selected temporary capital for the porte. The minister is arranging to place the German legation in charge of the American ambassador.

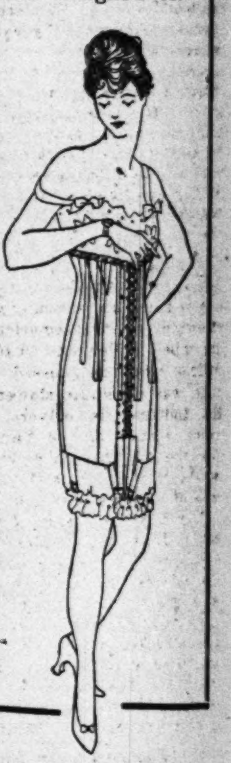
There is every indication from the official dispatches received here both at the Turkish embassy and the Washington government that the Ottoman forces have made extensive preparations to defend all approaches to Constantinople.

Ambassador Morgenthau is arranging a neutral zone for foreigners should the fighting touch the capital. If there is a battle in the city he will reside in that zone, preferring to care for the various diplomatic interests in his charge in the capital while one of the secretaries of the American embassy accompanies the Ottoman government.

Russ Army Steel Order in U. S.

Johnstown, Pa., March 6.—An order for 46,500 tons of steel valued at $2,000,000, to be used in the manufacture of shrapnel, has been received by the Cambria Steel company from the Russian government, according to an authoritative source.





Your Figure Tells Your Age

You can look youthful in a Front-Lacing Gossard Corset

THE wisest economy is to spend most on those things which help us to retain our youth. Ponce de Leon traveled far and gave his life in his quest of youth. Faust bartered his soul for youth and millions of women today spend countless hours and much money vainly chasing this phantom—youth.

Youth is no longer a term applied to children and young people. Youth means health and beauty at any age. A youthful appearance is reflected in the form first. The form tells age quicker than the face—so to keep young you must consider your figure lines first.

Tens of thousands of the best dressed women in Chicago and the principal style centers of the world now depend on Gossard Corsets for their almost perpetual youthful appearance. The cost of their youth is a front-lacing Gossard Corset.

The new mode of slightly smaller waist, higher bust, requires a Gossard Corset carefully fitted by a trained corsetiere. At the price you wish to pay, be it $5.00, $10.00 or $25.00, there is a Gossard model designed to fit you.

Pillsbury's

No other bran can take the place of Pillsbury's Health Bran. The delicious, nut-like flavor of its crisp, coarse, toasted flakes reflects its fundamental superiority.

It is more effective than any other bran in its internal cleansing effect because its flakes are larger. It keeps and is always clean, sweet, fresh and wholesome because of the secret sterilizing process perfected in the Pillsbury Laboratories.

Health

And if you like good eating—well you sure will insist on muffins, cookies and bread made from Pillsbury's Health Bran.

You may not need bran for its medicinal effect but everything in you that appreciates good things to eat will give "three rousing cheers" whenever the oven yields a pan of bran muffins—fragrant, golden flowers of cookery.

Bran

15¢ FOR THIS BIG PACKAGE

Dr. W. A. Evans and Miss Jane Eddington, health and food experts of The Tribune, have constantly urged the more general use of bran to eliminate constipation and to promote the general health. Their advice is backed up by every other authority. An overwhelming mass of evidence testifies to the efficiency of bran as a laxative. For these reasons the great House of Pillsbury has devoted its vast resources to the production of a bran that is beyond criticism both for medicinal uses and for cookery. Buy it and try it TODAY.

BURKE WEAKENS AS NEW WITNESS SHATTERS ALIBI

Former Convict Is Positively Identified as Man Seen Near Spot of the Murder.

Aurora, Ill., March 6.—[Special.]—The day went badly for Clarence Burke, former convict and drug "fiend," held for the murder of Emma Peterson. Chief Michels sprung his star witness. Edward Utterback identified Burke positively as the mysterious "man in gray" seen on the night of Feb. 25 two blocks from the spot where Miss Peterson was found clubbed to death fifteen minutes later.

The tangled alibis set up for Burke by his relatives and friends were conceded to have been damaged.

"The evidence against Burke grows stronger every hour," said Chief Michels late tonight. "Since the identification by Utterback two other witnesses have come to me offering evidence which greatly aids our case. If everything pans out it looks like it would go hard with Burke. But I am making sure of everything. I don't want to accuse an innocent man."

Burke's Nerve Weakens.

The identification by Utterback, though Burke denied he ever had known the witness, weakened the prisoner's nerves. At midnght he verged on collapse. Deprived of his enslaving drug, he has dozed off into fitful naps even while officials have been questioning him.

Burke in his solitary cell in the police station was confronted by Utterback, who said he had known Burke for several years and made no mistake when he said he saw him loitering along Oak street, a block west and a block south of the scene of the murder.

Will Re-enact Murder Scene.

Utterback is the first of four witnesses who will be asked to identify Burke on the program of Chief of Police Frank Michels to break down the contradictory alibis furnished for the "dope fiend" by his friends and relatives. The police chief declared he would reënact the murder scene as it is supposed to have taken place in an effort to have the woman who saw the murderer walk away from the scene place Burke as that man.

"I went to call on my wife," said Utterback, "from whom I have separated, and I was just coming out of the door when I saw Burke strolling along. That was on Oak street, between Spruce and Walnut streets. I said, "Hello, Clarence," but he did not answer. He grunted and threw his cigaret over the fence along the sidewalk. He wore a gray overcoat and a dark hat."

Witness Challenges Burke.

In the police station Burke denied knowing Utterback.

"What is the use of your saying that?" asked Utterback. "You know I've known you for six or seven years. I used to play cards with you in Jungle's saloon, and you know it."

Who the two witnesses are that saw Burke after he is supposed to have left Utterback and walked to the corner fifty feet away Chief Michels refuses to make public. The two supposed to be women will be asked to identify him tomorrow.

Mrs. Elizabeth Calkins, who saw a man walk from Miss Peterson's body, which lay across the street from her home, will again be asked to look out of the window of her home and compare Burke with the man she saw. Her description of that man corresponds generally with Burke's.

Another Woman Witness.

Another witness with whom Burke will be confronted is Mrs. Will Henderson, the wife of one of the wealthiest men in Aurora.

The alibi professed by Burke is that at the time of the murder he was across the Fox river in the home of Mrs. Lizzie Tiffany, with whom he had just returned from Montgomery, Ill. His mother, Mrs. Hattie Burke, at first said he was home sick.

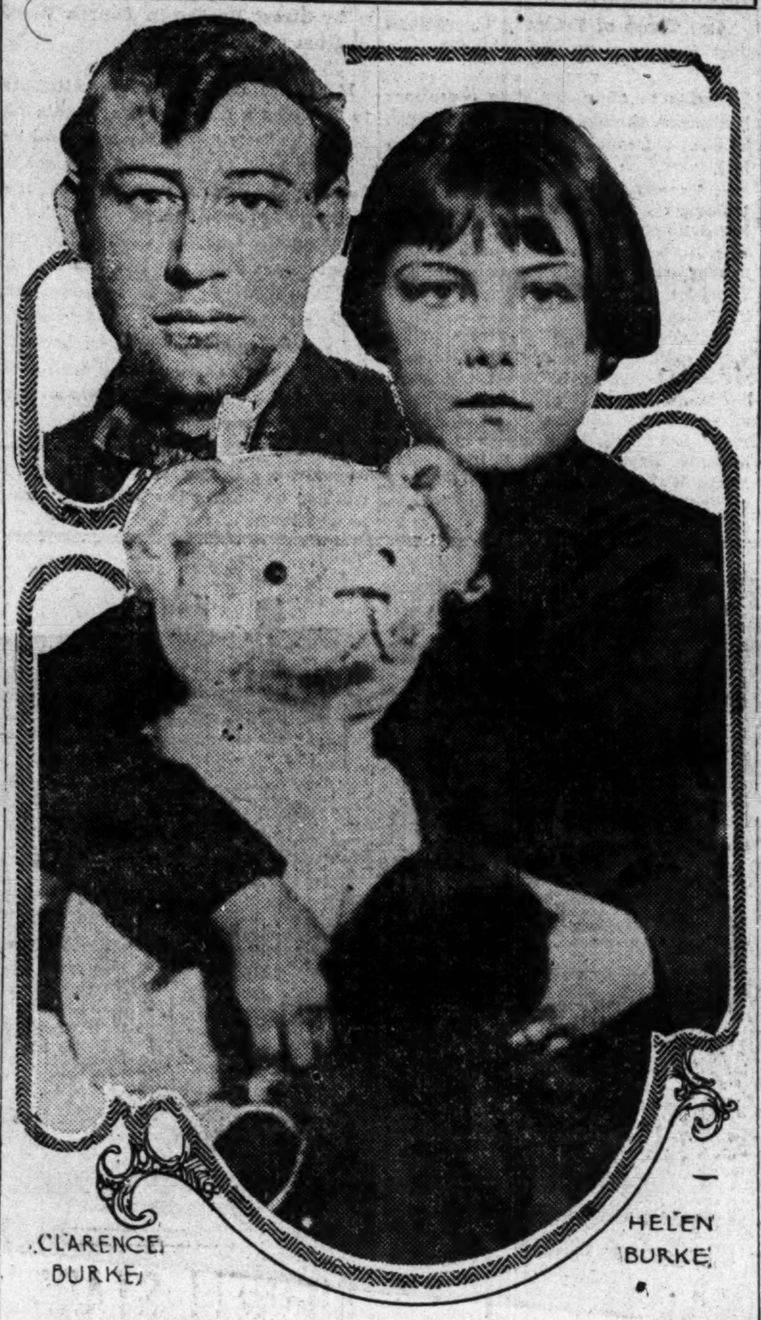
The identification by Utterback and the two men who saw Burke in a saloon three blocks from the scene of the murder shortly after 9 o'clock and an hour before Miss Peterson's body was found is said to discredit his alibi.

Burke's Brother's Story.

Burke's brother Harold, also a "dope" fiend, said Burke came into the front room of his home at about 10 o'clock and threw off his hat and coat just as the police patrol passed. Later Harold said he must have been mistaken when he said this. His first assertion, it is pointed out, would corroborate the statement of other witnesses.

In corroboration of the charge that Burke was acquainted with "Prof. Vail," the missing clairvoyant and "dope" distributer, whose apartment Miss Peterson left shortly before her death, a number of empty bottles similar to those in which the "professor" sold heroin were found in his home by a TRIBUNE reporter.

Murder Suspect and His Daughter.



MANAGER OF PAINT PLANT INDICTED AS HOLDUP MAN.

Philip T. White of Masury & Son, Brooklyn, Charged with Attempted Robbery Last August.

New York, March 6.—Philip T. White, manager of the big paint establishment of John W. Masury & Son, in Brooklyn, and member of several Brooklyn clubs, was held today in $10,000 bail to answer three indictments returned against him by the Kings county grand jury.

He is charged with attempted robbery, attempted grand larceny, and assault in connection with the attempt to hold up and rob two employés of the Sackett & Wilhelms company of $9,500 Aug. 7 last.

His employers asserted their belief in his innocence, and said that they were arranging to obtain bail for him.

When White was arraigned today he pleaded not guilty and was remanded to jail. His attorney, John S. Bennett, made a statement saying he believed White innocent of the charge and that he thought the police had made a mistake.

DARNELL IN JAUNTY SPIRIT ARRIVES IN MILWAUKEE.

"Marrying Parson" Faces Mann Act Trial Monday—At Peace with Father.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 6.—James Morrison Darnell, the "marrying parson," was the picture of jauntiness when he arrived in Milwaukee this afternoon to stand trial on a charge of white slavery. He looked more like a college boy than a preacher.

Accompanied by his father, Milton H. Darnell; his Chicago attorneys, Richard J. Cooney and John A. Verhoeven, and United States Marshal Weil of this city, Darnell alighted from a Northwestern train and walked from the station to the county jail.

Darnell will be arraigned before Federal Judge Geiger Monday morning.

"After all my troubles are over, Ruth and I shall marry again," said Darnell. "When I am free I would like to join the Red Cross and go to Europe. For months I have been yearning to become identified in the work abroad. If I go, I shall take my wife with me and join the allies."

CALLS FOR SUBURB'S BOOKS.

Berwyn Treasurer Subpœnaed and Ordered to Bring Financial Records to Court.

A subpœna duces tecum for the books of the village treasurer of Berwyn was issued yesterday at the request of Assistant State's Attorney Raber. Complaints were made to the state's attorney's office that Albert A. Adams, the treasurer, kept two sets of books and refused to submit his books for an audit on the order of the village trustees.

Steals Peanut Vending Machine.

A thief stole a penny vending machine from the Evanston station of the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric line yesterday. The machine, valued at $8.50, was found later a couple of blocks away. Ninety-five pennies and $1.50 worth of peanuts had been removed from it.

HUSBAND CLEARS 'SOCIETY MATRON BLACKMAIL CASE'

Wife Victim of Plain Swindle in Havana, Says M. L. Popple, Salesman.

Word has been sent out from detective headquarters for the arrest of "Jack" Gordon, alias "Doc" Waterbury, Harry J. Harvey, Robert Johnson, and J. Malcom Stuart on information signed by Mrs. Josephine Popple of 2017 Prairie avenue on a charge of operating a confidence game.

Whereby is cleared up the mystery of the "con" man who was supposed to have got "$20,000 worth of jewels from a Chicago society matron on a blackmail scheme."

"That story about the $20,000 jewel blackmail scheme was a 'stall' by the detectives to hide the real facts in the case and give them time to locate Gordon," Marvin L. Popple, husband of the woman who filed the complaint against Gordon before Municipal Judge Sabath on Feb. 25, said yesterday.

Simple Confidence Game.

"The story of how Mrs. Popple was swindled out of $300 by Gordon is that of a simple confidence game," continued Popple. "My wife went to Florida for her health last January. On the train south she met some friends from New York. They induced her to go to Havana, Cuba. When she was ready to return to Chicago she had difficulty in cashing a draft for $300. A Mr. Gordon, who said he was the son of a wealthy Chicago manufacturer and who stayed at the same hotel with Mrs. Popple's party, offered assistance in getting money from an express company by sending her diamond ring C. O. D. to Chicago.

"This suggestion was adopted and Gordon took the ring, procured an express receipt, and gave Mrs. Popple $100. Then the party came back to the states. I was away when Mrs. Popple returned. Gordon appeared a few days after her arrival and said he had the express ticket calling for the payment of $105.

Offers to Aid Again.

"She did not have that much currency, but said she would have her $300 draft cashed. Gordon offered to attend to this for her.

"That was the last seen of Gordon, the ring, or the draft. I employed Burns detectives on the case as soon as I returned. I traced Gordon to the Stratford hotel, but could not get a warrant for his arrest, as it was primary day and the courts were not in session. On Feb. 25 we did procure a warrant, but Gordon apparently had heard of our efforts and left the city. We hope to locate him in Havana."

Popple is employed as a salesman for the Cooper-Hewitt Electric company, with offices at 215 Fisher building. He gave his home address as 2017 Prairie avenue. The proprietress of the boarding house at that address said the Popples had not lived there for several weeks.

HOW DID THE POLICE DO IT?

Victim of Robbery Goes to Station and Finds One of Holdup Men There!

As William Cooper, a driver for the Boston store, was leaving a house at 710 South Claremont avenue last evening he was held up by three armed men and robbed of $12. He drove to the Thirteenth street police station. The sergeant was just finishing his entry on the blotter when a group of police came in with a prisoner.

"That's one of 'em!" yelled Cooper. "How did you get him so quick?"

A pedestrian had seen the holdup and followed the gunmen, meeting Policeman William Maher on the way. Maher ran after the holdup men, firing his revolver, and frightened one of them into stopping.

BOY AVIATOR'S HIGH JINKS SCHEDULED FOR TUESDAY.

Art Smith Will Loop Loop at Night Over Grant Park with Machine Ablaze with Fireworks.

Chicago will be treated to some free aerial high jinks next Tuesday. Art Smith, the boy aviator who holds the world's aeroplane loop the loop record, will make two freak flights above Grant park, one at 12:30 o'clock in the afternoon, the other at 8 in the evening.

In the afternoon Smith, who is 21 years old, will try to break his record of sixteen successive "loops." In the evening, just to show what he can do, Art is going to make some loops at night, 2,500 feet in the air, with fireworks spouting from the planes and tail of his machine.

Smith's object is not so much to amuse blasé Chicago as to impress members of the national organization of state fair managers, who meet in convention here Tuesday. He performed his night loop in New Orleans a couple of weeks ago.

RAID ON PALM BEACH CLUB PERILS 17 PROMINENT MEN.

Grand Jury to Take Evidence on Alleged Gambling at Club Following Futile Inspection There.

Palm Beach, Fla., March 6.—[Special.]—Seventeen men—some of them of national reputation—have been subpœnaed to appear before the grand jury, it is reported, as a result of a raid last night on the Beach club.

The raid on the club, of which John R. Bradley, one of the best known sporting men in the country, is owner, accomplished nothing except the arrest of Bradley and his brother Edward.

The raiders sought evidence of gambling, which Theodore Bauer, a detective, had sworn to in warrants. Dancers occupied the space alleged to be used for roulette wheels and hazard tables.

Residents of Morgan Park, which was annexed to Chicago early in 1914, are protesting against paying taxes at the rate of $8.37 on the $100, which is $3.05 more than the Chicago rate. Attorney L. S. Bailey and John Herriott have been retained to take the issue into court.

MEAT CHEAPER; SOME RETAILERS HOLD UP PUBLIC

Decreases of from 1 to 3 Cents a Pound Caused by Three Developments.

Are you paying less for meat now than you did a year ago? If not, you should ask the butcher why. Wholesale meat prices have been steadily dropping for more than a month.

Refrigerating warehouses are said to be filled to capacity and stock raisers are rushing their animals to market for slaughter. Investigation has disclosed that some retailers have reduced their prices slightly, but the majority of them have kept them stationary. Some have even raised them.

Here Are Three Reasons.

There are three reasons for the drop in prices. The first and most important is England's blockade restrictions, which aim at cutting off the entire foodstuff supplies from Germany and Austria. Alfred R. Urion, representing Chicago packers, has been in England since January looking after the cases of cargoes of $8,000,000 worth of meat which have been held in prize courts.

Another reason is the high price of corn, which has caused the farmers to ship their stock to market to avoid the heavy expense of fattening. A third and more remote reason was the foot and mouth epidemic. Many stock growers rushed their cattle and hogs to the various markets fearing a spread of the epidemic to their herds.

Comparison of Prices.

A comparison of South Water street wholesale prices quoted yesterday with those of a year ago follows:

	Yesterday.	1914.
No. 1 ribs	14½	16
Loins	18½	21
Rounds	11½	12½
Chucks	10	12
Plates	8¾	9½

No changes in prices in a month have been made by W. B. Harvey of Harvey's market at Sixty-third street and Dorchester avenue, according to Mr. Harvey. Prices at the Fullerton meat market at 1507 Fullerton avenue were quoted at ½ to 1 cent a pound higher than two weeks ago. Reductions of from 2 to 5 cents a pound have been made in the last two or three weeks at Feilchenfeld Bros.' at 1280 East Sixty-third street and at Irwin Bros.' retail market at 5831 South State street.

GIRL USES CAPS TO BALK PURSUIT

Comes 600 Miles from Minnesota to See Aunt Who Remains Unfound.

HELD BY AID SOCIETY.

A girl whose only baggage was three stocking caps arrived yesterday in Chicago.

On the journey of 600 miles from her home in Bemidji, Minn., the girl had changed the stocking caps many times. First passengers on the train saw a little girl in a red stocking cap huddled among the green cushions; then they saw a gray head peeping out. When they looked again a brown stocking cap met their eyes.

Spied by Policeman.

When the train pulled into the Northwestern station the girl walked rapidly to the gates. A jovial policeman spied her.

"My name is Verena Blakeslee, and I am 14 years old," said the girl. "I came to visit my foster-aunt in Englewood, Mrs. F. E. Maxwell. My father is Dr. F. A. Blakeslee of Minneapolis.

Changed Caps to Thwart Pursuers.

"My brother told me that mother would punish me for remaining away from school one afternoon. So I borrowed $15 and bought a ticket for Chicago. I brought the stocking caps with me and changed them often, so that I would not fit the descriptions my mother would telegraph after me. My stepmother is cross to me and it is lonely in the country."

Everett L. Meservey, general secretary of the Travelers' Aid society, was unable to find the girl's foster-aunt in Englewood. A telegram was received from the girl's father at the detective bureau asking that his daughter be held for his arrival this morning. The girl is at the home of the Travelers' Aid society at 1429 Adams street.

ROBBED, WALKS; MAY DIE.

Woman Made Penniless in Picture Show Starts on Tramp Home and Falls in Snow.

A woman who gave her name as Fanny Billek and said she lives in Allis, Wis., complained to the police of the Desplaines street station Friday that she had been robbed of $125—all she had—in a downtown moving picture theater. She was despondent and announced that she was going to walk home.

Yesterday she was found lying in the snow by the railroad tracks in Cherryville, Ill., suffering from starvation and exposure. She was brought to the Cook county hospital. She is not expected to live.

NEW MYSTERY INJECTED INTO BANK LOOT HUNT

One Prisoner Insists Other Is a Stranger to Him, but the Police Hold Both.

Three more "brokers," who have made a business of exchanging the trunkful of Canadian $5 bills stolen from the Bank of Montreal's Westminster, B. C., branch four years ago into less hazardous forms of currency, are being sought by the police and private detective agencies.

While detectives were on the trail of the three, one of the two "brokers" already under arrest injected new mystery into the case. According to the police the prisoners, George Webster and John Bingham, are partners and have been working together for many months, carrying the stolen bank notes back into Canada and there disposing of them.

Bingham Stranger to Him?

But now Webster asserts that Bingham is a stranger to him.

"There's a big laugh going to come off," he promised. "This other man they've got I don't know at all. Bingham was one of the names I've used at one time and another. I'm Webster, right enough—and I'm Bingham, too."

Nevertheless, when Bingham was arrested Canadian bank notes identified as part of the Westminster loot were found in his possession. Moreover, his explanation of how he came to have them was identical with that offered by Webster."

"I won them gambling," he said. "Of course I wasn't going to check up on the numbers. Why should I?"

Webster Fails to Get Bail.

Capt. Stephen K. Healy of the West Chicago avenue station, who arrested Webster, was forced to book him to forestall habeas corpus proceedings. Webster, who is known among north side gamblers as a skillful "short card man" and to the police as a confidence operator, was unable to get the $25,000 bonds demanded. Bingham has not yet been booked.

Officials of the Burns agency do not believe either Webster or Bingham had anything to do with the actual robbery of the bank, but are certain they have disposed of thousands of dollars' worth of the proceeds.

STAG TIPPED OFF AS RISQUE; WOODMEN SUSPECT RIVALS.

Mysterious Phone Message Says It Will Be "Notorious"—All Found Quiet.

Officials of Eureka camp, Woodmen of the World, are looking today for the man who tried to "queer" their annual stag party last night in the Haymarket theater building. At 6:30 the City News bureau sent out this "note to city editors":

> We have been informed by telephone that a body of men fraudulently posing as Eureka camp, Modern Woodmen of the World, will hold a "notoriously indecent" stag in a hall in the Haymarket theater building tonight. Our informant, who refused to give his name, declared that the Modern Woodmen of the World officials are endeavoring to stop the affair. We will have nothing further.

The doorman at the hall declined to admit a reporter for THE TRIBUNE, saying it was against the rules of the order, but pointed out a number of officials who were present, among them Evan J. Morris, state manager; W. J. Witte, camp commander, and J. A. Foley, camp clerk.

"Nothing 'fraudulent' about this," he said. 'It's just our regular stag, and it happens every year. There's a pretty hot fight on Mr. Morris, our state manager, though. We're supporting him, and some of the other camps are backing S. J. Andalman, a lawyer. Maybe some of them are trying to put us on the bum."

"EFFICIENT" FATHER A "PAL" OF HIS BOYS, SAYS SPEAKER.

Modern Watchword in All Its Phases Discussed at Congress of Mothers' Luncheon:

"Efficiency" in all its phases was discussed yesterday at the annual luncheon of the Illinois Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher association in the Hotel Sherman. Perry Patterson, an attorney, made the principal talk and criticized fathers for their methods of rearing boys.

"An efficient father," he said, "is a good 'pal.' He gives a substantial amount of his time to association with his boys. Fathers who neglect tutoring their boys in actual business are not efficient parents."

Mrs. William F. Young, vice president of the congress, talked on efficiency in the home. O. C. Doering, manager of Sears, Roebuck & Co., asserted that the efficiency in business over which there is so much clamor, is little different from that in properly regulated homes.

Among others who spoke were Charles W. Peterson of the board of education, Ella Flagg Young, and Dr. Nathaniel Butler.

Rescues Sick Man in Fire.

Thomas A. Walalce, 846 Center stret, Democratic candidate for alderman in the Twenty-third ward, was the hero of a fire in his building last night which drove five families to the street. He rushed to the third floor and carried out Dennis O' Connor, who is seriously sick. The loss was about $2,000.

SPECIAL SCHOOL NEEDED FOR MEN FOR MISSIONS

Behan Tells Problems Which Are Faced in Training Workers in the Field.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 6.—[Special.]—Warren P. Behan of Chicago, president of the Baptist Missionary Training school, was a leading speaker at this afternoon's meeting of the Religious Educational association. He presented valuable information on the work being done to train missionaries.

Many Problems Remain.

"This survey, incomplete as it is," said Mr. Behan, "presents certain very plain problems, as follows:

"First, a plain definition of the place and function of the missionary training school is needed, as against high schools and colleges on one hand, and theological institutions on the other.

"Second, a standardization of entrance requirements is needed, as well as more uniformity in the curriculum and length of course.

"Third, a curriculum should be constructed that will more largely eliminate short courses of only one or two hours a week."

A large meeting was held tonight in Elmwood Music hall. Rabbi Henry Berkowitz, chancellor of the Jewish Chautauqua society of Philadelphia, spoke on "The Rights of a Child to an Education." Two concluding sessions of the convention will be held tomorrow.

Chicago Men as Officers.

At the final massmeeting tomorrow night Graham Taylor of Chicago will speak on "The Church Fostering the Rights of the Child."

At the election today a number of Chicago men were named as officers, as follows:

Member of the board of directors for Illinois, J. W. F. Davies of Winnetka university, Ottawa, Ill.

Members of the executive committee, William Fraser McDowell, S. T. D., Methodist bishop of Chicago; Charles W. Folds, Richard C. Hall, Harry Pratt Judson, president of the University of Chicago; Lucius Teter of the Chicago Savings bank, the Rev. Dr. Herbert L. Willett of the University of Chicago. Abraham W. Harris, president of Northwestern university; David R. Forgan, Shaller Mathews, dean of the University of Chicago Divinity school; Loring Wilber Messer, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; Judge Jesse A. Baldwin of Cook county, N. W. Harris and Julius Rosenwald.

HIS DOUBLE LIFE ENDS IN A JAIL

LOSES JOB, LOSES ALL.

In a Morris chair in Coulter house at Twenty-first street and Indiana avenue last night sat a buxom, brown haired, brown eyed young woman with the bloom of the English hedgerows in her cheeks. She was sobbing.

In a cell at the detective bureau, with his head pillowed in his hands, sat a man thinking moodily. He was thinking of the last four years spent in a hegira with the English lassie which had led them over Europe and most of the eastern part of the United States. He thought of his wife and two children and aged mother out in River Forest, whom he deserted four years ago, but his thoughts for the most part were for the girl in the Morris chair at Coulter house.

All Settled—Not Quite.

Everything had been settled. His wife was to have divorced him, his aged mother had clasped the girl in her arms, and a marriage ceremony was to have been performed shortly. But when the war came he lost his job and the police began to pick up a trail of bogus checks which led them to a rooming house at 20 Bishop street, where both were taken into custody.

The man is Harry A. Ellithorpe, 38 years old, an experienced salesman in many lines. The girl is Doris Brandon, 23 years old, whose parents reside at 19 College Park terrace, Harleston, England. Ellithorpe brought the girl to this country from Paris, France, in September. Soon afterwards he lost his job. He confessed to the names of the persons he had defrauded in the last five months, and told the police he had meant to make amends as soon as he got on his feet. He had obtained a position as a salesman for a magazine and had made his first sale when taken into custody.

Victims of Bad Checks.

Among those he admitted passing worthless checks on are:

Mermingham & Seaman, paper manufacturers	$20
Burley & Co., glassware	15
Henley's restaurant	20
Hodge & Homer, hardware	20
Stevens & Maloney, stationers	10
Orr & Lockett, hardware	10
Dennison Manufacturing company	15
David Stein	10

The checks were drawn on the Colonial Trust and Savings bank, the Oak Park Trust and Savings bank, and other institutions in Chicago. The police say Ellithrope left a trail of bogus checks in other cities.

Ellithorpe was taken direct to the detective bureau and the girl to the office of Dr. Percy L. Prentis, chief immigration inspector, where she made an affidavit regarding her travels with the salesman. She will be held at Coulter house pending deportation proceedings, it is said.

Miss Brandon said she had come to America in 1909 with an English theatrical company, but had remained only six months and had gone back to her parents' home. In 1911 she went to Paris, where she met Ellithorpe, then in business with Roy Graves of Chicago. Ellithorpe promised to divorce his wife and marry her, she said. They went to London, where the salesman obtained employment with a moving picture concern.

Ellithorpe later returned to America and in September sent Miss Brandon money to come to Philadelphia. They went from there to New York, then to Albany, Buffalo, and finally came to Chicago.

"I investigated and found Harry and his wife never had lived happily, and we were to have been married as soon as a divorce was obtained," said Miss Brandon. "We had been living on nothing for the last few months. Harry tramped the streets in search of work. We were getting desperate. Many times he said he was sorry he had brought me to this country. One day he came to me with $10. He said he had borrowed it. He has many friends, and I believed him."

LOCKOUT OF LATHERS BRINGS SYMPATHY STRIKE?

Unions Threaten to Attempt General Tieup of Building Operations if Nonunion Men Are Put On.

Threats to tie up building operations in Chicago through a sympathetic strike followed a lockout of 900 lathers yesterday.

At a secret meeting of officials of seven building trades unions held Friday night in Bricklayers' hall, it is said, an alliance was formed to declare sympathetic strikes wherever strikebreakers are put to work to replace the discharged or striking lathers.

Downtown buildings under construction which will be affected by the combined strike and lockout include the Lumber Exchange, La Salle and West Madison streets; States building, West Randolph street and North Fifth avenue; Garland building, East Washington street and North Wabash avenue, and the building at East Lake street and North Wabash avenue.

EVEN CITY CAN'T VIOLATE FIRE LIMITS PROVISIONS.

Council Committee Holds Shed Built by Street Bureau in Fourth Ward Must Come Down.

If a private property owner attempts to construct a frame building within the fire limits the police department will be right on hand to stop the work and the building department will see that the structure is torn down.

Within the last few months the city street bureau constructed a frame shed in the Fourth ward yard at Twenty-ninth street and Lowe avenue. The inspectors for the building department reported it was a clear violation of the fire limits ordinance, and a "request" was sent to the police to have the work halted.

Somehow the shed was completed. Now, however, a subcommittee of the council building committee has decided it must be torn down.

Total, Feb. 1914, 7 cars.

February, one year ago, 7 cars. This same month this year, 36 cars. That tells the story.

It is but fair to say that one year ago we had but recently taken its representation. It was "new" to us and to many in Chicago. Now every one knows.

The growth in the Jeffery demand has been built entirely upon the strength of what this car has done here—upon performance.

Every one now acknowledges the fact of Jeffery leadership in value.

True, we lose some sales because we do not cut prices. Jeffery values are fixed. We lose some because now and then some one feels our price is too high. Many who last year thought this have returned this year and purchased a Jeffery. (We will give you their names if you wish.)

READ, PLEASE, THIS LETTER

Centaur Motor Co., Chicago, Ill. Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—Absolute satisfaction in every detail is the only term I could possibly use in describing my experience with the "Jeffery Four" purchased from you. From every point of view—style, finish, comfort, speed and stability—I consider the "Jeffery" at the head of the list.

In six months' time it has cost me not one cent for repairs, although I use it hard every day. It is a safe bet that I would not trade my "Jeffery" for any three thousand dollar car on the road.

Very truly yours, Dr. C. W. Messick.

WHY NO JEFFERY USED CARS FOR SALE?

And mark this—your investment in a Jeffery is secure. The famous Jeffery "4" which sold last year at $1450 are eagerly snapped up at $1000 to $1050 each, after a year of service. There are not enough such cars offered to go 'round. The relation of cost to value is correct in this Jeffery.

Your investment in a Jeffery, as proven by conditions existing right here in Chicago today, has a stability known to no other car, no matter what the claim, no matter what the price.

If security means anything to you—if getting the worth of your money in car, not talk, means anything to you, then assuredly you cannot afford to buy a motor car anywhere, at any price, until you see what this car has to offer you.

Centaur Service, of Course The purchase of a Jeffery car means Centaur Service, of course—the regular inspection, oiling and adjusting of your car twice each month—oftener if you send it.

All the Chesterfield models of Jeffery cars are now at our showrooms and we are ready to demonstrate the "proof of the pudding" when you are ready to be shown.

Jeffery "4"—$1450. Jeffery Chesterfield "6"—$1650. Jeffery Chesterfield "6"-48—$2400

Kewanee Smokeless Boilers Burn Soft Coal Smokelessly

Council has sounded the death-knell of smoky smoke-stacks. You've got to install a smokeless boiler in your new building. And as long as you've got to do it, be absolutely sure it's a KEWANEE SMOKELESS FIREBOX BOILER. Don't take anybody's name for it. Look at the boiler and read the name on it. Meantime we'll send you, on request, a list of buildings that have installed—and are installing—this matchless money-saving smokeless boiler. You'll be absolutely certain of your ground.

Imitations always cost less. And they always do less. Also they last less and save less than the original, high-grade article. You might save a few dollars by buying an imitation of a Kewanee, but think of the hundreds, and even thousands, that you are apt to lose because of less efficiency, lower saving-capacity and shorter life.

The Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler is an Emancipation for owners of buildings who are sending good money up the smokestack in smoke. Smoke is nothing but unconsumed fuel. Every bunch of black smoke means a bunch of good money gone to the dogs. The Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler is burning the cheapest grades of soft coal without smoke, in every city in the United States and Canada—wherever a smoke ordinance is being enforced. And the smoke inspection departments have approved them for burning soft coal.

The Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler will save you from 20 to 58 per cent on your present coal expense. If you own a big building, just think what this means to you. Your present big waste becomes a big profit, and that's what you're looking for. The Kewanee Smokeless Boiler has proved all these assertions in a countless number of cases—right here in your own city where you can get the accurate data at any hour you may want it.

The great majority of the new buildings now going up in Chicago have installed the KEWANEE SMOKELESS FIREBOX BOILER. When you read the list you will have a mighty wholesome respect for the Kewanee. The men who specified them, likewise every engineer, builder and building owner, know that as soon as a boiler is installed that will burn soft coal smokelessly, the fuel bill begins to take a tumble. So, to be absolutely sure, buy the KEWANEE. Don't run any chances. Don't lose the chance to save from 20 to 58 per cent. Write for the list mentioned, today, or telephone our local office for it.

Miss GLADYS BOND, Miss MILDRED MAGIE and Miss DORIS SHAW

A group of Chicago young women, debutantes of last season, are active in the Debutante Tennis tournament at Coronado Beach, Cal., where they are spending the season with their families. They include Miss Mildred Magie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ashley Magie; Miss Doris Shaw, sister of Mrs. Robert Tillson, and Miss Gladys Bond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Bond. Miss Lolita Magie, sister of Miss Mildred Magie, played last week in the semi-finals with Miss Eleanor Sears of Boston, who won two matches from her. Eighteen debutantes from the different cities are entered in the tournament.

FIGHT BREWING ON JUDGES TO BE CHOSEN IN JUNE

Nominations Next Week in Supreme and Circuit Districts Will Stir Up Politics.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., March 6.—[Special.]—State politics, Republican and Democratic, rapidly approaches the boiling point, due chiefly to the revival of the convention system by which the nominations for Supreme and Circuit judges are to be made.

At this stage of the campaign Justices Carter of the Chicago district, Cartwright of the Northwest district, and Farmer of the Vandalia district appear to be the three of the five sitting justices who will have no opposition in the party conventions for renomination.

Farmer Has Clear Sweep.

In the Second Supreme district Justice Farmer, Democrat, is to be renominated without trouble at the convention to be held in Pana. The Republicans see a chance to defeat him in June, they claim, and are preparing to nominate William F. Bundy of Centralia.

Justice Dunn, Republican, of Charleston, has a fight on his hands at the Republication convention to be held in Decatur. Edward Barry of Bloomington is his opponent.

What will happen to Justice Carter in the Seventh or Cook county district remains to be determined largely by the attitude which will be assumed by the Democratic county organization, controlled by the Hearst-Harrison wing.

Justice Watson, who succeeded the late Justice Vickers, is a candidate for renomination for the full nine year term. He is to be opposed in the Democratic convention by Thomas Webb of East St. Louis.

Instruct for Watson.

Mount Vernon, Ill., March 6.—[Special.]—The Democratic county central committee met today and adopted a resolution instructing the delegates to the supreme judicial convention April 8 at Carbondale for Albert Watson of Mount Vernon for Supreme judge.

Texas Women Meet Defeat.

Austin, Tex., March 6.—A resolution for a constitutional amendment for woman suffrage was defeated by the Texas house of representatives today, 90 to 32. The resolution needed 94 votes to pass under the two-thirds rule.

SUFFRAGE SESSION ON TODAY

Mississippi Valley Conference Opens in Indianapolis—Twenty-one States Represented.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 6.—The complete program of the Mississippi valley conference of suffragists, which will be held here tomorrow, Monday, and Tuesday, was announced today. Twenty-one states will be represented by delegates and each state also has at least one representative on the program. The question of political alliances will be taken up at Tuesday's meetings with Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout and Mrs. Antoinette Funk of Illinois as leaders of the discussion.

SWEITZER CLUBWOMEN DINE

Second Ward Workers for Democratic Candidate Hold a Jollification.

Members of the campaign committee of the Women's Second Ward Sweitzer club attended a jollification dinner at the Hotel Warner last night. Nearly 100 Democratic women were present. Mrs. Minona S. Jones acted as toastmistress, and the following topics were discussed: "What Shall We Do to Be Saved?" by Mrs. Harriet Taylor Treadwell; "Organization," by Mrs. Sara M. Hopkins; "The Business Woman in Politics," by Miss Sarah Gleeson, and "Full Suffrage for All," by Mrs. John Thompson. Music and special dancing completed the program.

Kill, the Gunman, Fined.

John Kill, a chauffeur who said he formerly lived at 510 South Ashland avenue but now lives on Washington boulevard, was fined $200 and costs by Judge Sullivan yesterday for carrying concealed weapons.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN FORM NEW POLITICAL SOCIETY.

Mrs. George Bass Heads Organization to Fight for Good Government—Not Rival of Old League.

Another organization of Democratic women came into being yesterday at a meeting in the Fine Arts building. It is called the Woman's Democratic Council for Good Government. Mrs. George Bass was elected president.

The new council will not be a rival of the Illinois Woman's Democratic league. The idea of the women is to make their organization similar to the Iroquois and Hamilton clubs. At present headquarters will be the Congress hotel. Many of the leaders in the movement are members of the Chicago Woman's club.

Other officers elected are: First vice president, Mrs. Jonas Hutchinson; second vice president, Mrs. Henry Solomon; recording secretary, Mrs. Helene Michelbacher; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frank J. Graham; treasurer, Mrs. A. C. Tenney.

NONPARTY PLAN CALLED FAILURE

City Clerk Says New Election System Is Farce and Unsuccessful.

CHICAGO HOPES FADE.

Chicago can never hope for a municipal nonpartisan election, according to the view expressed at a meeting of the permanent charter commission yesterday. Chairman Henry D. Capitain asserted the name "nonpartisan" is a misnomer.

"There is no such thing as a nonpartisan election," he said. "It's a myth, a misnomer; it ought to be called a single election."

The commission had just received a letter from R. E. Collins, city clerk of Cleveland, where the "nonpartisan" scheme has recently been put into effect.

Fails in Cleveland.

"The present administration," Mr. Collins wrote, "although elected under this scheme, is just as partisan as if it were elected under the partisan plan. My own personal opinion, if you care anything for it, is that the nonpartisan plan is a farce. I cannot conceive of its being put into actual, complete operation in cities as large as Cleveland or Chicago.

"The campaign under the first nonpartisan election was just as partisan as you could imagine."

Two Bills Drafted.

Ald. Theodore K. Long presented drafts of bills providing for the abolition of the party circle and column. If a candidate receives a majority of all the votes cast for all candidates for a particular office in the primary he is to be declared elected. If no candidate receives such a majority the two aspirants getting the largest number of votes must go before the voters at a subsequent election.

ROBBED ON WAY TO BANK.

Woolworth Store Manager Loses $127 to Holdup Men Who Overlook $300.

Charles C. Gallon of 1811 West Garfield boulevard, manager of the F. W. Woolworth & Co. 5 and 10 cent store at 4721-23 South Ashland avenue, last night was assaulted and robbed of $127 by two men as he was leaving the store to deposit the money in a bank a few doors away.

The robbers overlooked $300 which Gallon carried in his inside coat pocket.

Gallon ran to the New City station. While he was talking two men entered the saloon of James Leddy at 4252 Wentworth avenue, and fled, after taking $10 and firing two shots at William College, 4154 Wentworth avenue, a customer.

MAKES DIVORCE EASIER IN IOWA

Court Ruling Knocks Out Clause Which Demands Year Residence.

MAY STRENGTHEN LAW.

Des Moines, Ia., March 6.—[Special.]—Des Moines today was made a second Reno on the divorce question when Judge Utterback of the Equity division of the District court issued a divorce to persons who have not lived in this state a year.

The flaw in the Iowa law was turned up here today in the trial of the suit brought by John Dardis against his wife, Mrs Jean Dardis, for a divorce on statutory grounds.

The couple came to Des Moines from Waukegan, Ill., eleven months ago. Action for a divorce was started Jan. 30, when Dardis served notice that he was seeking a divorce. The petition followed in due form and the case came up for hearing. Dardis had little trouble in proving his charges against his wife, but the attention of the court was called to the one year residence law.

After a conference it was decided that the one year clause did not apply to those who are qualified residents of the state.

This ruling makes it possible for persons to come into Iowa and reside here one day in order to declare that their home is in this state. As quickly as the parties think that they can call Des Moines their home divorce action can be started. The entire procedings hang upon the fact of whether or not the defendant agrees to accept personal service.

Senator Francis of the senate judiciary committee and Representative Ring of the house have been notified of the matter and an effort will be made to patch up the law so that the one year law will be respected.

FLORIDA
the Land of Flowers Wants You
at $5000 a Year

Provide for the day when age begins to slow down your steps. Fortify yourself against that day while enjoying every minute of a glorious present. Give yourself, and those dependent upon you, a chance to become better acquainted with sunshine, health and happiness.

On the Gulf Coast of Florida, where the mean annual temperature (21-year record) is 71.2 degrees, you can attain financial independence while escaping the icy winds of winter and blistering summer heat.

In the Sarasota Bay District we have acres and acres of land rich in vegetable mold and certain chemical elements which classify it as combination soil—

A rare soil which grows grapefruit and oranges, vegetables and small fruits all at the same time with the same degree of certainty and perfection.

On this land today are wonderful grapefruit and orange groves 40 years old, some 20 years old, others 2 to 3 years old and still others just being put out. Between the trees are being raised top-price strawberries, watermelons, celery, lettuce, cauliflower and a large variety of other small fruits and vegetables.

On a few acres of this land you can gain freedom and accumulate wealth just as other men have done and are doing. You can trade a monotonous life for one full of interest, happiness and health.

While waiting for your grapefruit and orange trees to mature you can "farm between the trees" and thus more than pay your way. When your trees become your large source of income you can add profits by continuing to raise vegetables and small fruits. E. B. Tucker sold $522.00 worth of tomatoes from one acre. A D. Albritton cleared $524.60 net profit on ¾ acre of strawberries.

And you have a cash market for everything. Rail and water transportation. Shippers' protective associations. Twice daily express and freight service.

In the Sarasota Bay District there is abundant rainfall to mature all crops, but in addition anyone may have flowing artesian wells of pure, sweet water. These wells assure sufficient moisture in the event that the natural rainfall should happen to be insufficient when most needed.

Nature has paved the way for you by providing an ideal all-the-year climate, rich soil, abundant water. With this combination there is no limit to what you can do at Sarasota.

You don't sacrifice your social life. There are churches, schools, lodges—all that a modern town can offer. You get the same recreations that tourists travel for and pay dearly for.

We want you at Sarasota and will give you 10 years' time on your land payments. Nor will we permit you to purchase blindly; a year's time in which to examine your land and decide. You must be pleased or your payments are refunded with interest at 6 per cent.

Request Illustrated Book

which explains this LIBERAL, easy, safe payment plan. It also shows many photographic scenes of grapefruit and orange groves with vegetables between tree rows; scenes in town of Sarasota showing paved streets, modern stores, handsome residences, $25,000 school building and pictures fishing, hunting and other everyday recreations. G. O. P. EXPECTED TO WIN CONTESTS ON SENATE SEATS

Percival G. Baldwin and Henry W. Austin Are Given a Fair Hearing.

That Percival G. Baldwin and Henry W. Austin, Republicans, will be seated in the state senate before the end of this week—the first from the Eleventh, and the second from the Twenty-third district—was the opinion expressed yesterday by men who have been watching the developments of the contests in those two districts during the last eight weeks.

If the Democratic majority on the senate elections committee had any plan to decide in favor of one or both of the Democratic contestees—Thomas Byrne in the Eleventh and Joseph Strauss in the Twenty-third—it is said they have abandoned it in the light of the apparent legal election of Baldwin and Austin, the protest of press and public at the possible overturning of an election, and a demand from Democrats of note that the committee exercise the most liberal spirit in considering the facts.

One Hope for Democrats.

There is only one hope now for those who may still count on giving the two senate seats to Democrats. That is to throw out many ballots on technical grounds. For two days the Democratic majority of the subcommittees hearing the contests has been overruling those technical points, and it is expected the rest of them will be cast aside when taken up tomorrow and Tuesday. Then there will be nothing to do but to report to the senate in favor of seating Baldwin and Austin.

Republicans will be given control of the senate by the seating of these two members, but even the most partisan Democratic senator is said to be reconciled to that condition. The Republicans have the house, and if they are left in control of the senate they will be held responsible for legislation in the view of Democrats. Furthermore, it is said if the Democrats retained a majority, it is doubtful if they could be held together in a crisis because of factional differences.

Close Recount in Twenty-third.

Recounting of the ballots in the Twenty-third district closed with a spirit of good feeling. Senators Smith and Swanson, Republicans, without temper, criticized the Oak Park residents for their attacks on the committee, saying the suburbanites had acted without hearing the other side and insisting the committee had been governed by fairness at all times.

E. H. Pitkin and the Rev. W. E. Barton answered in the same spirit for the suburbanites, assuring the senators of their regret, if their course had been unwise. Then Mr. Barton invited all the senators to attend service in his church tonight, an invitation the senators promised to accept if they could make arrangements.

When the committee meets tomorrow it will take up the three remaining precincts which are to be recounted, including the fifth of Oak Park, the passing of which a week ago was responsible for the protest meeting held in Oak Park. On Tuesday the two subcommittees probably will sit together to hear arguments on disputed points, and it was believed at adjournment the committees would be able to complete their work in time to present their findings to the senate before the week-end recess.

Clerk Acts as Judge.

Charles B. Moritz, a clerk of election in the Twelfth district of Oak Park, acted as judge of election for a few minutes and signed his initials on thirty-three of the ballots cast in that district. This was contrary to the law, and he was summoned before the senate committee to explain why he had exercised that authority.

Mr. Moritz's most interesting admission under examination by the senators was that he indorsed his initials on the ballots because he was directed to do so by Mrs. Lulu E. Benson, a woman judge.

They met at a beach party last fall. She is a musician, he an orator. It was the charm of song and the eloquence of his plea. Their engagement was announced yesterday. She is Miss Elizabeth Jones of Hutchinson, Kas., a junior in the Northwestern school of music and a member of the Sigma Alpha Iota sorority. He is Adolph Wickman of Concordia, Kas., a senior in the college of liberal arts and a member of the Northwestern debating team. He is a master of the local Scribblers fraternity. Shortly after their meeting at the beach party Mr. Wickman found it was necessary in his debating work to take a course in voice culture in the school of music.

SEES REPUBLICAN VICTORY IN 1916 ON TARIFF ISSUE

John Hays Hammond Says War Has Vindicated Protection; Speaks in Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 6.—"There can be no doubt that on this one great economic issue—the tariff—the Republican party can rely for victory in 1916," said John Hays Hammond tonight in addressing a meeting of Republicans of Wisconsin who were assembled here for the purpose of inaugurating a movement toward party unity in the coming campaign. He added:

"The great economic lesson of this war is the complete vindication of the Republican protective tariff, and it impresses on us the fact that our fiscal legislation must be ever to keep unimpaired the absorptive power and the purchasing power of our incomparable market which consumes the products of American labor, amounting to more than twice the total export trade of all the nations of the world.

Demands Citizens Be Protected.

"To compete successfully with foreign nations we must secure for ourselves any advantage that can be derived for the most efficient exploitation of our national industries, fostered by constructive legislation at home and promoted by able commercial diplomacy abroad. We must guarantee to our citizens the same degree of protection as to life and property accorded to citizens of other nations by their governments.

"The pusillanimity of our state department in this respect is too well known to need further criticism. It is true that a sop was thrown out to public sentiment by the Democratic administration in a measure to establish a government controlled merchant marine, but the bill advocated by the administration was so meretricious that it failed to pass despite the exercise of every kind of undue influence on the part of President Wilson.

Asks Aid of Progressives.

"While I feel confident of the Republican victory in 1916, nevertheless the victory must be overwhelming in order to assure carrying both houses of congress, so as to be able to redeem the pledges of our platform. And, therefore, it is the paramount duty of the leaders of the Republican party to bring back to the fold our friends who parted company from us for a while, but are now ready to march with us against the common enemy.

"We and they have learned that a third party inevitably spells a Democratic victory, and, therefore, patriotism and self-interest, as well should dictate and will, I am sure, avail to convince them that we must all subordinate the minor political differences that have kept us apart, uniting again for the triumph of that cause which we all believe is consecrated to the welfare of the nation."

LAYS UNREST TO POWER HUNGER

G. W. Creel Talks on Industrial Conditions Before Jewish Society.

PRAISES CHICAGO FIRM.

The Hart, Schaffner & Marx experiment in adjusting differences between employers and employés is one of the most important contributions to industrial history in America, George W. Creel, magazine writer and economist, declared yesterday. Mr. Creel has followed closely the work of the federal industrial commission. He spoke yesterday before the Young Men's Associated Jewish charities on the causes of industrial unrest. He asserted that conditions are the result of a fight for power between labor and employers.

"The solution of the problem may come from Chicago despite deplorable labor conditions here," he said. "In your packing houses eleven years ago 38 per cent of the employés received less than 18 cents an hour. Today these same corporations are paying 68 per cent of their employés less than 18 cents an hour.

"Through its system of arbitration boards and trial courts, and through its admission of the principle of collective bargaining, Joseph Schaffner has evolved a great plan," Mr. Creel said. "He has made it possible for the worker to get a fair hearing when he has a complaint."

Labor Oppression Charged.

Mr. Creel believes that industrial unrest is the psychological result of the oppression of the working man.

"It is significant," he said, "that the latest of our big strikes have been in unorganized labor. In Colorado, for instance, of the 12,000 strikers only 2,000 were union members. And yet the charge was made that the strike was fomented by labor organizers from Indianapolis. It is a vicious lie."

Mr. Creel insisted that the laboring classes were in revolt against the control of the churches, the schools, the press, and the courts by the capitalists.

Calls Sermon a Lie.

"In a sermon circulated by the interests behind the operators of Colorado mines, delivered by the Rev. Mr. N. Dwight Hillis and called 'A Sermon for Young Men,' the statement is made that the social unrest in Colorado was caused by a quarrel over wages. That statement is a lie, pure and simple, as are most of the others in it.

"The cause of the unrest in Colorado was the refusal of the operators to alleviate the unbearable conditions brought about by the failure of the mine owners to obey the state laws for ten years past."

Following Mr. Creel's talk Frank Walsh, chairman of the federal commission, announced that his board's report would be ready next August.

COUNTY DEMOCRACY TO MEET DESPITE FITZMORRIS EDICT.

Announcement Made That Sweitzer Will Speak—Dunne and Lewis in Line for Candidate.

The County Democracy announces it will meet at headquarters, 167 West Randolph street, tomorrow evening despite the fact that Charles C. Fitzmorris, the mayor's secretary, said the meeting would not be held because he held the keys to the hall and would not surrender them. Robert M. Sweitzer will address the meeting. Gov. Dunne sent a letter regretting his inability to attend, but asking all Democrats loyally to support Sweitzer for mayor. Senator James Hamilton Lewis also replied he was unable to attend. He said he would be ready at any time after March 16 to give his time to the campaign, and he hoped to be able to speak in every part of the city for Mr. Sweitzer.

Six-40 HUDSON $1,550

The HUDSON Selling Secret

Men ask why one car predominates—how one car can outdistance all its rivals. All makes of cars in a class start on an equal footing. Where then does the secret lie, when one maker forges ahead? All had the same chance, all paid the same price, but they had not the same factors behind them. Is it financial backing, master salesmanship, or just the car itself?

Capital alone won't do. It only postpones a failure. Good salesmanship alone won't build a motor car success. Minor men can make a motor car alluring. Incompetence too often makes a showy front. The real secret of a motor cars success is just the car's record.

Men who judge by their likings rarely agree. But men who judge by results, unite in one opinion about the HUDSON. It has broken all records in motor car success and popularity.

This Is the Car Men Wanted

During the year 1914 the Hudson Company was the largest producer in the world of motor cars selling over $1,250.

And it comes at a time when men are buying more carefully—comparing more closely—demanding more refinements than ever before. It comes at the climax of men's rebellion against over-tax and excess.

At this time—with all the new-year models out—men are buying five times as many HUDSONS as they bought a year ago.

HUDSON models—designed by Howard E. Coffin, have been climbing up fast in late years. The HUDSON Six of two years ago was the largest selling six in the world—and this still holds true today.

But this new Six-40 has developed an avalanche of favor. In a single year it has quintupled HUDSON popularity. It has made the HUDSON—all things considered—the top-place car of today.

The HUDSON Six-40 distinction today lies in its ultra-refinement. In that perfection of detail which constitutes class. In the things which come only through infinite pains, through time and study and skill.

Yet, due to increased production, you get this HUDSON for $1,550.

Students' Trip to Panama-California Exposition—Expenses Paid—Chaperoned by Teachers

John D. Rockefeller has just offered $100,000 to a well known Eastern woman's college providing the students and alumni raise a like amount. The San Francisco Company, which I am representing east of the Rockies, supplied a plan whereby these college women are speedily raising the desired amount.

Another plan has now been made to give students and teachers in this and other large cities an opportunity to visit the 1915 Exposition at San Diego and San Francisco in specially conducted parties, all expenses paid. Would you like to join?

Parties will be composed of teachers, students, superintendents, professors and their families. Many students and teachers are now cooperating with this movement and I take this opportunity of announcing it in Chicago. This is not a voting contest, but a straightforward business proposition. SOCIAL CENTERS BOOSTED AS FOE OF 'ROUGHNECKS'

Rowdyism at Dances Eliminated by Special Instruction in Classes.

Various reasons, from the elimination of the "rough neck" to the solving of the congestion problem, were advanced for the development of neighborhood centers in two sessions at the City club yesterday.

There were more than twenty speeches made on the neighborhood center plan. The meetings were held in connection with the City club exhibit on neighborhood center competition plans and city properties.

Here Are Some Accomplishments.

Here are some of the things neighborhoods are doing or should do, according to the speakers:

Charles S. Suiter, Lincoln park system—One of the things we have accomplished is the establishment of dancing classes made up of persons interested in the music and rhythm. We segregate the men and the women. As soon as a man or a woman is able to dance the real waltz—not the two step waltz—we allow him or her to attend the mixed dances. The so-called rough neck can t waltz. He is unwilling to spend a half hour learning the steps.

Development Funds Short.

Miss Azile Reynolds, principal of the Armstrong school—The neighborhood centers should be developed through the social centers in the schools. They should be carried on twelve months instead of five months a year. The social centers have dropped from twenty-four to four this winter because the board of education has not had any money to spend on "foolishness."

John R. Richards, south park system—The small parks have been misnamed. They should be called neighborhood or community centers. The civic consciousness must be awakened by these units rather than by any reform wave emanating from the loop.

Mrs. J. Paul Goode, Seventh Ward Civic forum—We have a population of 70,000, which used to get together only three times a year. Those times were election day, the Hyde Park High school commencement, and the Sixty-third street fair. Now we have a civic forum at which the aldermen give monthly reports of progress in the city hall. Our rules, which say we may not indorse any candidate, or party, and that no person may talk from the floor more than five minutes, have prevented the organization from being captured by politicians and the people from becoming tired by long winded speakers.

Solve Congestion Problem.

John C. Kennedy—Neighborhood centers would solve the congestion and overcrowding problems. The city should control the location of manufacturing and industrial plants, which should be placed in residential communities.

Miss Emma Church, Chicago School of Applied Art—There should be a museum connected with every social center containing the handiwork of the community as well as the art treasures of the neighborhood.

Mrs. A. Starr Best—If the community idea were developed every center could have a good play at least once a week at reasonable cost and could decide as to what sort of amusement it desired.

Mrs. Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler—Chicago should be ashamed to admit it cannot afford to subsidize music in the neighborhood centers. If she spent more money for music she would need to spend less for hospitals and asylums.

MERRIAM URGES VOTING OF FARM COLONY BONDS.

Alderman Gives Four Reasons Why He Believes Crime Is Not Treated Wisely in Chicago.

Ald. Charles E. Merriam, in a speech before the Chicago Political Equality league yesterday at the Congress hotel gave four reasons why he considers the treatment of crime in Chicago inadequate. They are:

First, many professional criminals escape penalties and continue to prey upon society.

Second, poor and petty offenders often are punished more heavily than is just.

Third, treatment of those sentenced to penal institutions is pitifully ineffective.

Fourth, practical methods of preventing crime are not applied as extensively as experience warrants and demands.

"One of the practical steps Chicago may now take in the prevention and treatment of crime," he said, "is to approve at the coming spring election the bond issue of $250,000 for a farm colony and shelter house in connection with the house of correction. On such a farm many of those who come back time after time can be built up physically and many of them made into useful citizens."

Two interesting miniatures at the exhibition of the Chicago artists, which opened this week at the Art institute, are the work of Miss Anna Lynch, who has painted many Chicagoans. This time her subjects are children, one the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss of 1550 North State parkway, who has been given his father's name, and Miss Gertrude Lamont, daughter of Mrs. Robert Lamont of Evanston.

WOMAN CHANGES HER MIND JUST ONCE TOO OFTEN

Mrs. Daisy Knight Admits False Testimony in Divorce Suit of Husband.

The saying is that to woman is granted the undisputed prerogative of changing her mind. That is what Mrs. Daisy E. Knight of La Grange did, and yesterday it cost her heavily. Her husband, Hartley G. Knight of 1119 East Forty-third street, was granted a divorce by Judge Denis E. Sullivan and Mrs. Knight was held to the grand jury in $500 bonds on a charge of perjury.

All of which transpired because at first Mrs. Knight didn't want a divorce and then changed her mind.

Mrs. Knight first testified her husband lived with her after his bill had been filed, thus invalidating the statutory charges he had made even if he proved them. This the wife admitted was false.

Men of the name of Courtney and Escabar were named by Mr. Knight.

Mrs. Davis Gets Decree.

Mrs. Sara B. Davis was granted a decree of divorce from Dr. Frank H. Davis by Judge Walker on grounds of desertion. Dr. Davis is a dentist with an office at 8 North State street. They lived in Berwyn.

Mrs. Davis will receive all title to and interest in the Berwyn home, an endowment life insurance policy on her husband for $25,000, payable in 1920, alimony of $50 a month, beginning July 1, 1915, and solicitor's fees amounting to $500.

Judge Jesse A. Baldwin dismissed the petition asking for a review of the divorce of Mrs. Genevieve V. Marks, an actress, from Abraham Marks, a theatrical agent.

Civil War Veteran Sues.

On picket duty in the civil war Alexander Osterman was a bad man for an enemy scout to meet. But that was a long time ago, and Osterman isn't the fighting man he used to be. In a divorce bill filed in the Circuit court he admits he isn't even a match for his wife.

They were married Jan. 11, 1913. Two weeks later he terminated their honeymoon by slapping her. Two years later, Jan. 11, 1915, she terminated their life together by leaving. The slapping incident won a divorce for Mrs. Rixa Blaauw.

MRS. HERZ MINUS JOB AND PARTNER

Hotel La Salle Hires New Dancer and Margraff Dissolves Team.

"BABY LETTERS" CAUSE

Mrs. Ralph Herz, tango expert, is now minus a job.

She is also minus a partner. And it's all because of the burning series of "Baby" letters to Harold Guentzer Margraff—which she says she didn't write.

Thursday night, after her last fox trot at the Hotel La Salle, Mrs. Herz was asked to hold the step long enough to fox trot her into the office of Assistant Manager W. L. Gregory.

"Er—Good Evening——"

"Er-good evening, Mrs. Herz," said Mr. Gregory. "I've been looking up your contract. It expires tonight, you know."

"Why——" gasped the dancer.

"O, yes," returned the manager. "Our contracts run from day to day, you know. We have another team for tomorrow—some awfully nice young people from the north side—and so, you see, you and Mr. Margraff—you'll understand how it is, I'm sure."

And only then did it become known, even to the hotel management, that the pretty dancer and her lithe partner have come to the parting of the ways.

Mrs. Josephine Lawrence, superintendent of the social serevice department of the County court, tried to settle the difficulties of the Margraff family when young Harold's mother turned over the sheaf of "Baby" letters to her and complained that, although she had paid for educating her son's feet, Harold was lavishing his $100 a week salary on Mrs. Herz and leaving his mother in want.

The Mother Wins.

Now, through Mrs. Lawrence's intervention, Harold has made an "arrangement" with his mother. And, though Mrs. Lawrence hadn't intended that at all, it developed that the "arrangement" includes the dissolution of all ties, business and otherwise, between young Margraff and Mrs. Herz.

"Mrs. Herz is a charming woman and an expert dancer," said Mr. Gregory to a TRIBUNE reporter, "but there are some kinds of publicity that we don't like. This, you know—well, everybody to his own taste. Here's a picture of our new dancer. Pretty, isn't she?"

"I don't really know just what I am going to do now," said Mrs. Herz sweetly. "Does it matter particularly? There are lots of partners, you know, and heaps of jobs."

MONEY CHEERFULLY REFUNDED ON GARMENTS NOT SATISFACTORY

How Electric Car Values Were Proved in Chicago

Who is better qualified to know electric car values than the electric garage man?

His judgment is worth everything to you. It is based on the actual known performance of electric cars long after they have left the show rooms. And he has no cars or "promises" to sell.

So we had a prospective electric car purchaser learn for himself what electric garage men had to say of electrics. This investigation was especially significant because Chicago is the world's greatest electric car city. In all, thirty-two of the largest electric garages were called on.

It "Stands Up Well"

One statement stood out strongly from a host of other Rauch & Lang factors of leadership.

Man after man used the same expression: "The Rauch & Lang stands up well."

And, when we say "man after man," we mean the electrician or mechanic—the men actually in charge of the cars in the garage.

Here is what some of them said—word for word. Space limitation makes it impossible to quote them all:

"We have one 1908 Rauch & Lang here that gives better service than a lot of new cars. . . and I don't know of any car that will equal the Rauch & Lang in service."

"They stand up well and are as nearly mechanically perfect as a car can be."

"There is one car kept here by a doctor that has been run steady for 18 months without missing a day. The Rauch & Lang will certainly stand hard service, and there is rarely anything wrong with it."

"It stands up well, and does not require constant repairing. The Rauch & Lang is a wise choice."

"Naturally the garage man wants to get away from trouble, and he recommends the car that gives him the least trouble. We have no trouble with the Rauch & Lang cars kept here—they seem about perfect mechanically, and the body stays together. It never gets to squeaking or rattling."

"One Rauch & Lang car has been kept here for two years, and not a nickel has been spent on it for repairs . . . I have yet to hear a kick from a Rauch & Lang owner."

"I do not boost any particular car, but I will tell you confidentially that I believe the Rauch & Lang is the best car made. We handle all makes here, but there is less trouble with the Rauch & Lang than any other make. It seems to be the choice in electrics, and I hear more praise for it than any other."

Low Upkeep Cost

Now, doesn't it all stand to reason that fewest repairs and adjustments mean lowest upkeep cost?

Isn't it convincing to know that the car you buy will prove to be an investment instead of an expense?

And that works two ways: It means that you not only save money during the years of Rauch & Lang service but that your car is always in commission. Please think that over.

But, leave the law of deduction out of it. Read the "brass tack" statements of the garage men whose daily experience enables them to KNOW just what they're talking about.

Read their statements of Rauch & Lang low upkeep cost:

"There is less expense with the Rauch & Lang than any electric I know of."

"We have some Rauch & Lang cars here that have been used continually for several years without any repairing expense whatever."

"The owners of Rauch & Lang cars are fortunate in that they have no expense."

"Of course we handle all makes here, but the Rauch & Lang is a car that we have no trouble with. It is a high grade car in a class by itself."

"We have quite a number here, and they never get out of order. They have good material in them, and certainly stand up well."

"There is no expense for repairing—it holds together and gives wonderful service. We have eight in here now and they are easier to take care of than any others."

"There is no expense to a Rauch & Lang outside of regular garage bills."

"We have one Rauch & Lang car that has been kept here three years, and during all that time it has never been in the repair shop."

And, remember, these are only a few of the statements of Chicago garage owners testifying to Rauch & Lang superiority. Yet they do go to substantiate the high place the Rauch & Lang Electric has won for itself as a car of service and low upkeep cost.

What Other Investigations Showed

An investigation was made in Cincinnati, Milwaukee and San Francisco, as well as Chicago, to secure testimony representative of the entire United States.

In Cincinnati it was found that the earliest Rauch & Lang cars are still in use by their original owners.

More than this, in Cincinnati there is a greater percentage of old Rauch & Lang Electrics in use today than of early makes of any other electrics.

In Milwaukee and San Francisco the object was to learn if Rauch & Lang owners had ever sold their cars in order to purchase other makes. It was found that no Rauch & Lang owner in these cities had ever done so.

The result surprised even us. We did look for a 90% Rauch & Lang preference. Eighty per cent would have been a splendid showing.

But in every instance the Rauch & Lang was acclaimed as "The Best Electric on the Market," or words to that effect.

And, in saying this, these representative garage men gave their reasons—reasons of vital import to electric owners and intending purchasers alike. Read them—for you will certainly find them interesting.

Bear in mind that so far as these garage owners were concerned, there was no "axe to grind"—they are in no way interested in the sale of any particular car. The investigation was impartial, being conducted by a third party who had no other motive than to find out just what electric car stood highest with the electric garage men of Chicago—and why.

This shows conclusively that the Rauch & Lang is not an automobile for a season or two—that its inherent quality and inwrought perfection endue it with a life of many years—that a Rauch & Lang is not doomed to early retirement by reason of whimsical design, inferior equipment, or faulty workmanship.

Why It Excels

The long life and low upkeep cost of the Rauch & Lang are due to a combination of (1) fine materials of tested quality, (2) advanced and proven construction, (3) accuracy in designing and workmanship, (4) scientific engineering—all far beyond the experimental stage.

Think what such precaution as this means to you: not until after five years of research and experimentation did the Rauch & Lang engineers give the public their now famous Straight-Type, Top-Mounted Worm Drive—and it revolutionized Electric Automobile building. 36 out of 39 foreign automobile manufacturers use the Top-Mounted Worm. Could anything be more convincing that correct engineering demands the Top-Mounted Worm?

Another evidence of superiority: the Rauch & Lang Flat-Type, vertical control is the only one that has never been found necessary to alter or discard. It is so dependable that it practically never requires attention. It is so safe that the experienced electric car owner demands it above all else. It is so simple and is operated so naturally that the inexperienced person drives it upon first attempt. And it is a patented exclusive Rauch & Lang feature.

Space prevents details of other equally superior features, among them our steering device, flexible rear axle system and high-speed, high-power motor.

The entire Rauch & Lang car, excepting accessories, is manufactured in the Rauch & Lang factory. Thus, only can super-quality be attained.

And mark you this: Every Rauch & Lang Electric from the first one made years ago to those now daily produced has been designed and manufactured under the exacting direction of the same two expert Electrical and Mechanical Engineers. Progress has been ideally consistent.

And, marvelous to realize—not a single mistake in design or even in small details has ever developed in the models sold to the public.

Coach Work Essential

Coach Work is the fine art of correct Vehicle Body Building. It is no less essential than Architecture is to house construction, art to painting, sculpture to statuary—or any fine art in its respective sphere.

Those who know Quality and are accustomed to the good things of life, instantly recognize Coach Work for its appearance of correct design, contour, symmetry, graceful lines, quiet elegance and exclusiveness. They appreciate that the unseen construction embodies flexibility that absorbs vibration and thus affords delightful riding qualities while possessing the greatest possible durability.

Only the Coach-Built Body is correctly designed and constructed, and the Rauch & Lang is the sole Electric in America that is genuinely Coach-Built. It is the product of direct descendants of America's oldest coach-building house.

Sixty years of genuine coach work impart to the Rauch & Lang a distinctive quality touch which lesser experience and skill cannot give.

It is this that makes the Rauch & Lang the car of prestige—the car in which there is always pride of ownership—the car whose values are permanent and recognized.

And Rauch & Lang bodies do not materially change from year to year. A Rauch & Lang bought today will be in style years from now.

The Car You Want

The acknowledged automobile for city and suburban use is now the Electric. With its more-than-enough speed and mileage, it is clean, convenient, care-free, simple, silent, safe and economical—the Automobile of the Age.

And here you have read what 100% of the Chicago garage men called upon say about the Rauch & Lang Electric—and why.

You have learned why Rauch & Lang owners can use and enjoy their cars winter and summer alike, year after year.

You have read of Rauch & Lang Engineering and Coach Work.

You have learned how Rauch & Lang cars "stand up."

You have read of the lower upkeep cost.

All this makes clear why the Rauch & Lang is essentially the Highest Price Electric made, and why it pays to make it your permanent investment—your permanent Automobile.

Quality naturally limits our production and essentially makes ownership exclusive.

Call and let the Rauch & Lang tell its own story.

MURPHY, GUILTY OF MURDER, GOES TO PENITENTIARY

Gunman Gets from One Year to Life for the Slaying of Robert Koch.

For the next year—possibly for the rest of its owner's life—John Murphy's trigger finger will not have to be reckoned with as a factor in Chicago gunman wars.

Murphy, who shot and killed Robert Koch in the "Countess" Predosa's rooming house at 2950 Calumet avenue last November, was found guilty of manslaughter late yesterday by the jury in Judge Petit's court. He got an indeterminate sentence of from one year to life.

Leo McQuade, Koch's roommate, who was on trial with Murphy, was acquitted. In his testimony Murphy had exonerated his fellow defendant, testifying that McQuade had fled from the room when the first shot was fired.

Linked with Barry Murder.

A direct connection was traced between the Koch shooting and the murder of Jimmy Barry, a peddler. For this crime Clarence White, west side teaming contractor and gun fighter, is under indictment. The prosecution contended that Koch was killed to forestall impending revelations in the Barry case.

That contention the defense twisted to its own purposes. Murphy, on the witness stand, asserted that the Barry murder did have a bearing on the Koch killing.

"It was this way," he said. "I wrote a letter to a man named Timothy Sheehan, in care of Manton's saloon in St. Louis. I told him I thought it was Koch that croaked Barry and Piggy Taner.

Drew Gun and Cut Loose.

"The morning of Nov. 4 I went to see Koch and McQuade. Koch said I wrote the letter and I said I didn't. He reached under the pillow. I knew he had a revolver there and I cut loose. McQuade beat it."

It took the jury more than three hours to reach a verdict. Murphy's case was the first taken up. On the first ballot the jury stood 7 to 5 for conviction. When the second ballot was cast, after nearly two hours of argument, the jurors were unanimous for conviction. Only one ballot was needed in McQuade's case.

U. S. TRAINING SHIP PUT IN DRY DOCK AFTER ACCIDENT.

Maine Flooded and Lists Badly When Valve Blows Out in Engine Room.

New York, March 6.—The United States receiving ship Maine, a vessel of 12,000 tons, stationed at the Brooklyn navy yard, was ordered into the dry dock at the yard this afternoon after a valve blew out which flooded the engine room.

Pumps were put to work, but before the water could be gotten under control the engine room was flooded and the ship had a pronounced list.

On board is a crew of about 300 men, mostly recruits, under command of Capt. de Steiger.

SUICIDE OF EASTERN GIRL BLAMED ON HERSELF ALONE

Coroner Reports After Investigating Death of Miss Cook—Mayo Advised Not to Appear.

New Haven, Conn., March 6.—Coroner Eli Mix today completed his investigation of the suicide of Lillian May Cook. The coroner said he would file a report on Monday that Miss Cook came to her death by her own hand and that she alone was responsible for her act. Virginius Mayo, employer of the young woman at the time of her disappearance more than a week ago, was instructed to disregard a subpœna requiring him to appear before the coroner.

BOMBARDS BANK WITH BRICKBATS

Man Who Objects to Prosperity of Owners Smashes Plate Glass Windows.

TOO WELL FED, HE SAYS

Paul Diringer saved up several bricks and deposited them yesterday in the Chicago City Bank and Trust company at 6233 South Halsted street. Diringer, who is 59 years old, appeared in front of the bank with the bricks under his arm shortly before the bank opened for business at 9 o'clock in the morning. He walked around to one of the large plate glass windows and hurled several of the "bats" through it. Then he walked around to the other side and deposited the rest in the same manner.

When he saw they were safely inside he started to walk away, but was seized by Patrolmen Spiegel and Hultgre, who had heard the crash.

Pinned to Sidewalk.

Diringer struggled against arrest, but was finally overpowered and pinioned to the sidewalk by the time the riot squad of the Englewood station summoned by the bank officials arrived.

"I wasn't going to rob the place," explained Diringer at the station. "Those bank fellows have pretty soft jobs; they have it too easy in the country. They sit down all day, get good things to eat, have good homes and everything they want. I'm lucky if I get rye bread. A poor man can starve."

Smashed Residence Windows.

The police learned Diringer had smashed several panes of glass in the residence of Fred Langdon of 6116 South Morgan street previous to his visit to the bank. Langdon said he had known Deringer for some time, but could not account for his actions. The police are holding him to be examined as to his sanity.

Arthur J. Rathje, cashier of the bank, said the damage amounted to $125

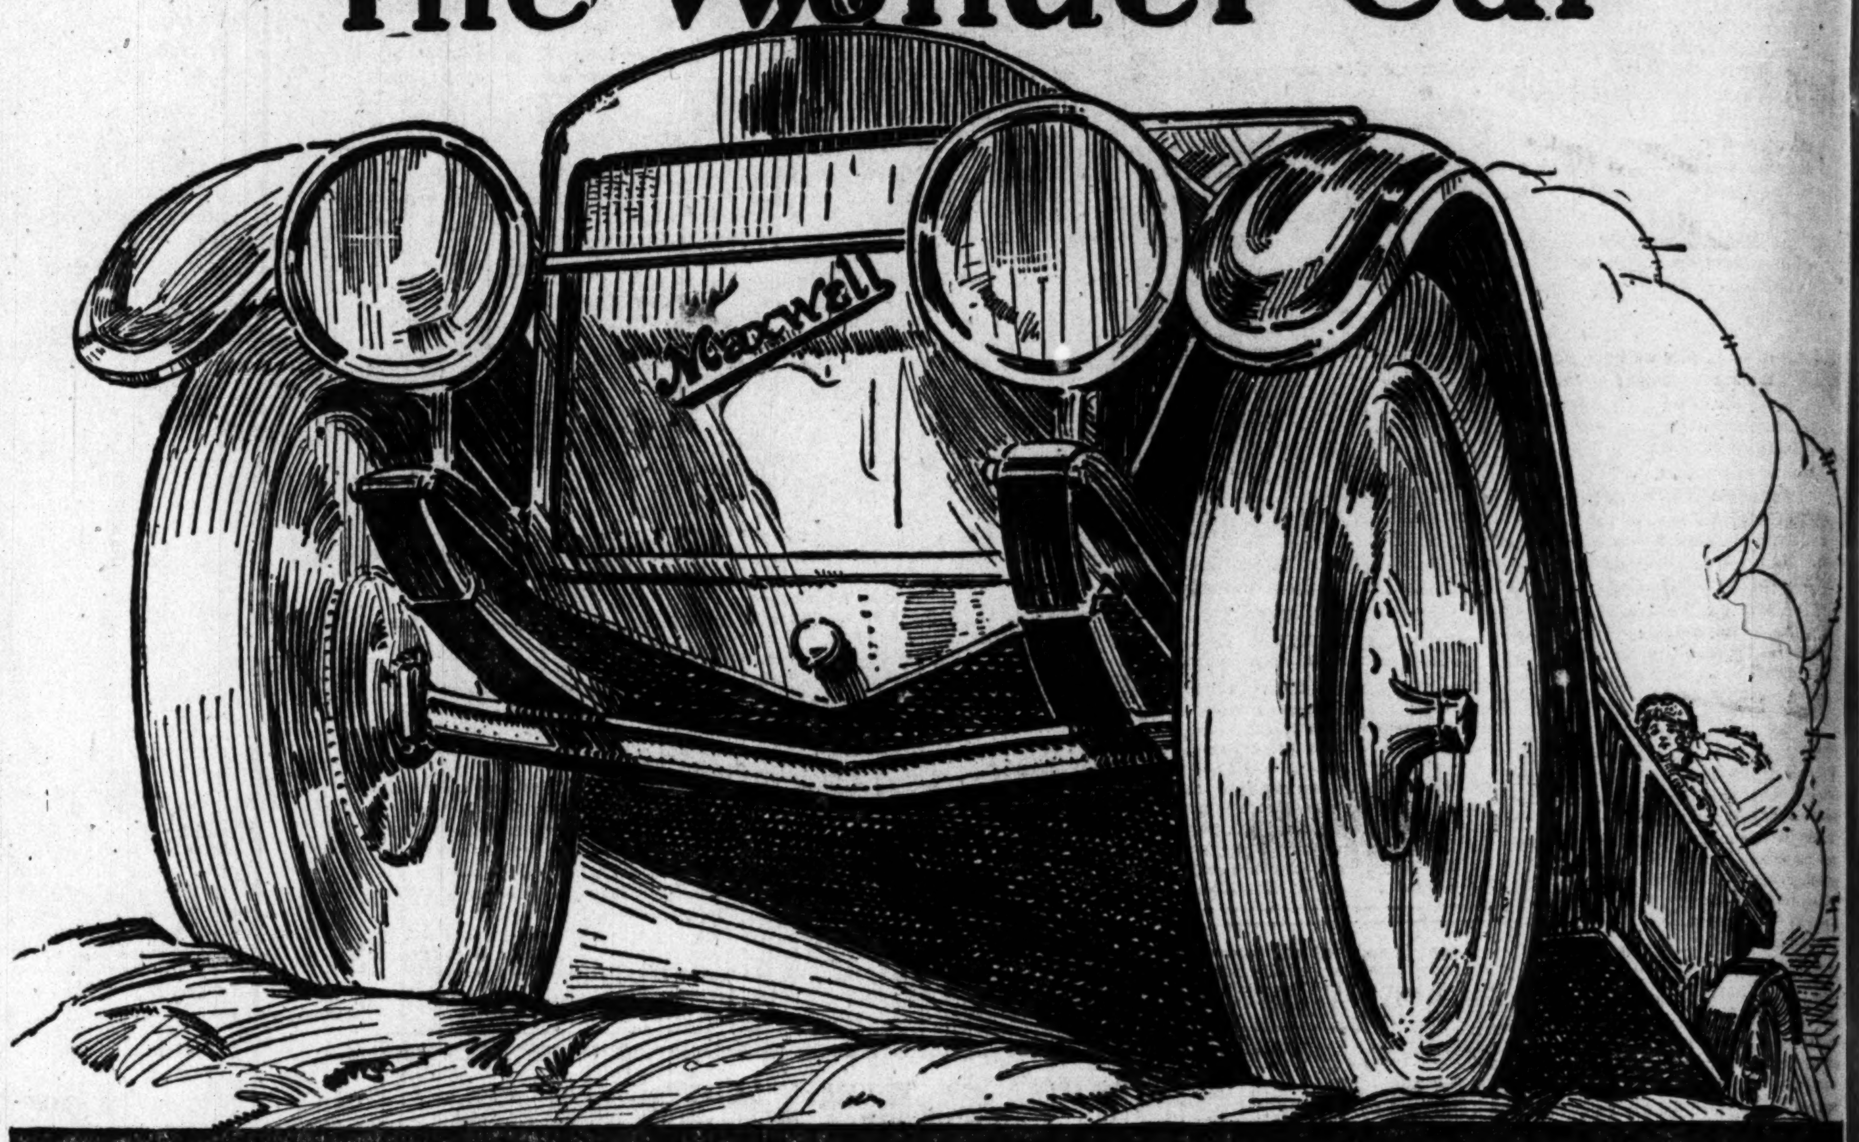
Maxwell

"The Wonder Car"



You can own an exact duplicate of "Wild Bill" Turner's or Billy Carlson's record-breaking Maxwells

Think of owning one of these same Maxwells—think of driving it wherever you want to—over any kind of roads—up any kind of hills, wherever four wheels can go, the same car for $695.

Remember, every 1915 Maxwell is an exact duplicate of the regular stock Maxwell Touring Cars in which "Wild Bill" Turner broke the world's record up Mt. Hamilton, 21 7/10 miles in 48½ minutes, beating the world's record by 16⅙ minutes, and "Billy" Carlson broke the world's record up Mt. Wilson, California, making nine miles (up an elevation of 6,000 feet) in 29 minutes and 1 second, beating the previous world's record by 13 minutes.

That's the kind of hill-climber you get when you get a Maxwell.

Now about speed and endurance—here are some recent Maxwell Racing Car records:—

Barney Oldfield in a Maxwell Racing Car broke the world's non-stop record at Corona, California, for 300 miles, averaging 86.3 miles per hour. Think of it—not a stop made!

Then, right on top of this marvelous motor record, along came "Billy" Carlson in his Maxwell Racer and made still another 300 miles non-stop record in the San Diego race. Again a Maxwell Racer ran 300 miles without a stop!

These Maxwell Racing Cars are built by the same Designers, the same Chief Engineer, that build the regular Maxwell Cars; and the same Maxwell Laboratory Tested Steel is used in them that is used in the regular stock Maxwell Touring Cars.

But, aside from hill-climbing and speed power and endurance records, here are some of the facts about Maxwell comfort,—Maxwell special features,—Maxwell beauty and Maxwell service.

Read This List of Expensive Features. The 1915 Maxwell Has These Features And Many Others.

Attractive Streamline Body

Pure streamline body; graceful crown fenders, with all rivets concealed. All the grace, style and snap" that you will find in any of the highest priced cars.

A High-Tension Magneto

Nearly all the high priced cars have high tension magnetos. A high tension magneto gives positive ignition. The Simms magneto, with which the Maxwell is equipped, is recognized as one of the best magnetos made.

Left Side Drive—Central Control

Left side steer with gear shifting levers in center of driving compartment—center control—has been accepted by leading makers of expensive automobiles as the safest and most comfortable for the driver; that is why the Maxwell has it. The Maxwell is so easy to drive and control that a child can handle it.

Three-Speed Sliding Gear Transmission

All high priced cars have a sliding gear transmission. It is costly to make, but it is the best. If the motor has the power, sliding gears will pull the car out of any mud or sand. The Maxwell has a three-speed selective sliding gear transmission because Maxwell engineers do not consider any other type to be worthy of the Maxwell car.

Double-Shell Radiator with Shock Absorbing Device

The Maxwell radiator is of handsome design, gracefully curved, and it is built to be trouble proof. It is the expensive double shell type and has ample cooling capacity. The radiator is mounted to the frame by means of a shock absorbing device on each side, which relieves the radiator of all twists and distortions of the frame, caused by roughness of the road. The shock absorbing device also minimizes the possibility of radiator leaks.

The Roomy Full 5-Passenger Body Adjustable Front Seat

The 1915 Maxwell has a full grown 5-passenger body. The front seat is adjustable, you can move it three inches forward or backward. This makes the car really comfortable for the driver. No cramped legs for tall people or uncomfortable reaching for short people. Most drivers' seats are made to fit anyone—so fit no one.

Low "Up-keep" Carburetor

The carburetor used on the Maxwell was especially designed for it after long and severe tests under every conceivable condition. Economy tours conducted by hundreds of dealers and owners in different sections of the country have proved its efficiency, its quick response to throttle and its extremely low consumption of gasoline. It has been termed the "low up-keep" carburetor.

Irreversible Steering Gear

The greatest margin of safety has been provided in the steering gear of the 1915 Maxwell. The Maxwell irreversible steering mechanism is of the expensive worm-and-gear type and its superiority over every other type lies in its many adjustments. At no time is more than a fourth of the bearing surface of the gear which operates the worm in use. When needed, a new bearing surface may be had by adjusting the gear a quarter of a turn. In short, the Maxwell steering gear has four times the adjustment of any other kind.

Heavy Car Comfort

What surprises most people is the smooth, buoyant riding qualities of the Maxwell. The spring suspension of the 1915 Maxwell is the same costly combination of long semi-elliptical front springs and the three-quarter elliptic rear springs that is used on most heavy weight, high priced cars. The Maxwell offers you every essential of the highest priced machines at a fifth of their cost.

One Size of Tire—Anti-Skids on Rear

The Maxwell car is one of the easiest cars in the world on tires. Maxwell owners carry but one spare tire and but one size of spare tubes. Economical 30 inch x 3½ inch tires are used all around. A famous make of anti-skid tires are supplied on rear wheels.

A Dependable Electric Starter

For $55 extra, you can have your Maxwell delivered equipped with the famous Simms-Huff electric starter. This starter is efficient, trouble proof and easily operated.

And the Maxwell is completely equipped from the clear vision, ventilating windshield at the front to the spare tire carrier at the rear. When you buy a Maxwell you have nothing extra to buy.

The Maxwell Company's Guarantee of Service to Maxwell Owners

No other automobile is backed by a more reliable service than that guaranteed every Maxwell owner. More than 2,000 Maxwell dealers—in every part of this country—are always ready to give expert advice, to make adjustments, and to supply new parts at reasonable prices.

This splendid Maxwell dealer service organization is perfected and completed by the chain of Maxwell owned and Maxwell operated Service Branches. Sixteen great Maxwell Service Stations are so located throughout the country that a Maxwell dealer can supply any part for an owner within a few hours if not in his stock. Maxwell Service is one of the great advantages enjoyed by Maxwell owners.

Order a Maxwell from us now, and when you want it delivered we will give you your car—not an excuse on delivery day

JUDGES IGNORE PROBATION LAW ON OLD CROOKS

Turn Many Loose Despite 'First Offenders Only' Statute.

OFFICERS TOO FEW.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

There are between 3,000 and 4,000 men and women who have been convicted of misdemeanors and crimes at liberty in Chicago on probation. Each year nearly 5,000 adults found guilty of more or less serious offenses are put on probation in the city. In hundreds of cases, as the probation law is at present administered, when a man (or woman) is put on probation he is practically discharged without punishment of any kind, and is swallowed up in the life of the city, where with a new name and a new address he may continue his old tricks.

That this condition exists, that much of the criticism directed against the probation system seems to be justified, is not the fault of law. The blame seems to lie, first of all, at the door of the judges of the Criminal court and of the Municipal court. To the uninformed layman it would appear that when judges on the bench do not obey the law they should be willing to accept at least part of the responsibility.

Only First Offenders.

The probation law says, as plainly as legal English ever says anything, that only men and women who have never before been convicted shall be eligible to be put on probation. In other words, it is only first offenders whom the law permits to be put on probation.

In actual practice, men and women who have been convicted several times are frequently put on probation. Unfortunately, the figures which would show how often this is done are not available. But in February, for instance, six cases were found in which convicted prisoners were put on probation for the second time. How many others who have served time in the bridewell or even in the penitentiary were released on probation it is impossible to ascertain. One judge said yesterday that he knew of a case in which a man who had a record as a burglar had been put on probation after conviction for some minor crime.

Why Not Strict Observance?

It is, of course, to the credit of the judges that almost all of them are inclined to the side of mercy, and are anxious to give every convicted prisoner a chance to redeem himself. But since the law plainly says that only first offenders are eligible to be put on probation, and since it usually is the more or less hardened criminal who has influential friends, it would seem that strict observance of the rule would avoid much judicial embarrassment.

It is true that under present conditions the judges may often be deceived by statements made by attorneys and friends of the prisoners convicted in their courts. With only twenty probation officers to serve all the Criminal and Municipal courts it is impossible to make an investigation before the probation order is entered. A lawyer, who may himself be deceived, may state to the court that his client is a first offender and the judge may, in perfect good faith, order him released.

68 Out of 162 Falsify.

Out of 174 men and women—162 of them were women—put on probation from the Morals court the report showed that at the end of the probation period sixty-eight were "unimproved." Translated into plain English that means that almost all the sixty-eight gave false names and addresses, so that when the probation officer went to pay his regular monthly call it was impossible even to locate the offender.

Practically all the twenty probation officers are obliged to spend half of each day in the courtroom. Frequently ten or fifteen newly convicted prisoners are put on probation to one of these officers in a single morning. It is plainly impossible for him to go home with each one of them, to do even sufficient investigation to make sure that the probationer is not masquerading under a false name, that he has not given a bogus address.

3,600 Adults on Probation.

Furthermore there are, as already stated, an average of about 3,600 adults on probation all the time. The law provides that each one of them shall be visited by a probation officer at least once a month. With only twenty officers on the roll there are an average of 180 probationers assigned to each. Since each officer is obliged to spend almost half his time in court it would be necessary for him to make fifteen visits every afternoon in the month, a task which is plainly impossible.

And yet, with all these handicaps on the proper administration of the law, it would seem that on the whole the results have been good.

Earn Million in Year.

During the last year, for instance, men and women on probation have earned in wages more than $1,000,000. That great sum has gone largely to the support of families which would otherwise have been to a considerable extent destitute. The number of probationers who are arrested during their probation period is not alarmingly large, especially when it is considered that more than half of the men are brought in on warrants for failure to contribute to the support of their wives and not because they have committed any new offenses. In January last, for instance, when 296 prisoners were released on probation, forty-eight warrants were issued, twenty-eight of them for husbands who had failed to pay their wives' allowance.

At the present session of the legislature an attempt will be made to secure needed amendments to the probation law. A provision that an investigation must be made before any one is released on probation will make it impossible for judges to be deceived by false statements made in court. And before that can be done the force of officers under the direction of Chief John W. Houston must be considerably increased.

BARBER APPEALS TO POLICE WHEN UNION PICKETS ARRIVE

Hyde Park Station Cook Hurls Chair at Patrolman Who Nailed Anti-Open Shop Sign on Door.

Martin Henderson, owner of a barber shop at 5473 Lake Park avenue, appealed to the police of the Hyde Park station yesterday when a delegation of union pickets appeared at his place bearing large placards with "This shop is unfair to organized labor" on them.

He runs an "open" shop, charging 25 cents for a haircut, while a rival two doors away is charging the union price of 35 cents.

A policeman was sent to his place and four of the pickets were taken to the police station and warned not to impede traffic.

In leaving one forgot his placard and a policeman nailed it to the door of the quarters of John Healon, janitor-cook of the station.

Healon ran out, and on seeing the sign, tore it down and hurled a chair at the fleeing policeman.

KIN REFUSE TO AID NEGRO WHO ATTACKED AGED WOMAN

Legal Machinery Expedited to Give Jess Williams Full Penalty for Wheaton Crime.

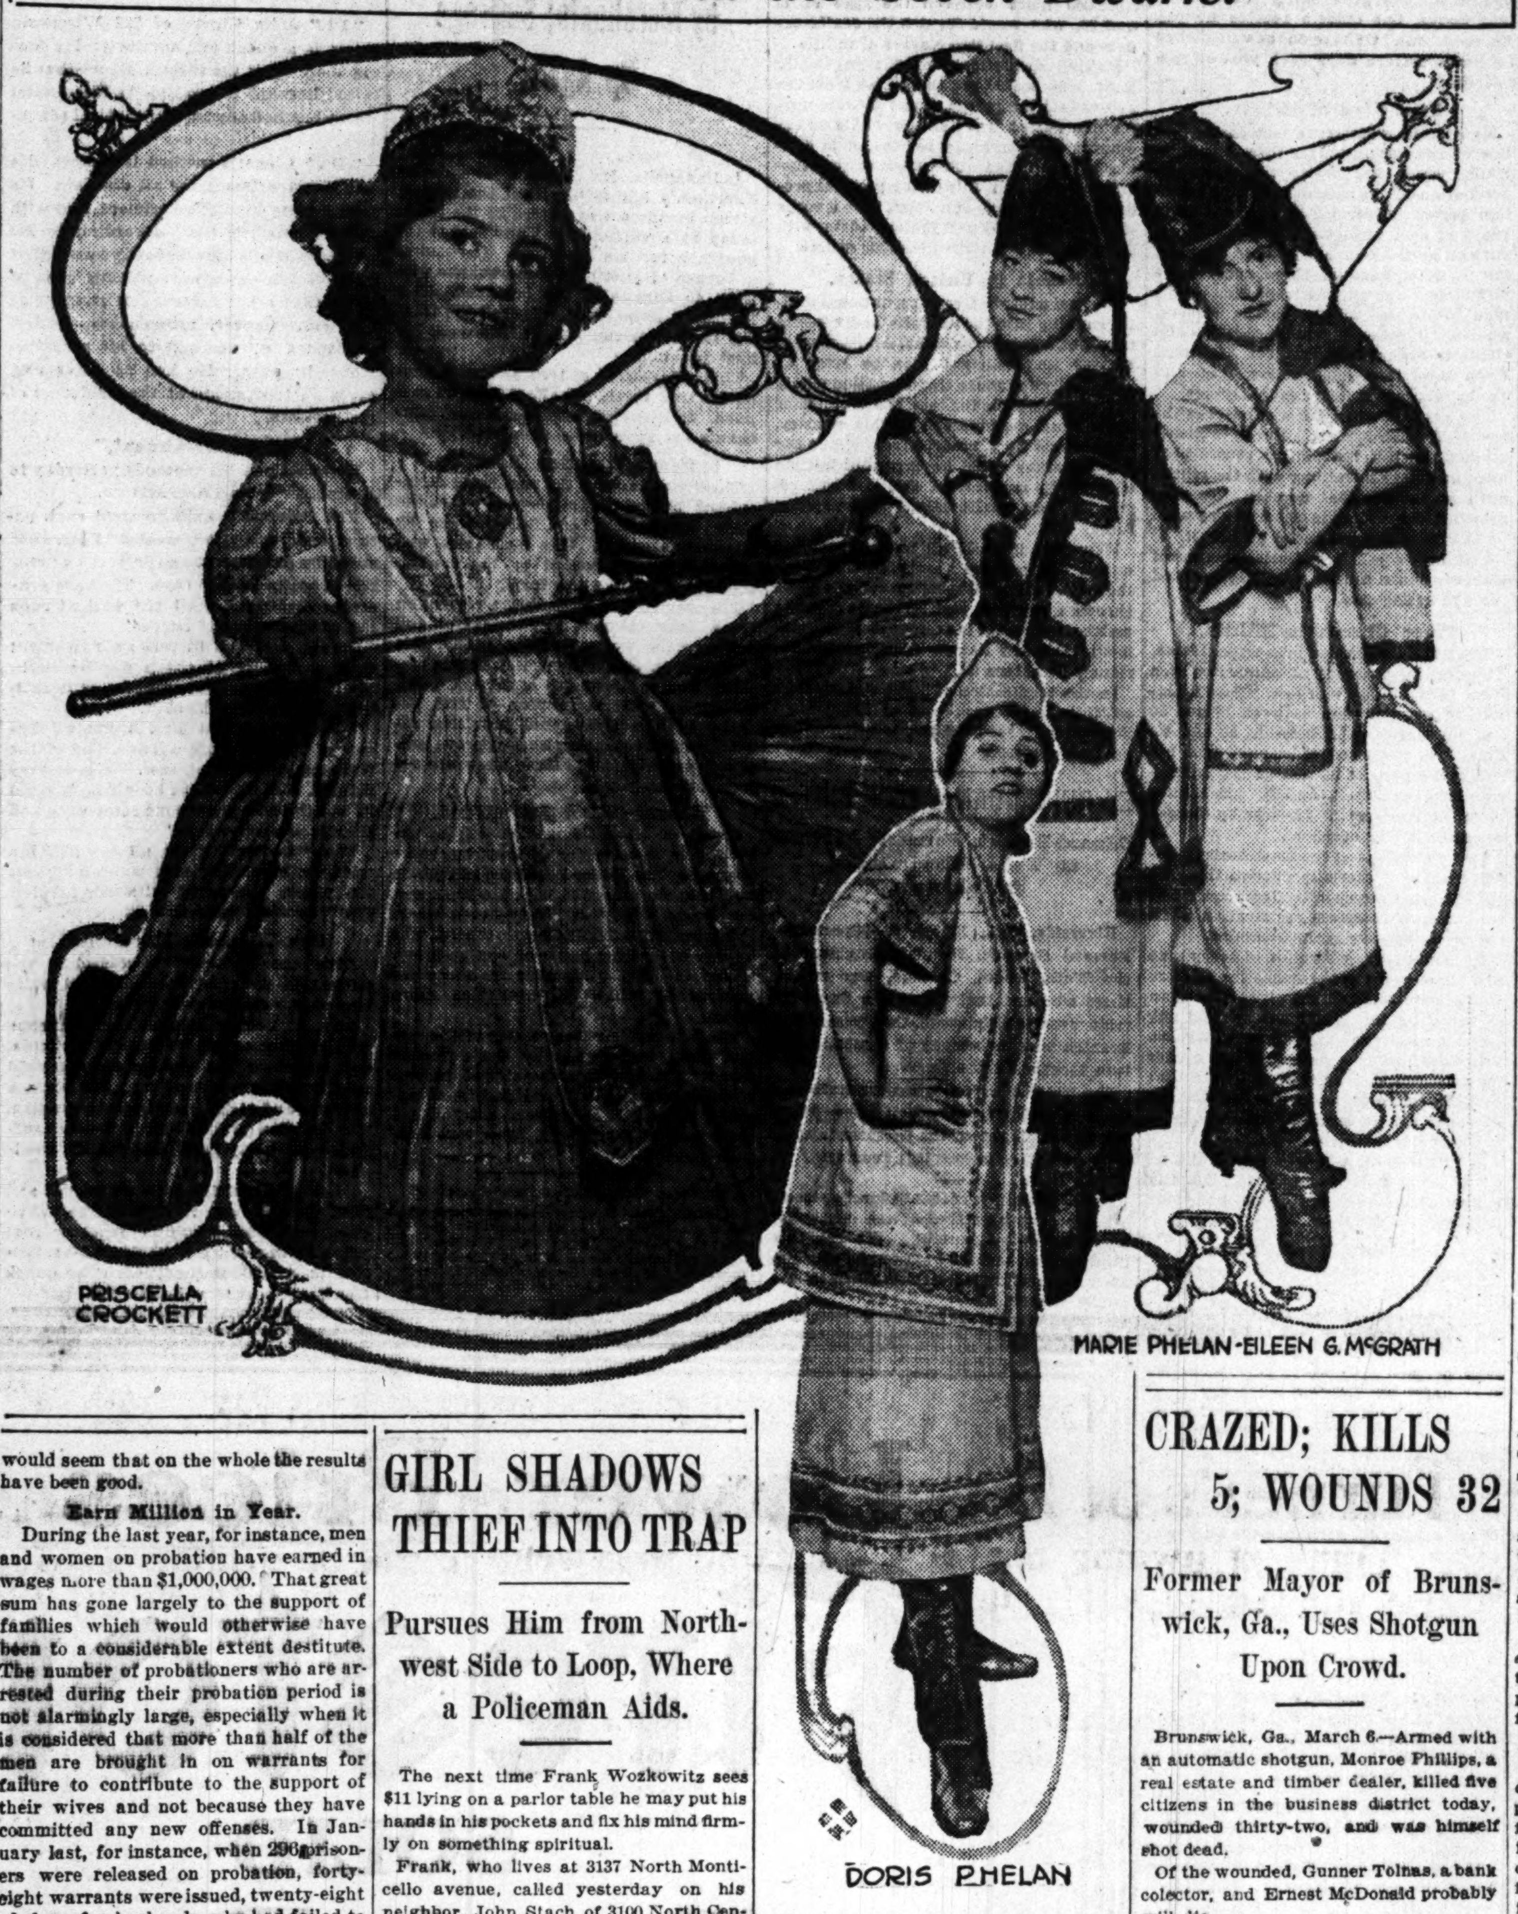
Relatives of Jess Williams, the negro ash man who confessed to having assaulted Mrs. Frances E. Schwartz, the 75 year old mother of Dr. George W. Schwartz of Chicago, at Wheaton on Feb. 27, notified the Du Page county authorities yesterday they would not provide funds for his defense. His sister, Lizzie Lee, lives at 2026 Dearborn street. Circuit Judge M. Slusser granted a petition filed by State's Attorney D. A. Hadley for a recall of the January grand jury to hear the evidence against Williams.

JUDGE FINES WITTY $50.

Penalized for Hitting Attorney Dan Cruice in Case Before Dever.

Assistant State's Attorney W. W. Witty was fined $50 for contempt of court yesterday by Judge Dever for hitting Attorney Daniel Cruice.

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.



Four hundred children will appear in the fairy operetta "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" at Orchestra hall on Friday evening, March 26, at the annual benefit for the home maintained at 556 East Thirty-seventh street by the New Future association as a place of shelter for girls after they leave the bridewell. The cast will assemble this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Virginia hotel for a general rehearsal. Among the young people appearing in the operetta are Miss Marie Phelan, Miss Eileen G. McGrath, Miss Doris Phelan, and Priscilla Crockett.

GIRL SHADOWS THIEF INTO TRAP

Pursues Him from Northwest Side to Loop, Where a Policeman Aids.

The next time Frank Wozkowitz sees $11 lying on a parlor table he may put his hands in his pockets and fix his mind firmly on something spiritual.

Frank, who lives at 3137 North Monticello avenue, called yesterday on his neighbor, John Stach of 3100 North Central Park avenue. After the friends had talked for a while John stepped out to the kitchen to open a bottle of beer. When he came back Wozkowitz was gone. So were two crisp $5 bills and a one that had been left lying alongside the glass case of wax flowers in the parlor.

Girl on His Trail.

Then things began to happen.

Eighteen year old Helen Stach came in just as Wozkowitz went out. She grasped the situation in a moment.

"I'll catch him!" she called to her father, and ran down the street after the fugitive. Just in time she glimpsed him swinging on the rear platform of a Milwaukee avenue car. Helen took the next one.

By good luck the cars ran close together. As they reached the loop the girl saw Wozkowitz drop off. She alighted and dodged after him through the crowded streets.

Down toward the river went Wozkowitz, and dodged into the frieght shed of the Goodrich Transit company. From the shadow of the building he saw Helen and recognized her. He was gone in a moment.

"Where's the nearest policeman?" gasped the girl to a man standing in the doorway.

"Rush street bridge," was the crisp answer.

Policeman Dinneen on Job.

Woskowitz was hurrying across the bridge when Helen ran up to Policeman John G. Dinneen. Traffic was heavy and Dinneen was busy, but he listened.

"Thief!" panted Helen. "There!"

Without a word the policeman "hitched" on the running board of a passing automobile. Wozkowitz broke into a run, and Dinneen drew his revolver.

"I'm a policeman!" he yelled to the crowd on the bridge. "Look out! I'm going to shoot."

But he didn't. Wozkowitz turned in Kinzie street and ran west. He had a good start and was two blocks and a half away from the bridge before he stumbled, fell, and waited for the automobile to come up.

Dinneen called the "wagon" and went back to the bridge. Helen was waiting for him.

"Shake!" she said.

FORTY-SEVEN MINERS SAVED; WERE ENTOMBED FOUR DAYS.

Found in Wrecked West Virginia Mine When All Hope for 170 Men Had Been Given Up.

Hinton, W. Va., March 6.—Forty-seven miners were found alive today in the Layland mine, where they had been entombed since last Tuesday when a gas explosion wrecked one mine and seriously damaged two others. About 170 men were thought to have lost their lives. Thus far seventy-eight bodies have been taken out.

CHEER UP! AN OLD FRIEND IS COMING BACK REAL SOON!

He Will Be Welcomed in Many Homes Where Absence Has Been Sorely Felt.

An old friend, whose absence has been short, but who has nevertheless been keenly missed in many quarters, is on the way back to Chicago. According to the master bakers, the 5 cent loaf of bread will soon be with us again.

With the big guns of the allies' fleet pounding away at the forts of the Dardanelles and the Russian grain ships expected to be liberated at any moment, wheat and flour prices are tumbling.

As the market of figures goes flour is off only 20 cents a barrel, but in actuality the drop is much greater than that. B. H. Dahlheimer, president of the Master Bakers' association, said he is buying flour at $1.75 a barrel less than he paid for his last order.

"Within two or three weeks I am sure there will be plenty of good 5 cent bread offered to Chicago consumers," he said.

KILLED IN SAME MANNER AS SISTER 30 YEARS AGO.

Mrs. Elizabeth B. Cook, Publisher and Temperance Worker, Dies in Wheaton Crossing Accident.

Mrs. Elizabeth B. Cook, who was killed by a train at a crossing in Wheaton Friday evening, lost her life almost at the same spot and in the same manner as her sister, Mrs. J. P. Stoddard, met death nearly thirty years ago.

Mrs. Cook, like her sister, had returned from the city and was attempting to cross the tracks at the depot when a freight train, traveling at high speed, hit her and buried the body more than fifty feet.

Since the death of her husband, Ezra A. Cook, Mrs. Cook had conducted the publishing business he had founded. She was a sister of Charles A. Blanchard, president of Wheaton college.

Mrs. Cook, daughter of Jonathan Blanchard, was born in Galesburg, Ill., in 1846, while her father was president of Knox college.

CRAZED; KILLS 5; WOUNDS 32

Former Mayor of Brunswick, Ga., Uses Shotgun Upon Crowd.

Brunswick, Ga., March 6.—Armed with an automatic shotgun, Monroe Phillips, a real estate and timber dealer, killed five citizens in the business district today, wounded thirty-two, and was himself shot dead.

Of the wounded, Gunner Tolnas, a bank colector, and Ernest McDonald probably will die.

List of the Killed.

The list of persons killed by Phillips follows:

ASBELL, GEORGE W., motorman.
DEAVERS, R. M., policeman.
DUNWOODY, HARRY F., lawyer.
HACKETT, W. M., undertaker.
PADGETT, L. C., former policeman.

Immediately after shooting Dunwoody, Phillips carrying a double barreled shotgun, went to the street and fired into a crowd, killing Padgett. He then began shooting at some men across the street, wounding several and killing Asbell.

Walking to a corner Phillips took up his station in front of a drug store and began shooting at every person who appeared. Hackett was killed as he stepped from a building into the street.

Crazed Man Finally Killed.

Policeman Deaver ran toward the corner and began shooting at Phillips, who turned his gun on the officer and shot him dead.

Butts then came up, firing at Phillips with a revolver. Phillips was struck after a short duel with the lawyer and was killed.

Phillips had been a resident of Brunswick twelve years. It was said he recently lost considerable money in real estate transactions. He was once mayor here and had served in the Georgia legislature as a representative and state senator.

Shooting Bee in Delaware.

Wilmington, Del., March 6.—One policeman dead, two patrolmen mortally wounded, and a fourth policeman and two citizens slightly injured is the result of a running pistol battle today with two desperadoes who were trying to escape arrest as suspicious characters. Both were finally captured after one of them had been shot twice and slightly wounded.

The dead policeman was Francis X. Tierney. The two patrolmen fatally wounded are Willard I. Sharpless and Horace McDannell.

The men gave their names as Peter Krakus, 30 years old, and Charles Moras, 20. Krakus said he came here Tuesday from Baltimore.

OSSOSKI TRUE BILL VOTED?

Grand Jury Reported to Have Indicted Former Trolley Claim Agent as an Embezzler.

Indictment of Sidney Ossoski, former claim agent for the Chicago Railways company, on a charge of embezzling $117,000 from the company was voted yesterday by the March grand jury, it was reported. Ossoski lost his position with the company several months ago when an investigation by officials is alleged to have disclosed that he had been submitting false death and accident claims. E. C. Hagerman, former assistant to Ossoski, was one of the witnesses who appeared before the jury.

ENVOYS WILL LEAVE MEXICO UNLESS AIDED

Diplomats Threaten to Quit Capital; Wait Action of U. S.

HOPE OF SETTLEMENT.

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—The Mexican situation, while admittedly continuing grave, tonight is not without some evidences that a peaceful solution yet may be reached.

A new disturbing factor developed with the receipt at the state department of informal advices to the effect that the foreign diplomatic corps in Mexico City is considering leaving the capital.

Both Secretary Bryan and Counselor Lansing said that no formal report had been received from the American consular agents in Mexico confirming the reported intention of the foreign diplomats to withdraw. Messages received by foreign envoys here, however, stated that their colleagues in Mexico City were desirous of leaving unless conditions in the Mexican capital speedily became more tolerable. It was intimated that action depends to some extent on what may be the course of the American government.

Carranza May Heed Advice.

As against this disturbing factor the state department received late today encouraging advices indicating that Gen. Carranza might heed representations of the United States and direct Gen. Obregon, commander in the capital, to permit food and supplies to reach Mexico City.

Strong diplomatic pressure is being exerted both on Gen. Obregon and on Gen. Carranza, who is in Vera Cruz, for amelioration of conditions in the capital, where famine threatens. Gen. Obregon is being urged to accept the proffered aid of an international relief committee, which raised $125,000 to buy food and supplies for the needy, and to rescind his order refusing transportation facilities to bring freight into the capital.

On advices received from Vera Cruz state department officials based hopes that Carranza will instruct Obregon to permit the relief committee to import foodstuffs into the capital.

Diplomats Confer with Bryan.

Some of the foreign diplomatists here conferred during the day on their dispatches from Mexico City, and the uniform opinion was that affairs there rapidly are growing intolerable. Ambassador Naon of Argentina held a long conference with Secretary Bryan. The Spanish and French ambassadors and the Swedish minister also called on Mr. Bryan to discuss the situation.

President Wilson discussed the situation with Mr. Bryan, but pending the outcome of the representations with Carranza no further step has been planned.

The outbreak of an epidemic of smallpox at Tampico was reported to the state department. Twenty-nine cases are now in the hospital. Within the last three days eight deaths have occurred. With the expected attack on Tampico by the Villa forces, and the arrival of thousands of Carranza reinforcements, conditions in the seaport are becoming almost as uncomfortable for the foreign colony as in Mexico City.

Illinois Man Near Death.

Galesburg, Ill., March 6.—[Special.]—Charles J. Shannon of this city in a letter to relatives here says last Monday he narrowly escaped execution at the hands of Mexican revolutionists at Juarez. He went from El Paso to Juarez to mail cards to friends here, was taken captive, thrown into jail, tortured, despoiled of his clothes and valuables, and told that he would be executed.

He managed to smuggle a note to El Paso, and his release followed a peremptory demand by the United States authorities. Shannon's eyesight was badly injured during the ordeal. He says that two others confined with him were ordered executed.

American Woman Tells Hardships.

St. Louis, Mo., March 6.—"Half the population are out of work, many persons are dying of hunger, and many others are committing suicide rather than face starvation," states a letter written in Mexico City Feb. 24 and received here today. The letter was written by a woman who until recently was secretary to the president of an American concern in Mexico City. It continues: "I have not eaten of bread for three days and cannot get flour to make it. Most of the people here have to stand whatever happens, as they have no money."

Many Priests Are Imprisoned.

New Orleans, La., March 6.—Three hundred native priests are imprisoned in Mexico City and all the institutions with which nuns are connected have been closed, according to a statement given out here tonight by Archbishop José Mora y del Rio, head of the Catholic church in Mexico.

In addition 186 priests of foreign birth have been driven from Mexico City, the statement said, many having made their way to Havana, as did the archbishop.

CHICAGO BOY IS HONORED.

J. S. McKnight, Mine Engineering Student at Illinois, Elected Freshman President.

Champaign, Ill., March 6.—[Special.]—By an almost unanimous vote, J. S. McKnight of Chicago was elected president of his class at the University of Illinois today.

Banker Ends Life on Wife's Grave; Patrons in Panic

Italian Institution Guarded by Police After Finding of Body.

GRIEF GIVEN AS CAUSE

The body of Ignazzion Meccia, a member of the firm of Meccia & Manno, Italian bankers and steamship agents at 515 West Oak street, was found upon his wife's grave in Mount Carmel cemetery yesterday. The discovery of Meccia's body followed an all night's search for him by the police after an appeal had been made by the banker's family when he did not return to his home at 3851 North Hamlin avenue.

A revolver was found near Meccia's body. A bullet entered under his chin and passed out at the top of his head. Grief over the death of his wife a year ago is thought by relatives to have been the cause of the banker's suicide. He was left with six small children.

Writes Letter to Gleason.

Meccia sent a letter to Chief of Police Gleason naming a man and his family as the cause of the suicide. This man could not be located last night and his name is not used because he has been given no chance of making a reply to the charge. In the letter Meccia said:

"For the last seven years I have been unable to balance my accounts and have been unable to locate many documents, and I cannot locate the money. If the law cannot handle this may God damn them."

Ignatz Manno, Meccia's partner, late last night appealed to the Irving Park police for a bodyguard. He said that depositors of the bank had called him by telephone and threatened his life. Patrolman Larson was detailed to watch Manno's home at 4046 North Parkside avenue.

Rush on the Bank.

As soon as the news passed about the Italian settlement in the neighborhood of the bank that Meccia had been found dead, there was a rush of depositors to obtain their money from the bank. A squad of sixteen police was sent to the bank by Capt. Samuel Collins of the Chicago avenue station.

Late in the afternoon the following sign was hung in the front window of the bank:

BANK CLOSED ON ACCOUNT OF DEATH OF MR. MECCIA. WILL BE OPENED IN A FEW DAYS.

This had a reassuring effect on the crowd of depositors which had surrounded the bank all day.

Bank Also Postal Station.

The bank also acted as a postal substation. Acting upon the direction of Joseph Natter, auditor of the Chicago postoffice, the mail on hand and the other property of the government was moved to the Chicago avenue distributing station.

Meccia and Manno have operated the bank at the Oak street address for eleven years. It was said to be one of the leading institutions among Italians.

Manno refused last night to give a statement of the condition of the bank other than to say he did not think Meccia's suicide had anything to do with the bank's affairs. He declined to tell the number of depositors or amount of deposits.

Treasurer of Italian Societies.

It was said Meccia in addition to his banking business has for a number of years acted as treasurer of several Italian fraternal and social organizations. It was thought the amount of money he had on hand from these societies would run into thousands.

Meccia left the bank Friday night at about 4 o'clock. When he did not arrive at home at 7 o'clock one of his children called his nephew, Joseph Anzelino, who works at the bank. He informed the children their father had left the bank as usual for home and said he thought he would be there soon.

When Meccia did not come home at 11 o'clock Anzelino asked the Chicago avenue police to help locate him. The banker, according to Anzelino, frequently carried large sums of money with him and it was feared he had met with an accident.

GUARDIANS OF LIBERTY INVITE FULL INVESTIGATION.

Offer to Bare Facts to Commission Which Is Inquiring Into Anti-Catholic Agitation.

The executive committee of the Guardians of Liberty yesterday issued a statement inviting a full investigation of their activities. A particular invitation was sent to P. H. Callahan of Louisville, chairman of a commission formed by the Knights of Columbus to investigate anti-Catholic agitation. The statement says in part:

"While we cannot be classed among the anti-Catholic organizations, we have been accused of being closely associated with them, and from experience in our work we are in a position to give valuable information regarding the very matters this commission desires to investigate."

The invitation is signed by W. F. Bigelow, state guardian, and Richard E. Abrams, state recorder.

JOHN D. JR. TO VISIT MINES.

Young Rockefeller Will Inspect Colorado Coal Properties—To Ignore Employment Situation.

Denver, Colo., March 6.—John D. Rockefeller Jr. will visit Colorado, probably early in April, but his trip will be confined to inspection of the properties of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. This was the announcement of Jesse F. Welborn, president of the corporation, on returning here tonight from New York. The employment situation is to continue to be left to the local representative of the Rockefeller interests, Welborn said.

NEW ZEALAND DEFENSE PLAN LESSON TO U. S.

Militia System of Antipodes Would Aid America, Says O. K. Davis.

WAR DEFINITION GIVEN

BY OSCAR KING DAVIS.

"'War' means an invasion or apprehended invasion, or attack or apprehended attack on the dominion of New Zealand, or any part thereof, by an enemy or armed force."

That is the official definition of what constitutes war for New Zealand, as duly set forth in the closing paragraph of section 2 of the defense act of that dominion. Having enacted that definition, the parliament that framed it went ahead to make provision for what the colony should do to meet the emergency if it should arise.

That definition of war comes very close to hitting exactly what the average American has in mind when he begins to think or talk about the preparedness of this country for war.

We do not think or talk about being prepared to invade any other country, and we have no desire to undertake such an invasion.

However, most of us do desire to be well and thoroughly prepared to resist successfully any attempt by any other power on earth to make an invasion of our territory.

Beyond America's Necessity.

The provisions for war made by the New Zealand parliament come very close to realizing the ideals of the most advanced advocates of that kind of American preparedness. In fact, owing to its small population, New Zealand goes considerably beyond what would be necessary in this country. It proceeds upon a principle which, although recognized by implication in our constitution and by specific provision in some of our statutes, has never been put into actual practice in the United States, except in part in the civil war.

When the average American speaks or thinks of the possibility of war for this country there is nothing farther from his mind, as a rule, than the idea of the United States deliberately initiating war upon some other nation.

No Motive of Aggression.

Upon one point of military policy there is practically complete unanimity in the United States. The American people agree that we are not actuated in any degree by motives of aggression. Our borders are wide enough, and there is nothing in the way of territorial possessions beyond them that we covet.

The only expansion we desire is commercial. It is true that wars do arise out of the conflicting efforts of competing nations for commercial supremacy. But not a corporal's guard could be raised in this country to wage an aggressive war the avowed purpose of which was commercial expansion, and if that were the ulterior motive of the men in control of the government it would have to be mighty well concealed to escape being ferreted out and exposed, with consequent disruption of their plans.

Many Divergent Views.

There is another point of military policy on which the people of the United States are practically agreed, so far as public profession of belief goes. That is the point of adequate defense.

However, when it comes to transplanting profession into action, when it is proposed to give a practical definition of "adequate defense" that shall apply to the entire country, and when something more than mere lip loyalty to that profession is demanded, a different situation at once arises. Then it immediately becomes apparent that the ostensible unanimity is really an irreconcilable composite of many radically divergent views.

The man who wants and is willing to help pay for a big army and a big navy is no more firm in his declaration that only adequate defense is his object than is many a man who firmly believes that "adequate defense" is merely psychological; that it is only rightly found in a high moral attitude, and that neither army nor navy is really requisite to its attainment.

Australia Takes Action.

At the same time that New Zealand was adopting the statute from which this definition of war is quoted, the parliament of the neighboring Australian federation was adopting a measure for the same purpose, identical in principle and closely similar in outline. Even in details many provisions are virtually the same, and for all practical purposes, so far as their application to this country is concerned and their value as a lesson to the United States, the two systems may be considered as one.

There is a striking similarity of circumstance and conditions in Australia and New Zealand also, which gives special weight to the application of their military policy to our situation.

It is a fact that in the United States opposition to military preparedness and to military service has found large and growing support in the ranks of organized labor. Rightly or wrongly the labor leaders have believed that military strength, especially that of the state militia, is used to the detriment and even oppression of their organizations and their membership.

To some extent labor leaders have made propaganda against the support of military forces or institutions by members of their organizations.

Among no self-governing peoples on the globe, however, have the demands of organized labor for special legislation and consideration received the hearing and attention that have been accorded to them in New Zealand and Australia. In those two British colonies labor has had a larger share in legislation and in the direction of the local government than anywhere else on earth, even than in this country, where politics always lends so sympathetic an ear to the recommendations of labor organizations and their leaders.

NEW ZEALAND OFFERS U. S. OBJECT LESSON.

The social and industrial legislation of New Zealand and Australia has been held up as a model for years by those specially interested in the improvement of social and industrial conditions in this country.

It is a fact of great significance, therefore, that it is in these two countries which have given practical effect to their advanced social ideas that such a great step in the military preparations of the people for territorial defense should have been taken.

It remains to be seen whether or not the example of the antipodes will be regarded as worthy of imitation by the labor interests of this country and, if not, what arguments will be devised here against it.

Defense Acts' Basis.

The defense acts of both Australia and New Zealand are based upon the proposition that every male citizen of those countries owes them military service.

The laws seek to make sure that such service shall be efficient, and to that purpose there is established in each colony a system of training which begins with the schoolboys and follows them into manhood.

Except for certain obvious exemptions, which are statutory, every boy in Australia or New Zealand who is physically fit begins to receive military training and instruction at the age of 12 years. This training and instruction continues and increases year by year during a period of possibly eighteen years, or until the boy has become a man of 30.

There is a way—one way—for him to escape the full training during the later years of this period. That way is by proving that he does not need it. That proof is made by becoming efficient.

Each Man Classified.

At the close of each year's instruction there is an official inspection at which every man is classified by the inspector as "efficient" or "nonefficient."

In New Zealand a man who has been classed as "efficient" for three consecutive years moves out of the training section into the reserve, and thereafter has only two muster parades a year to attend.

In Australia a man must have a larger number of "efficients" to his credit to be exempted from further training. The Australian must have eleven such ratings, but in his case the rating begins while he is still a schoolboy, so that the actual period of manhood service is not much greater than in the neighboring colony.

Example to United States.

It is in these provisions for training generally all the boys and young men of the colonies that the defense acts of New Zealand and Australia present their special example to the United States.

There was a time when we undertook to see that every able-bodied man in the country had a certain amount of military exercise each year. Nearly 123 years ago, by the act of May 8, 1792, congress laid uupon "every free, able-bodied white male citizen of the respective states, resident therein" between the ages of 18 and 45 the duty of enrolling in and training with the militia. Every man was required to provide himself with "a good musket or firelock" and "two spare flints," as well as with certain other necessities of good soldiering, and he was to hold these free from all processes for debt.

A system of districting and enrolling was provided, and the militia was to be "arranged" into divisions, brigades, regiments, battalions, and companies.

No Penalty Fixed.

It was an elaborate plan, containing two good features, and several bad ones, one of which was sufficient to doom the experiment to failure from the day of its inception. It laid upon the individual the responsibility of providing his accouterments and fixed no penalty for failure to do so. In fact, congress had no power to enforce that kind of an act, or to make the states enforce it.

"General training day" was a part of the regular autumn frolics of the young men for a number of years, however. There are men yet living who remember going out as boys with their fathers to the grand skylarking of "general training."

The measure had only the degree of success that lay in its power to furnish amusement. It never became a serious matter with the people generally.

Under it a swarm of frivolous and incompetent officers were appointed by the different states, who were the only ones to regret the early and certain failure of the scheme.

Neither Colony Handicapped.

Neither Australia nor New Zealand is hampered by the constitutional restrictions upon the organization or use of the militia that have always operated in this country to prevent the development of high-grade efficiency in that branch of our national defense service. Each is at liberty to onsider the interests of the colony as a whole, without deferring to the political peculiarities of the separate units of which it is composed.

Consequently each is able to adopt a militia system based upon a centralized authority wihch focuses responsibility and makes for efficiency.

New Zealand Plan.

The powers granted to the governor or New Zealand by its defense act would make the people of the United States quiver with outraged astonishment, if seriously proposed here. No such complete trust and confidence has ever been reposed in any man in this country, not even in George Washington, as by that act the people of New Zealand repose in their governor, a man whom they do not even select themselves, but who is appointed by the British crown.

The defense forces of the dominion are divided into three classes: Permanent forces, territorial forces, and militia. The governor fixes the number and determines the qualifications of the permanent forces; makes the regulations for their enrollment, promotion, training, discipline, arms, appointments, clothing, transportation, pay, rations, and everything else that they have to do, including their punishment and dismissal; in fact, in the language of the act, "anything deemed necessary for effectually carrying this act into effect."

Governor Appoints Officers.

Apparently he is the one who is to determine when anything is "deemed necessary." He may appoint and commission as many officers as he likes and assign them to duty as he pleases and may "summarily dismiss" such officers.

He may buy or contract for munitions of war or erect factories for their manufacture. He may lease or buy lands for training camps and rifle ranges, or set apart crown lands for those purposes.

The governor is the supreme authority in the execution of the militia law and on his proclamation may call the militia into active service in time of war.

The militia is not required to serve beyond the territory of the dominion, however, unless it volunteers to do so.

Enlistment in the permanent and territorial forces is voluntary, but all able-bodied men are enrolled in the militia.

Exempt from Militia Service.

Of course the permanent and territorial forces are not counted in this enrollment, and there are other exemptions, including judges and members of the executive council and general assembly, secretaries and undersecretaries of the general government, telegraph clerks, postmasters, mail carriers and ferrymen, railway men, customs men, clergymen, sheriffs and constables, doctors of medicine, wardens and keepers of prisons and asylums, and all school teachers who are actually employed, as well, of course, as the physically unfit.

These exemptions cover service in the militia or the regular forces. They do not exempt from the general obligation to undergo military training. That begins for every boy on the first day of February of the year in which he attains the age of 12. At that time every boy of that age is registered and enrolled as a member of the junior cadets.

The training of the junior cadets is carried on chiefly under the direction of the school teachers, but boys who are not in school are enrolled as well as those in school.

Become Senior Cadets.

They remain in the junior cadets until they reach the age of 14, or leave school, whichever is the later. Then they are enrolled in the senior cadets, and their training increases.

They remain in the senior cadets until they reach 18, or leave school, whichever is the later, when they are enrolled in the general training section. There they stay until they are 30, unless they enlist in the permanent or territorial forces, or by virtue of three consecutive ratings as "efficient" are drafted into the reserve.

The training of the junior cadets is under the supervision of the minister of education; that of the senior cadets and general training section under the minister of defense. The junior cadets are organized into military companies with noncommissioned officers appointed from their own number, and with commissioned officers selected from among their teachers, or from the general training section, or reserve. It is by rendering this training service that the school teachers win their exemption from service in the militia.

Time Minimum for Juniors.

An annual minimum of fifty-two hours of training is prescribed for the junior cadets. It may be extended by the minister of education, who may require attendance at such drills or parades as he sees fit. The training is simple, consisting of daily fifteen minute periods of infantry squad drill, swimming, running, first aid, or practice with miniature rifles, which are furnished by the government.

No uniform is required, and the government allows $1 a year for each pupil in the schools to meet the cost of ammunition, maintenance of equipment, and other necessary expenses.

The effort of those in charge of the training is not to develop specially expert individuals, but to establish general proficiency. Standards are established, and regular inspections made.

From the very beginning it is made distinctly worth the while of every boy to do his best. If he develops a liking for the military service, the road is open for him to promotion and rank. He may go on from the senior cadets and the general training section into the territorial or permanent forces and win a commission by competitive examination and proof of his qualification for it.

If the military service has no appeal to him the best way to get out of it is to complete the requirements in the shortest possible time, and he can do that by becoming and remaining "efficient."

Senior Cadets Uniformed.

Substantial military training commences when the boys reach the age of 14 and are enrolled in the senior cadets. For four years they are trained in "discipline, elementary military exercises, and musketry or gunnery." They are organized in military units and assigned to the defense forces in each district. The minimum training required is six whole days, twelve half days, and twenty-four night drills, aggregating eighteen days.

Senior cadets are uniformed, and each receives a personal record book which is designed to cover his military history until he reaches the age of 26. It contains the regulations for military service with information as to the rewards for merit and the results of failure. If a cadet is absent from any drill without permission he must attend two extra drills as punishment.

Most of the military exercise is at company drill, but there are also battalion drills, company field training, and a liberal amount of target practice. Familiarity with arms is taught among the junior cadets by the use of miniature rifles, but the senior cadets use the regulation weapon.

Their target practice is at bull's-eye and figure targets up to a range of 400 yards.

Spanish War Experience.

What a wonderful transformation in the efficiency of the United States for national defense such a system of training of our schoolboys would work!

The experiences of our national volunteers in the war with Spain proved beyond all question their ignorance of the simplest requisites of soldiering. It was this ignorance and inexperience that in chief part caused the terrible scourge of sickness that ravaged all our instruction camps in the summer of 1898 and brought about a situation where in one camp alone the sick list rose to more than 4,000 cases a week.

As senior cadets the boys of New Zealand and Australia receive regular and competent instruction in the routine of camp life and are taught to keep themselves and their surroundings clean and in proper sanitary condition.

Such training makes boys not only proficient for military service but self-reliant and competent to meet the demands of civil life, and is a positive benefit to them all from every point of view.

To give the boys of the United States six years of training in the regular discipline of military exercise, six years of setting up and drill, and the good, sound open air work of camp life would produce a tremendous result in the upbuilding of physical manhood in this country.

Must Be Physically Fit.

Of course, only those senior cadets who are fund physically fit are drafted into the militia.

There is an inspection at the close of each year of training. At that inspection all the senior cadets who become 18 years of age in that year receive a special examination by the medical officers and are rated as fit, conditionally fit, temporarily unfit, unfit, or "not substantially of European origin or descent, or belonging to a religious organization whose doctrines forbid military service."

It is noteworthy that adherence to a religious doctrine which forbids military service does not exempt a boy from the obligation of undergoing the preliminary training as junior and senior cadet. That is because the training is good for him physically, and as a cadet he is not bound to undertake actual service. But when he reaches the age where he is otherwise liable to render actual service in the field his religious scruples, if he has them, are respected, and he is exempted from active military duty, but is assigned to noncombatant service in the supply departments.

16 Per Cent Rejected.

All the senior cadets classified as fit pass at once into the militia, or general training section. Those conditionally fit are retained for another year as senior cadets unless there are vacancies in the militia companies of their districts. The temporarily unfit are retained as senior cadets for another year. The unfit are exempted altogether. About 16 per cent are rejected annually on physical examination.

When the young men pass from the senior cadets into the militia and become liable to do full military duty in the event of war, their training is by no means ended. On the contrary, it continues for a number of years, and is materially increased in annual amount.

To begin with, they are carefully assigned to the various arms, chiefly on their physical qualifications. The biggest and strongest men go to the garrison artillery, with the engineers, field artillery, cavalry, and infantry following in order. Men otherwise fit, but whose eyesight is below normal, are sent to the service and supply corps.

Annual Training Minimum.

The annual training for engineers and artillery is twenty-five days as a minimum, of which seventeen must be spent in camp. All other arms have a minimum of sixteen days' training, of which eight must be in camp.

A great deal of time and attention are devoted to target practice, but all arms and corps are thoroughly exercised and taught the essentials of practical camp life.

Training is stimulated by competition between selected teams from the different companies. Each company sends a team to battalion competition. The best teams from the different battalions then take part in a brigade competition, and the winners represent their brigades in a division or district competition.

The division winners, in turn, are the contestants in the commonwealth competition, in which each man on the winning team receives a gold medal. District winners receive silver medals.

Each competition, from company to commonwealth, is in the whole scheme of training, including target practice, physical drill, tactical exercises, and all the duties of a soldier. Each team is composed of one officer and forty-three men. This competition produces a keen rivalry which has a great effect upon the efficiency of the whole body of militia.

The militia is well paid for the time devoted to training, enlisted men receiving 75 cents a day; sergeants, $2.50; lieutenants, $3.75, and other grades in proportion. In some cases allowances are made for the support of the family during the absence of its head on military duty.

Commissioned officers are selected from the ranks by competitive examination, and all promotions are from the next lower grade. To win a commission one must agree to serve twelve years as an officer. For promotion above the grade of captain the practical examination counts two-thirds.

If an officer fails to win promotion from his grade within a fixed number of years —five as lieutenant, four as captain, and three, as major or lieutenant-colonel—he is transferred to the unattached list.

He has the help of special schools of instruction in preparing for examination for promotion. While in attendance upon such schools quarters and board are furnished by the government, as well as text books, but officers receive no pay for such time. Officers on the unattached list serve sixteen days each year on special duty.

First Line of Militia.

New Zealand holds its men in the first line of the militia longer than does Australia, which has nearly five times the population of its neighbor. The Australian period of service is from 18 to 26 years of age, while that of New Zealand runs on until a man has reached 30 years. But in New Zealand three consecutive "efficients" at annual inspection send a man from the militia to the reserve, whereas it takes seven consecutive efficients to secure that result in Australia. Even then they must follow four efficients secured in senior cadet service.

The young Australian who reaches the age of 26 with less than eleven efficients marked down in his military record book must go right on training with the militia until he secures that number. No man goes into the reserve in either colony until he is officially pronounced proficient.

Liability to military service in time of war continues until a man has reached the age of 55 years.

Three Classes in Militia.

The militia is divided into three classes. The first is composed of unmarried men from 18 to 30 years of age. Class 2 consists of married men between 18 and 30 and unmarried men between 30 and 40. Class 3 is composed of married men between the ages of 30 and 55 and unmarried men between 40 and 55. The militia is called into service for war by classes in order of their number.

Two provisions of the New Zealand defense act are specially noteworthy. To put the new scheme into effect required at the outset a complete registration of all the men and boys of the dominion.

To insure the registration of every man and his sons the act provided that failure to register forfeited the right of a man to enroll as an elector and to hold any position in the government service. Thereafter when a man came to register for an election, if he could not show that he had registered under the defense act he could not be enrolled. Practically he had lost his suffrage.

In this country a provision of that kind would serve sooner or later to get pretty nearly all the men and most of the suffragists.

Liable to Punishment.

The other provision referred to concerns enrollment in the militia. Failure to respond to that duty or to appear for training when enrolled is held to be desertion or absence without leave, as the case may be, and is liable to punishment as such under the military procedure.

Employers must not interfere with employés to prevent the performance of training or other military duty and are specifically prohibited from dismissing employés or reducing their wages because of their connection with the militia. If any employé is penalized the burden of proof is put on the employer to show that it was for some other reason than connection with the militia.

No intoxicating liquor is allowed in any military canteen or upon any training ground or in any training camp. Stringent provisions are made regarding the care of public property, arms, accouterments, and equipage, with severe penalties for misuse, loss, or sale. A schedule of pensions is fixed, allowances to be granted by the governor.

Force for Defense.

With a population of 4,500,000, Australia will have about 100,000 senior cadets and approximately 130,000 militiamen between the ages of 18 and 25. It will have another 100,000 junior cadets receiving preliminary training. New Zealand, with a population of about 1,000,000, will ultimately have a trained and dependable force of more than 100,000 men for the territorial defense.

The expense of this preparation compared with the military expenditures of the United States, expenditures which, however great in amount, have never served to provide an adequate national defense, is barely large enough to merit another description than trifling.

The Australian budget for 1912-'13 carried less than $15,000,000 on account of the militia and its training, as well as providing for the small regular force. At that time there were 2,719 men in the permanent forces, 43,731 militiamen actually under training, and about 89,000 senior cadets.

5,000,000 for Junior Cadets.

In the United States there are something more than 5,000,000 boys between the ages of 10 and 14, such as would be enrolled in the junior cadets, if that system were to be adopted here. There are 5,000,000 more between the ages of 15 and 20, who would furnish the senior cadets and the first two classes of militia.

Making deductions for the physically unfit, who would not be drafted from the cadets into the militia, and for those who for one reason and another would be exempted from military service, it is estimated that the establishment of the Australian system in this country would produce in the course of a short time a corps of more than 3,000,000 junior cadets, with fully as large a corps of senior cadets.

Result in United States.

There would soon result a national militia running into the millions, and it would take but a few years to have a reserve of trained and efficient men so large as practically to insure that no nation would ever contemplate for long the problem of attempting an invasion of this country. That would be a reserve from which our regular army could be expanded in time of need to substantial size and still retain its high qualifications as a fighting force.

Moreover, it could all be accomplished on an expenditure vastly smaller than the sum that is absolutely certain to be thrown away with reckless extravagance under our present lack of system the moment that any danger from outside seriously threatens us.

In the application of some such system as this to the problem of the United States may easily lie the solution of our national defense.

EX-CHICAGOAN WRECK VICTIM

Edward Branick, Formerly Engineer at Wells School, Killed in California.

Riverside, Cal., March 6.—[Special.]—Edward Branick, formerly engineer at the Wells school, Chicago, was among those who lost their lives in a Santa Fé train wreck at Elsionore, Cal., yesterday. Branick was the owner of a motion picture theater in Los Angeles.

The wreck occurred when the train was derailed and the rear coach dropped into the river. Eight of the fourteen injured were still unconscious this evening.

Charles Branick of 3631 Colorado street, a brother, was notified of the death last night by The Tribune. He said his brother went to California some years ago after he resigned from his place in the public schools.

INDIANA DOOMS TRADING STAMP BY HIGH LICENSE

Legislature Passes Bill Backed by Merchants; Suffrage Up Again.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 6.—Senator Thornton's bill to wipe out the trading stamp business was passed by the house today by a vote of 79 to 7 and sent to the governor for his signature. It requires a license of $1,000 from merchants who wish to engage in the business. This license, it is believed, will spell the trading stamp's doom. Merchants were behind the bill.

This bill is aimed at trading stamp companies and would not affect tobacco coupons. Rebate systems of individual merchants are specifically exempted.

Suffrage Question Bobs Up.

The house bunched the remaining Stotsenburg amendments proposed for the state constitution and killed them by unanimous action. The legislature was immediately confronted by the woman suffrage issue in a new form.

The women's lobby flashed a resolution for a constitutional amendment on full suffrage for women. Even should this proposed amendment succeed in this session, woman suffrage could not come before the general election of 1918, because of a constitutional provision requiring that two assemblies approve proposed amendments before they are referred to the people.

Woman Labor Bill Killed.

Hours of labor for women will be unlimited in Indiana for at least two more years, for the house killed the bill which had been so amended that the limit was ten hours a day and fifty-five a week. Representative Niblack and others, who believe in limiting hours of woman labor, united to kill the bill after the house had refused to make the limitation more strict.

The bill making Gary a city of the second class was signed by the governor today. The governor also signed the Van Nuys bill, which will enable him to appoint Gilbert H. Hendren, chief of the state board of accounts, for a new four year term.

Durned Expensive, by Cracky!

Farmer Anton Krueger of Niles Center came down to Evanston Friday night to see the sights. Policeman Earl Felton came upon him early yesterday as he was taking them in through windows in the southwestern section of the city. Later he paid an "admission" fee of $5 and costs to Justice John F. Boyer.

QUACK ADMITS HIS QUACKERY

"Dr." Glover Uses "Needle Stick" Method for All Ailments.

ONE PATIENT FARES ILL

"Dr." John Glover of 222 Wisconsin street is a quack and admits it. He does not deny what the records show—that he is not licensed to practice in Illinois and never has had any regular medical education.

"Dr." Glover's method is unique. He has one treatment for all diseases. He treats every kind of an ailment, and with "marvelous success," according to his own admissions. He modestly owned that most of his cases were chronic ones or those that other doctors had given up as hopeless. Cancer, tuberculosis, goiter, gallstones, all respond to his ministrations, he says. He has no office and gives all treatments at the residences of his patients.

$5 a "Treatment."

He explained his methods yesterday to a reporter from The Tribune.

The "doctor" calls to treat each patient once every two weeks. Each visit nets him $5. There is no prescribed number of visits in any case. They are generally continued until the patient runs out of money or is "cured."

On the first call he uses an instrument with a number of sharp needles in it. With this he makes what he calls artificial "pores" in the skin.

"Of course," said Mrs. Augusta Johnson of 1211 Melrose avenue, one of the patients the reporter saw, "this is very painful. I don't believe I could have stood it, but the doctor gave me some wine and then it wasn't so bad."

The "doctor" gives all his patients wine, he says. He next rubs an oil over the places punctured with the needles. The "doctor" calls this oil oleum.

One Woman's Experience.

After the "oleum" is rubbed in the patient is wrapped in cotton and waits two weeks for the next treatment.

Mrs. A. Bolster of 3459 Racine avenue was another of the "doctor's" patients, and somehow her system did not yield readily to his ministrations. She became alarmed and called in a regular physician. The licensed practitioner found her suffering intensely from the quack's treatment.

Another physician was summoned and Mrs. Bolster was relieved. The physician told The Tribune reporter that when he was called in he found Mrs. Bolster in a serious condition. The quack treatment cost Mrs. Bolster $10.

DEMOCRATS PUT PLEDGES ASIDE AFTER VICTORY

Party Shown to Have Passed Up Many Promises Made in the Platform.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 6.—[Special.]—That the Democratic party so far has ignored the majority of the pledges it made the people in its Baltimore platform is the charge which soon will be submitted to the public in amplified form by the Republicans and Progressives.

An analysis of the history of the Sixty-third congress, which expired last Thursday, will be presented to show that the Democrats made no pretense of an effort to redeem many of these political obligations. Dozens of measures advocated by the Democratic platform were refused committee consideration, and in some cases not even a single bill was introduced by any Democrat for the purpose of bringing the recommended reforms before congress.

Words of Wilson.

"Our pledges are made to be kept, when in office, as well as relied upon during the campaign," the final plank in the Baltimore platform reads. During the campaign Mr. Wilson declared:

"Our platform is not molasses to catch flies. It means business."

The only concrete results of efforts made to redeem the party platform promises are:

Passage of a low tariff law.

Passage of an anti-trust law.

Passage of a banking and currency law.

Passage of a federal trade commission law.

Single Term Pledge.

Congressman Rucker of Missouri, chairman of the house committee on elections of president, vice president, and members of congress, was asked what progress had been made toward redeeming the single presidential term pledge.

"I think," he replied, "that Senator Cummins of Iowa introduced a resolution for an amendment to the constitution making that change."

"Has any committee held hearings on it? Has any action been taken?" was asked.

"No."

"Will any be taken in the next congress?"

"I cannot speak definitely as to what will be done, but I do not anticipate any action."

"Why not?"

"Well, every one knows the president is not in favor of it."

Civil Service Pledge.

The record of the administration on civil service is in striking contrast to its platform pledge—"The law pertaining to the civil service should be honestly and rightly enforced to the end that merit and ability shall be the standard of appointment and promotion rather than service rendered to a political party," the platform reads.

Since the beginning of the present congress all the deputy United States marshals and the deputy collectors of internal revenue have been taken out of civil service by riders to appropriation bills. They had been under classified civil service for a number of years.

As a result of their removal from civil service protection practically all the places have been filled by Democrats who rendered service in past elections.

When the income tax section of the tariff law was under discussion in congress it was proposed that the 300 deputy collectors of internal revenue who would be added to collect the tax should be placed under civil service, but that plan was defeated. The new places were placed in the patronage bag.

Forty thousand fourth class postmasters, many of whom had been on the civil service rolls for a number of years, were required by the Democratic postmaster general to take examinations along with applicants for their jobs.

The names of three eligibles for each office were certified to the postmaster general by the civil service commission after the examinations were held. Democratic congressmen in whose districts the offices were located brought pressure to bear to secure the selection of Democrats, even though Republicans passed with higher ratings.

Failed to Become Law.

"We pledge the Democratic party to the enactment of a law prohibiting any corporation from contributing to a campaign fund, and any individual from contributing any amount above a reasonable maximum."

When Congressman Rucker was asked what steps his committee had taken toward fulfilling that promise, he replied:

"An act of congress, approved Jan. 26, 1907, makes it unlawful for any corporation to contribute. I introduced a bill providing for publicity in primary elections such as is provided for general elections, but that measure did not become a law in this congress."

Urged Preference Act.

President Wilson urged congress to enact a presidential preference primary. Soon afterward the Republican and Democratic members of Mr. Rucker's committee were invited to Washington's most fashionable hotel to have luncheon with Secretary of State Bryan and Solicitor Folk, so that plans might be discussed.

The next heard of it was that the matter had been referred to the attorney general for an opinion. Later it was reported that the attorney general had said he could not give an official opinion, because it had not been asked for by the chief executive.

Unofficially, some doubt was expressed as to the constitutionality of the proposed law. Since then nothing has been heard of it.

Legal Question Involved.

When Mr. Rucker was asked concerning it, he said:

"It has not taken tangible form. An important legal question is involved. It really is a constitutional question."

"As a matter of fact, I haven't made any statement about that, because we are all at sea as to the proper view to take of it. I do not want to say it interferes with constitutional provisions, because that would be an attempt to construe it. Yet I do not want to say it does not for the same reason.

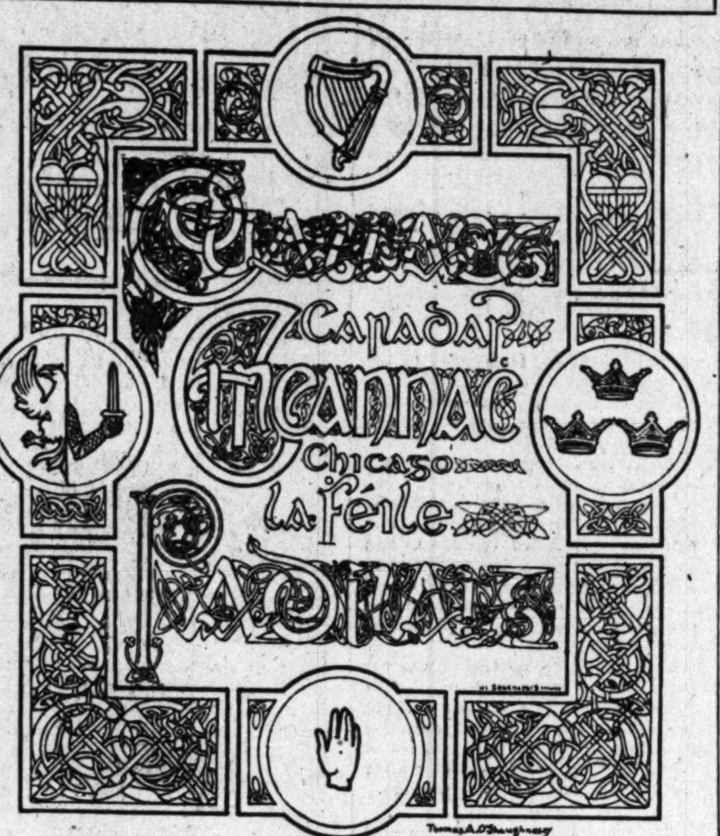
"The constitution provides that electors equal to the number of senators and representatives shall be selected to vote in the electoral college. These are to be chosen in such a way as each state shall prescribe.

"The proposition of President Wilson was to provide a method of direct nomination of candidates for the presidency. Nomination by primary is a form of election and in many instances is equivalent to election. Hence the query arises: Does not an act of congress providing for direct nomination in a sense conflict with the constitutional provision which delegates to the states the sole power of choosing the electors?

"We denounce the profligate waste of the money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation through the lavish appropriations of recent Republican congresses, which have kept taxes high and reduced the purchasing power of the people's toil," the economy plan of the Democratic platform states.

This plank serves to emphasize the difference between promise and performance. Instead of a return to "simplicity and economy" the first year of the Wilson administration was marked by appropriations of $10,000,000 in excess of the largest amount ever appropriated by a Republican congress. According to Congressman Fitzgerald of New York, chairman of the house appropriations committee, the appropriations this year exceed the $1,116,000,000 high water mark of last year by several millions.

Modern Example of Old Irish Art.



The Irish art cover design for the Irish Fellowship club St. Patrick's day banquet, designed by Thomas A. O'Shaughnessy, is described as an elaborate piece of modern Irish art.

This is the fourteenth Irish art design produced under the auspices of the Fellowship club in its campaign for revival of the almost lost art of the Irish people.

This year's design embodies the coats of arms of the four provinces of Ireland, Leinster, Munster, Connaught, and Ulster. Leinster is represented by the harp in gold on a green field; Munster by three gold crowns on a blue field; Connaught, an eagle on a blue field, an arm with sword on a white field; Ulster, the red hand of the O'Neills on a white field.

FIREMEN URGE VOTE AGAINST THE TWO PLATOON SYSTEM.

Pamphlets Circulated Among Citizens Indicating Higher Expense and Less Efficiency.

Pamphlets urging citizens to vote "No" on the adoption of the two platoon system are being circulated by the Helmet club, an organization with which most of the Chicago city firemen are affiliated. Against the system it is urged that there will be an additional cost of $1,000,000 a year to taxpayers, with a concomitant loss of efficiency in the department.

Washington, D. C., March 6.—Government revenues have begun to show slight increase, due largely to the usual spring import business with consequent enlarged receipts from customs. The treasury deficit, which a few weeks ago was in the neighborhood of $85,000,000, has fallen to about $80,000,000, and in the next few months there may be a further reduction.

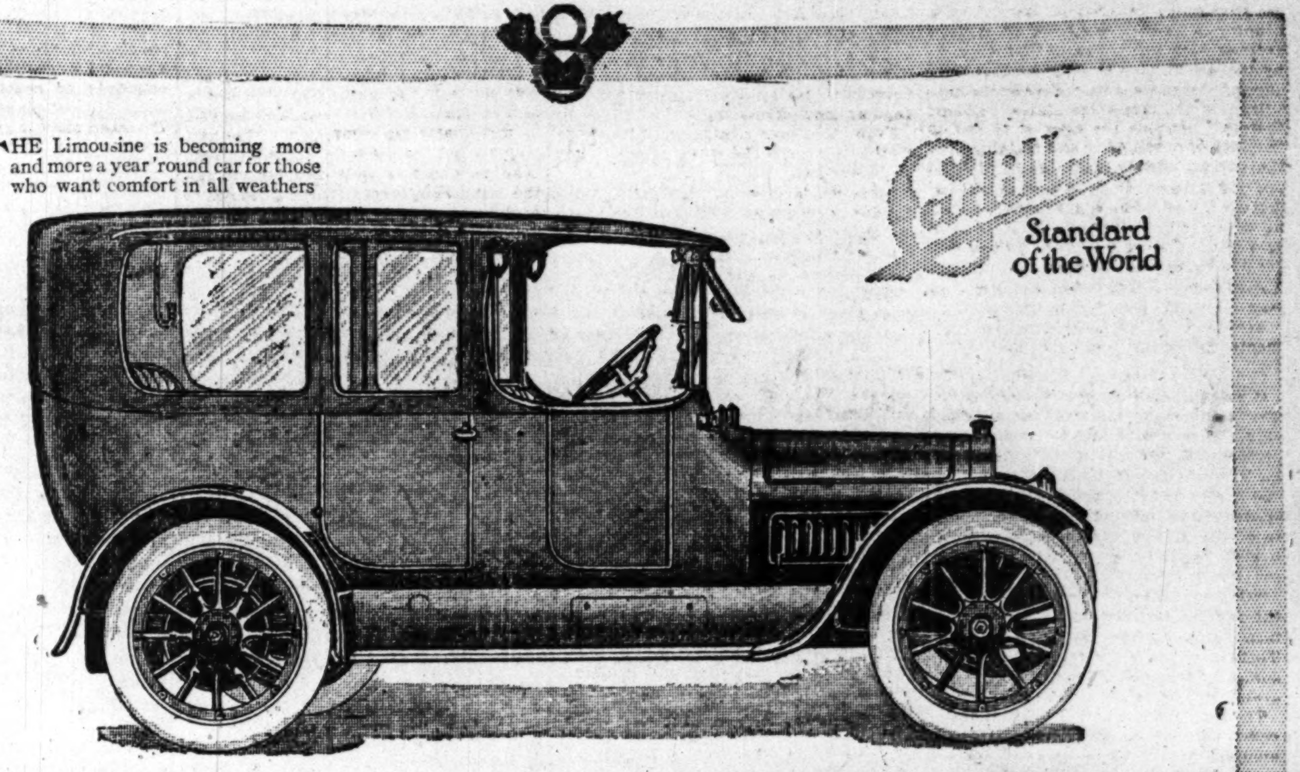
THE Limousine is becoming more and more a year 'round car for those who want comfort in all weathers

Cadillac
Standard of the World



What owners say about the Cadillac Eight

Everybody wants to know what this epoch-making car is doing in the hands of owners.

"Does it oil satisfactorily?" "How about the cooling?" "Is the timing perfect?" We hear these a dozen times a day from men who think they see something that the Cadillac engineers overlooked.

Then again: "Is the engine really as quiet as they say it is?" "Do they actually drive without gear changing?" "Will it dash ahead of all other cars?" These things that seem too good to be true are asked of us again and again.

What's the answer? Let the owners talk. Nearly 200 of them in Chicago today. Here are a few extracts from their recent letters:

"As you know, I shipped my Eight Cylinder Cadillac to California and I am delighted with its performance. It runs up a 10% grade over the mountains as easily as going down the other side. I don't want a better car."

"I never had a car that was anything like as satisfactory as this Eight Cylinder Cadillac Sedan. I have driven the car a good deal myself. For flexibility it beats anything I have ever handled and I have handled several 6's. When driving I simply put the handle throttle back as far as it will go and do everything with the foot accelerator—do not shift the gears at all except when I have to start the car under difficult conditions. When you step on its tail it jumps like a jack-rabbit."

"We have driven our new Cadillac Eight 3,000 miles and up to this time have no unfavorable criticism to make of the car or its performance. The engine has operated perfectly. It starts easily and quietly and has a flexibility and lack of vibration beyond anything I have ever known."

"It is certainly superior to any car made within my knowledge. The engine has proven to be most efficient and easy to control. It is certainly a pleasure to handle an engine that responds so quickly to changes of speed."

"A friend of mine owning two —— cars which cost him $4800.00 apiece, said the Cadillac made all the cars he had ever driven look like tin pans."

"In regards to using gasoline will state, from what my friends tell me, who own other makes of cars, we are doing 25% better in gas than they are."

"I have never ridden in an easier riding car than this Eight Cylinder Cadillac; besides it is an easy driving car and the control could be no better, and it seems to have ample power."

"I have been driving cars for ten years and I have driven this Eight Cylinder Cadillac for about a month. It is the most satisfactory car I have ever driven without any exception. Its flexibility and absolute lack of vibration are wonderful. I have absolutely no fault to find nor any criticism to make on the car."

"The manner in which my new Eight Cylinder Cadillac picks up is a wonderful revelation to me. I can start my car standing still on high. I very seldom shift gears."

"I have driven my car about 800 miles and I find it the best car I have ever driven, including the best foreign makes and I highly recommend the Eight Cylinder Cadillac."

"Before deciding to purchase an Eight Cylinder Cadillac I went into the mechanism of the car very carefully. You will always hear criticisms of any new machine turned out, but rumors that I have traced down I found without any foundation, and I feel that you can rest assured that the Cadillac Company with their past reputation would not be willing to turn out a machine with such a radical change in design without first being positive that it would meet the requirements."

"After ten days' experience with and use of the new Eight Cylinder Cadillac, I am free to confess that I am very much enamoured with it. It certainly runs sweetly and silently—seems to have plenty of reserve power."

"I find it the smoothest running thing on wheels. Since the Cadillac Company has confidence enough in the Eight to stop building the best Four that was ever built, you certainly can afford to take a chance on their judgment."

"Regarding the Service Department which you maintain, I would say that this is extremely satisfactory and efficient. I have never received from it anything but the most courteous and prompt attention at any and all times upon which I have called upon it."

These are just a few sentences from a huge pile of enthusiastic letters. We will be glad to send you all of them to look over, if you wish—or a list of Eight Cylinder owners to whom you may write.

The performance of the Cadillac in the hands of owners has settled the eight-cylinder "Question" forever. If you want your Cadillac in the spring, better see us now.

> "Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
> —Stephen Decatur.

"OUR COUNTRY, RIGHT OR WRONG."

Citizenship's spiritual aspect is patriotism which cannot be skeptical or apprehensive but must be ardent. It is an emotion which does not deny intelligence—is best guided by it. Nevertheless, it is an emotion, spiritualizing the mechanics and materialism of citizenship which without it would be an accident of geography or represent a mere choice of conditions promising comfort.

Patriotism is an idealization of the bonds which hold many people together and give them common direction toward accomplishment. It must stand upon unity or it must strive for unity. A reservation of the right to act individually upon individual judgment in all matters of national concern might be maintained in a land filled with people, but not in a nation composed of citizens.

Here in the United States we may inquire if we have not been permitting our conception of a country to become one of an organization which merely disciplines our acts, which meddles with business or coddles business, which collects taxes and wastes money in pork barrel appropriations, an organization of congressmen and postmasters, politicians and insincere rhetoricians, an organization which concerns us only when it annoys us and which we indulge but do not respect.

Decatur's phrase, like a trumpet before Jericho, shatters that conception, and that is why it is much thought of by people to whom true patriotism is as high and ennobling a thing as the truest ethics. The ethical revulsion from the phrase "right or wrong" does not lead to safe and certain ground but to extremely unsafe ground.

If "our country" meant nothing more than the mechanics by which it operates, the machinery by which its work is done, the most profound emotion we should feel toward it would be a little less than what we know as civic pride, a feeble and unexhilarating thing—a little less because in a city there is likely to be at least a close community of interests.

It may be that the progress of humanity is toward an ideal of universal brotherhood which will eliminate national distinctions, national boundaries, national aspirations, which will destroy the national ego, magnificent and inspiring as it is. It may be also that the progress is toward the dissolution of the responsibility of parenthood and the assumption of such obligations by the state. In either case it is toward a dried apple existence. Each case involves emotions of the highest nobility.

We have insisted thus far that national consciousness is an essential possession. Patriotism is its idealization. Whatever injuries that consciousness receives are serious hurts. A purely mechanistic nationality would not be hurt, but it would evoke about as much enthusiasm as a civil service law.

The mechanism of "our country," the government, may go wrong. It may confuse error and sound judgment, injustice and justice. The whole system of our government acknowledges that it may and provides means by which citizens may correct defects and achieve progress toward their ideals. Decatur's "may she always be in the right" represents the highest national aspiration of most Americans. Their chief pride is that the nation's ideal is to be in the right.

But there are times when the need of unified national expression and action transcends the individual's right to sit in judgment upon what is right and what is wrong—as if either were clearly defined and easily recognized—when it denies the propriety of an assertion of the small individual egotism and demands the assertion of the great national egotism.

Otherwise we try to measure our patriotism by our individual judgment, and, regardless of the need, to give it or withhold it.

Literal persons of ethical preciseness endeavor to base their arguments on extremes which are clear out of reason; but, inasmuch as they do, they make proper an argument which likewise goes beyond probability. One extreme is as warrantable as the other.

By an error or by determined policy the mechanism of the country might commit it to an undertaking which, although in error, being defeated might mean more than temporary injury, possibly a disaster, to the country. "Our country," if it means anything to patriotic citizens, represents an instrument for the betterment of humanity. A disaster to it would mean disaster to their ideals. To support their country they follow the government of it through a project which could not win their support if it were not for the emergency involving the country itself.

Opportunity for the betterment and correction of government agencies is offered in times when there is no stress, no pressure of circumstance or exigency upon the nation as a whole. The time for such correction is not when the agencies given authority by the people have committed the people to a course of conduct which needs the support of a unified country.

People of genuine patriotism will be glad to make the distinction between the mechanism and the ideals of "our country." The former may invite criticism, censure, or reproach, but the latter stands upon the devotion of citizens who are not skeptical or timid or dubious. They are united and determined. Of such nations are made. Without them nations are not. Therefore: "Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."

"DOLLAR CHASERS."

We suspect that a dollar, unattached and seeking to preserve its freedom, could roll farther in an American street and be followed by fewer pursuers than in any European city. Therefore we are at a loss to understand the complacency with which our European friends regard us as completely and contemptuously described in the phrase "dollar chasers."

Our national pride never has suffered acutely from this. When the pot and the kettle were engaged in their celebrated conversation the kettle must have been preserved from any excess of wrath by observing the sooty virtues of the accusing pot.

The nations of Europe are now engaged in a trade war. The commercial traveler went ahead of it. The shipping clerk stands back of it. If Americans wished to indulge in that sort of generalization which describes them as dollar chasers, they could say that Europe is seeking the dollar at the cannon's mouth.

This is a commercial nation. It never has had a military caste nor a dominating code of military precepts. Its aristocracy has sprung out of commerce, is constantly fed by commerce, and made by commerce. But from the bellhop who trades a pitcher of ice water for a dime to the malefactor of great wealth who trades his conscience for control of a railroad, there never have been more beads of perspiration gathered on the American brow in pursuit of coin than have assembled on European foreheads in the same occupation.

We do not recall that, with the exception of slavery, there is a period in our history which reveals the United States in the exploitation of another people for the money they might have, and, curiously enough, the slave episode involves the least practical, the least commercial, and most sentimental of our people.

We do not believe any other nation ever treated people whom it had subordinated or overcome with greater consideration for their financial welfare, ever put fewer imposts upon them.

Europe will sell its great names, its treasures of art, its soldiers, and virtually everything it has for the dollar. The kettle is bound to be a bit puzzled by the contempt expressed by the pot.

OPERA IN WAR TIME.

At a distance, and even by some elements here at home, the bankruptcy petition of the Chicago Opera company is likely to be misconstrued. The object of the company's petition is to cut certain knots, clear up doubtful points raised by past contracts—chief of which points is connected with the war clause of the singers' contracts—and put out of the way obstacles to reorganization. The company is not seeking to evade any legal or moral obligations. None of the donors is trying to recover, as "creditor," sums paid generously toward support of the cause of operatic music.

The matter with the Chicago Opera company is not internal but external war. The great European conflict has upset art conditions along with all other conditions. In spite of the disastrous tour of the company last season a reorganization would probably have been effected this year, and the city would have had a bright and gracious season of opera had not a world war broken out last summer. True, there is opera in Vienna, Berlin, Paris, and London. There is opera at Petrograd and Moscow, perhaps even at Warsaw. But it is well known that "belligerent" opera is largely prompted and maintained for the sake of the singers, musicians, stage hands, scene painters, etc., who would starve if the opera houses were closed indefinitely. In the darkest days of the war Vienna was giving brilliant opera at half rates to packed houses. London editors and music critics have been pleading with the public to attend opera and concerts "as usual" as a matter of charity to the performers.

Here in Chicago the opera question is a question of effective demand and interest on the part of a group of music lovers of means. Opera must be endowed or subventioned; public subvention being as yet out of the question, private citizens of wealth must come to the rescue and cheerfully meet rather heavy deficits. The unfortunate experiment of the late New York Century opera in this city demonstrated once more that the general public will not rush to or jam opera houses from a sense of duty or patriotism. Opera will not draw unless it is first rate. It is an esthetic luxury, and if Chicago wants this luxury we shall have good opera next year regardless of the formal bankruptcy proceedings.

THE MANIFOLD APPEALS FOR GIVING.

[From the Springfield Republican.]

The National Association of Audubon Societies for the protection of wild birds and animals finds its regular subscriptions falling away because of the stress of the times, and it appeals for special help in order that the cause of bird protection may not go backward in the legislatures or through the undermining of laws already enacted by congress or in the states. Those who can spare more money will be expected to respond to this appeal, and every member of the association should be especially watchful in his locality against any reactionary movements in legislation. In this way no real ground needs to be lost.

The situation in which the Audubon societies find themselves is a commonplace at this time. The mails are full of statements of need and requests for assistance from organizations representing every sort of philanthropic and educational work. This evidence of the demoralization which has grown out of the war in Europe is never ending in its flow. Those who have money to give will do well to lay down the broad proposition that they will assist, to the extent of ability, the established causes whose work is most vital to the social welfare. It is a time for intelligent choice, and for givers and receivers to make their money go just as far as it can be stretched.

One of the vices of recent years has been the multiplication of all sorts of organizations with objects often more fanciful than vital. The element of personal exploitation has been permitted to have a great run, for we are an amiable, if not a careless, people. New societies are not needed where older ones can be made to do the work. It is in order to strengthen the hands of the really essential, and not to strain a point in favor of fads and fancies not always well considered. When Springfield centers her attention upon making her Union Relief association a more powerful agent for the intelligent relief of local need she is setting the best kind of an example.

[Copyright: 1915: By the Brentwood Company.]

When Admiral of the Fleet Lord Fisher was summoned from his well earned retirement in his seventy-second year, to supersede Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg as first sea lord of the admiralty, in deference to popular sentiment, I intimated in these letters that there was not room in the great marine department at Whitehall for two such masterful men as himself and Winston Churchill. This has turned out to be the case.

Winston Churchill's office is not thoroughly understood, even in England. He does not possess the executive powers at the admiralty which he enjoyed as secretary of state for the home department. Formerly the executive head of the navy was the lord high admiral. This office has been in abeyance since the reign of George IV., when a commission or board was formed to fulfill the duties of the lord high admiral.

The board was composed of a first lord, who hitherto always has been a civilian with a seat in the house of commons, where he speaks in the name of the navy, and who acts as chairman of the board; also of four sea lords, the senior in rank being now Admiral of the Fleet Lord Fisher. Then there are two civil lords, who rank after the sea lords, and who concern themselves with the civil duties of the administration. Besides these, there is a financial secretary, who always has a seat in parliament, and who acts as assistant there to the first lord.

Strictly speaking, the executive of the navy is vested in this commission or board collectively, it being thoroughly understood that the professional matters, such as the direction of naval maneuvers in peace and strategic operations and dispositions of the fleet in times of war, should be left entirely to the first sea lord, assisted by the other sea lords.

The people have learned, through the presence of Lord Kitchener at the war department, the advantage of having a professional soldier, rather than a civilian, as minister of war—especially in war time. From this they have gathered that it would be well if the direction and control of the naval defenses of the empire were confided to a member of the seafaring profession, such as Admiral Lord Fisher, who occupies in the eyes of the people much the same position with regard to the navy that Lord Kitchener does with reference to the army. Therefore, it is considered probable that he will ere long succeed Winston Churchill and take his seat in the cabinet.

It is intimated in the cable dispatches that since Winston Churchill's position at the admiralty has become difficult, if not intolerable, he is to be appointed to succeed Lord Hardinge as viceroy of India. While this may prove of great personal and political advantage to Winston Churchill, it is doubtful whether it would be to the benefit of India.

The possession of India is indispensable to the power, the prosperity, and the grandeur of the British empire. For a hundred years or more its dusky population of over 300,000,000 has been governed by a ridiculously small but picked body of English officials, with the help of about 70,000 white troops; that is to say, a mere handful of men compared with the size of the population of India.

At the head of the British officials in India is the viceroy, who represents the king-emperor, and to whom all the native rulers of India are compelled to defer as if he were the Kaisr-i-Hind. It is therefore imperative that he should be a man of the greatest tact and dignity, of the most delicate courtesy, with a profound regard for the feelings of others, and, in particular, a marked consideration for native customs, traditions, ethics, caste, and prejudices.

But Winston Churchill is extremely impulsive, both in speech and in manner, and has always lacked tact. At Delhi, which has now taken the place of Calcutta as the capital of the Indian empire, and at Simla, he would be like the proverbial bull in the china shop, and might, as viceroy, work irreparable harm to the interests of England in India; that, too, at the most critical moment of the history of Great Britain.

One can readily appreciate the necessity of finding some office for Churchill, in order to compensate him for his loss of the first lordship of the admiralty, with its salary of $25,000 a year, which is of importance to him, as he has no fortune of his own and is a poor man. It is also of importance to the government that the office found for him should be out of the cabinet and, above all, out of England. For were he to remain at home, without office, he would become a source of great trouble and danger to the administration.

To Winston Churchill himself the position of viceroy offers many attractions. In the first place, there are the emoluments, which comprise $100,000 a year salary and allowances of at least as much more, with magnificently furnished palaces at Calcutta, Delhi, and Simla, and all sorts of perquisites, besides prerogatives of an absolutely imperial character. Indeed, there is no office of such magnificence, splendor, and prestige in the gift of the British crown as that of viceroy of India.

As everything is virtually paid for by the Indian treasury, from the highest member of his staff down to the lowliest member of his household, the viceroy can, if he wishes, save the greater part of his salary. While some governors general have even exceeded their emoluments, others have retired from the post with a nest egg sufficiently large to assure to them a competence for the remainder of their days.

Then, too, Winston Churchill would, as viceroy, receive a peerage, and might, like Lord Curzon, insist on having an Irish barony, which would enable him to return to the house of commons on the completion of his term in India.

COFFEE.

Coffee is a drug. Those who are addicted to its use are drug addicts. The people of the United States are among the largest users of coffee of all the people of the world. Its use is on the increase.

From the standpoint of public hygiene the coffee question is worth while. It is much the most widespread form of drug addiction. Some people are certain that coffee is of service to them. Some are equally certain that it harms them. Many are much interested, though they are in doubt whether it benefits or harms them. The largest number enjoy their cup of coffee, and they care not at all whether it harms them. From the standpoint of individual hygiene the coffee question is worth while.

Two-thirds of the coffee entering the markets of the world comes from Brazil. That country exports twenty times as much coffee as the Dutch East Indies, the coffee from which is commonly called Java. Little coffee is exported from Arabia, and practically none from the small Mocha district. Of the small amount of Arabian coffee exported the best goes to Turkey and Egypt, near-by markets.

The world's use of coffee per year amounts to about 16,000,000 bags. In fact, the disposition to overproduce in Brazil is so strong that the government exerts itself to maintain the price of the berry.

The only approximately accurate figures on the use of coffee we have are those for the United States, the countries of western Europe, and Australia. The people of Holland in normal times use about fifteen pounds of coffee per capita a year. Norway and Sweden follow, each using about fourteen pounds. The per capita use by the people of the United States is twelve pounds. The German people use about seven pounds, and the British, Canadians, and Australians about one pound.

Some of the peoples use tea instead of coffee. Probably the Chinese and Indians are the most inveterate tea drinkers, but there is no way of knowing the per capita use of the drink by these peoples. The New Zealanders, Australians, and nations composing the United Kingdom are the heaviest users of tea. They consume more than 6.5 pounds per person. The Canadians use 4.3 pounds; Hollanders, 1.45 pounds; Russians .94 pound; American, .89; Germans, .11; and French, .06.

Tea contains about twice as much caffein as does coffee. By multiplying the per capita amount of tea by two and adding it to the pounds of coffee, we get a fair idea of the relative use of caffein containing beverages by the races for whom we have statistics.

We find that the Hollanders lead with seventeen pounds. They are followed by the Swedes and Norwegians. Next comes a group composed of the people of the United States, the British, including English, Scotch, and Irish, and the Australians. Their rate of consumpion is around fourteen pounds. The Canadians use nine and six-tenths pounds. The Germans use about seven, and the Russians about four.

Legend tell us that the Chinese used tea 3,000 years before the birth of Christ. Europeans began to use it in the sixteenth century. In the seventeenth century its use in England was fairly well established. By the eighteenth century the English people were using it at one-third the per capita rate now prevailing.

For centuries governments have always exerted themselves to promote the traffic in tea. During the 5,000 years prior to the time when trading and plantation companies, backed by government grants, strove to develop the planting and merchandising of tea, its use as a beverage seems to have been limited to rather a small part of the Chinese people.

On the other hand, coffee has had its troubles. The legend is that the use of coffee was discovered in Abyssinia. A flock of sheep which fed on coffee berries was wakeful and restless at night. After a while these coffee jags attracted the attention of one shepherd after another, and presently some of them investigated the cause and tried the berry.

The Arabians began the use of coffee before the fifth century. Its use was becoming so general in the time of Mahomet that the Koran prohibited its use.

Hollingsworth, who in 1912 published the best study of the effects of caffein which has come to my attention, says that the average cupful of hot tea (five fluid ounces) contains one and five-tenths grains of caffein. An after dinner cup of black coffee (two fluid ounces) contains one and five-tenths grains of caffein. An average glass of iced tea contains two grains of caffein. An average cup of good coffee and milk (three ounces of coffee and two ounces of milk) contains two and five-tenths grains of caffein.

Prof. Hollingsworth's study was made on a "poison" squad of sixteen people. The test lasted forty days. Its purpose was to find whether moderate doses of caffein had a good or bad effect on persons who took it.

Generally speaking, he gave doses of less than six grains a day. Let us say that most of his subjects took less than three cups of coffee a day. His conclusions, therefore, apply to people who take two cups of coffee a day.

When more than six grains a day was the dose the subjects were harmed. He did not study the subject of the prolonged use of coffee nor its effects on digestion.

It has been well established that coffee is a good muscle and nerve stimulant. "That it lightens the sensation of fatigue and sustains the strength under prolonged and severe muscular exertion." "That coffee squads come in first in endurance tests, water squads second, and alcohol squads last." That coffee produces "a feeling of buoyancy and exhilaration comparable to a certain stage of alcoholic intoxication, but which does not end in depression or collapse."

Rivers' study establishes the point that the stimulation from caffein is not followed by the letting down which follows the use of alcohol and other stimulants.

Hollingsworth found that there was no secondary reaction following the use of caffein in the tests made by him. Even when the dose given was large enough to produce bad direct effects, there was no katzenjammer.

The Hollingsworth tests were to determine the effect of caffein on the control of the muscles, the motor nerves, the nerves of coördination, and on certain kinds of mental activity.

A type of result was that shown by a test known as the tapping tests. The effect began ninety minutes after taking a small dose and forty-five minutes after a large one. It lasted for one to two hours for a three grain dose (a large cup of coffee) and for four hours and a half after six grains (two very large cups). No secondary effects followed within seventy-two hours.

Another test was to determine whether coffee made the hands tremble. One to four grains of caffein caused a slight tremor. Six grains (two very large cups) caused an appreciable unsteadiness of the hands, coming on about an hour after taking and increasing for three hours.

Muscle movements requiring several muscles to work together with proper relation to one another were better and more thoroughly carried out when a small dose of caffein was given than without it. On the other hand, six grain doses of caffein produced a retarding effect.

It was found that typewriting was speedier after one to three grain doses of caffein (half a cup to a full cup of coffee), but that is was slowed up by two full cups. Typewriting was freer from errors when the operators took coffee. This was true even after two large cups.

A series of tests to determine whether the mind worked better with or without coffee showed in a general way that mental processes were improved by coffee. The effect came on from two to four hours after the drug was taken, and it lasted into the next day. The stimulation was not followed by mental depression.

These studies prove that a man can increase the volume and the quality of the work, both mental and physical, by taking one-half to one cup of coffee a day. When he takes two large or three ordinary size cups of it, he improves some of his capacities but lessens others.

The groups of people experimented on were not specially fatigued or tired. In this connection it is well to recall the experiments by Rivers, which prove that, when a man is fatigued, coffee will increase his capacity for work either mental or physical.

However, this is only one side of the question. Various other phases are of some importance. A great many people are interested in knowing the effect of coffee on sleep. Hollingsworth came to the conclusion that the sleep of the average person was not disturbed by taking one to four grains of caffein (one-half to one large cup and one-half of coffee) a day. Some of the people experimented upon slept poorly from even that quantity. When one cup of coffee a day was taken for several days sleep was disturbed on the second or third day in certain instances in which there had been no disturbance on the first day.

Most of the people who took six grains a day (a little more than two large cups) slept poorly; in consequence, when the coffee was taken with the food, the harmful effect was much less than when it was taken alone. Fat people stood coffee better than thin ones. The morning cup of coffee did not disturb sleep so much as coffee taken later in the day.

The age of the individual did not affect the effects of caffein on the people experimented on; nor did previous coffee habits.

One subject investigater by Hollingsworth was the influence of caffein on the general health. At the end of forty days of this test "the subjects quite uniformly report improvement in health, spirits, and general efficiency. This is, perhaps, due to the regular régime of life followed during the forty days."

When we examine the reports of the individuals we find that some of them were definitely nervous at times, had headaches, palpitation, and indigestion. This rarely happened with a small daily dose. Some form of disturbance was frequently noticed when the daily dose equaled six grains a day.

When we apply these results to the habitual use of coffee, we must bear several facts in mind:

First, the work was done with pure caffein. A cup of coffee contains several other ingredients, some of which have physiological effects.

Second, when the caffein is translated into terms of cups of coffee the dosage used is not large.

Third, the tests extended over forty days. Most of the people who want to know about coffee have in mind the use of coffee for forty months or forty years.

Fourth, the tests were, in the main, to determined whether coffee immediately increased mental and physical power and whether there was sag within a few days.

A little information was gained as to cumulative effects, headache, sleeplessness, and one or two other incidental questions of prolonged effects. The broad question of ultimate effects of prolonged use was snot inquired into.

Bearing these limitations in mind, the following conclusions seem justified by the work of Hollingsworth and that of Rivers so frequently quoted:

1. Caffein in small doses (one to four grains) increases the quantity and quality of mental and physical work.
2. Caffein in larger doses (six grains and over) decreases the above capacities as often as it increases them.
3. Caffein increases the capacity for work of a tired brain or tired muscles.
4. Caffein produces a sense of buoyancy and wellbeing.
5. The stimulating effects of caffein are not followed by the depression which follows the use of other drugs.
6. The amount of caffein in one full cup of coffee does not produce sleeplessness or nervousness. Many took the amount in two cups without discomfort. Many were disturbed by two cups. When the amount taken went beyond the amount of caffein in two full cups the majority were harmed by it.
7. The effects of caffein are less in fat people than in thin ones.
8. The effects are much less when the drug is taken with food.
9. The drug is somewhat slow in exerting its effect. Generally more than an hour was required. Often two or three hours passed before the effect was felt, and some of the effect commonly held over until the next day.

PROPERTY OWNERS MUST PROVIDE CANS.

Chicago, March 2.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I have lived in the neighborhood of Fifty-second street and Homan avenue for the last eight months and have never seen the garbage or ashes removed. The people in this vicinity not having proper receptacles to deposit their refuse and ashes insist upon throwing it in the street and alley. Kindly have the same remedied and oblige,

I. E. COHAN,
5206 South Homan avenue.

The settlement known as Elsdon is an isolated community, two miles west of the nearest regular ash and garbage district, and no service has been given in the past owing to the physical condition of the streets and alleys in that territory. The streets and alleys are unimproved and the residents have been using the ashes to fill in their parkways, low streets, and alleys. The superintendent of the Twenty-ninth ward will make an effort to give service in this community and will serve notices on the residents to provide the necessary cans.

HAS RIGHT TO CHALLENGE VOTER.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please tell me what authority a precinct officer has with respect to challenging a voter. In the last election I refused to inform the officer who I voted for two years ago and was therefore not allowed to vote.

M. MAGINN.

A judge or clerk of election has always the right to challenge a voter. If the voter challenged refused to state how he voted at a previous primary held within two years previous to Feb. 23, 1915, the judges of election would have a right to refuse him a ballot under section 48 of the primary act, which provides that no person shall be allowed to vote at a primary election who refuses to state his party affiliation.

CONCERNING DIVISION FENCES.

Pullman, Ill., March 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am the owner of a piece of property and would like to know if I am obliged to keep half of both sides of a fence in repair or merely the whole side of one fence.

A SUBSCRIBER.

Adjoining property owners are under equal obligation to maintain division fences. You are responsible for one-half the cost of maintaining the fence on each side of your property.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RIGHTS OF INJURED EMPLOYES

Chicago, March 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me whether a person who has been employed by a large corporation for over fifteen years and who, while working for them, became injured and was told by the head of the department to remain at home until he felt better can demand his salary for that time. If refused the salary would he be justified in suing said corporation?

A CITIZEN.

If this corporation is operating under the workmen's compensation law the injured employé is entitled to necessary first aid, medical, surgical, and hospital services, not to exceed the amount of $200, and in addition compensation equal to one-half of his weekly earnings, but not less than $5 nor more than $12, beginning on the eighth day of his incapacity, and continuing as long as the incapacity lasts.

LIABLE FOR BOOKS.

Chicago, March 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My wife signed a contract for a set of books and I in turn notified the company that I did not wish the books and asked that they call for them. Can this company garnishee my wages for a contract signed by my wife without first securing my permission?

A SUBSCRIBER.

Under the law of Illinois the husband is liable for family expenses incurred by the wife, and the court decisions indicate that books are family expenses. In this situation this company can bring suit for the purchase price, and if they obtain a judgment proceed to collect by means of garnishment.

CONCERNING TRANSFERS OF REAL ESTATE.

Chicago, March 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—If a widow in the state of Indiana makes a deed of her real estate and it is left in the care of another person till after her death and then put on record, would such a transaction stand the test of the law, or can you give me a better way for the disposal of the same?

W. L. M.

Transfers of real estate should be supervised by an attorney. It is possible that this woman can accomplish what she desires in the way you suggest. However, she should have the necessary deed prepared by an attorney, or, if he considers it advisable, she should make a will instead of a deed of this property.

HOLDS KANSAS DRY LAW FAILURE.

Cincinnati, O., March 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In view of the studied campaign of falsehood and gross exaggeration that has been waged in all parts of the country, it is not surprising to note that the state-wide prohibition bill introduced in both branches of the New York legislature should be given the title, "An Act for the Prevention of Pauperism and Crime."

As secretary of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' association, let me suggest as a substitute, "An act for the creation of a commission to investigate and explain why, if Kansas is the model prohibition state, where prohibition has had sway for over thirty-four years," Kansas ranked behind fourteen out of twenty-three federal census registration states in 1911 in the matter of homicide rates, twelve of the fourteen being then license states. Kansas had a higher rate of prisoners confined for grave or lesser homicide in 1910 than had twenty-four states then in the license column. Kansas had a higher rate of prisoners for all offenses in 1910 than had nine states then license. Kansas had a greater number of paupers in almshouses in 1910 per 100,000 population than did ten license states. Kansas had a higher average annual divorce rate in the last period tabulated by Uncle Sam than had thirty-one license states. Kansas had a higher rate of divorce to wives on account of drunkenness than had fifteen license states. Kansas had a lower rate of church membership in 1906 than had forty-one states then license. Kansas' per cent of population enrolled as church members was 28.4, while New York's was 43.7. Kansas had more insane in hospitals per 100,000 population in 1910 than did sixteen states then license. Kansas for several years has not had room in her state hospitals for all her insane and feeble minded, and has had to keep some of them in the counties. The recently issued report of the state board of control contains frequent reports like this: "John Smith turned out of — hospital to make room for Jim Jones." Kansas had in 1910 more juvenile delinquents per 100,000 population than had sixteen states then license. Kansas, by the 1913 report of the United States controller of the currency, had less savings depositors per 100,000 of population than did thirty-two states then in the license column. Kansas has lost 18,843 population since the 1910 federal census, according to a Kansas state census, but Kansas is more than 18,843 shy in the way of population, the 1914 total being 112,791 less than the federal census bureau figures it should have been had population increased since 1910 at the same rate it did from 1900 to 1910.

When the proposed commission finishes investigating these points about the banner prohibition state there are others that might be inquired into with profit. The figures as given in my proposed substitute bill heretofore outlined are based on the latest available United States reports and a Kansas state report, where any one interested may verify them.

Soul of Goodness in the War

In the following article the noted English author discusses the spiritual outcome of the present European conflict and points out what should be the first ethical result.

By Frank Harris.

WITH that sweet thoughted wisdom which distinguished his mature work Shakspeare recognized that there is always "some soul of goodness in things evil"; but if it is exceedingly difficult to foretell who will win in this world struggle, it is almost impossible to forecast the spiritual outcome of it. One can speak perhaps with a little confidence in generalities; but as soon as one tries to be concrete and definite, doubts swarm and thought is distracted. Still, one thing is certain; world shaking events always embody moral lessons; war is a great exposer of shams and revealer of virtues. A desperate struggle is sure to set real values in high relief.

What, then, are the chief values already discovered, and what the pretenses? The first value which has hitherto been underrated is the British command of the sea; we all esteemed it highly when we thought about it at all, but it wasn't sufficiently present to our minds as a unique force, a singular advantage. There is much more sea than land on this earth of ours, and England, not content with possessing more than half the temperate zone, possesses also, or at least rules, all the seas. Sooner or later that condition of things must cease; sooner or later the seas and oceans, like the fields of air, must be neutralized in the interests of all nations and policed by all peoples in some rough proportion to population and power. Thus, it seems to me, should be the first ethical result of the present contest.

It may take years, or even decades, to bring the ideal to fulfillment; but this war has shown that when one power holds the hegemony of the seas the rights of all neutrals are injured and neutral trade placed at the most serious disadvantage. It is the old story of the strong despot dethroned by the combination of the many weak.

All virtues, all powers, one sees, will be set in higher relief. Before the war no one imagined that Germany would not only gain an enormous initial advantage but would hold it month after month, and when more than half a year had passed would still be warring in the enemies' countries. Germany is so much better organized, so much more efficient than the allies, that in spite of the fact that their populations outnumber its as three to one, it has been able to put in the front line as many soldiers as they can muster, and, Belgium and Serbia now being used up, Germany's relative power probably has grown, rather than diminished; its comparative success, too, has almost certainly increased its relative strength.

The reputation of Germany has already grown out of all calculation. For a century or more to come it probably will be regarded as the model state, and its institutions will be imitated, its institutions copied, all the forms of it aped and assimilated, while the informing spirit of it may pass almost unappreciated. The success of Germany is calculated to stereotype and fossilize German institutions and to relax rather than to quicken the inspiring genius. When we prove ourselves superior to our neighbors it is only natural that we should rest on accomplishment and seek to enjoy the fruits of our labors. Besides, German success in war is sure to be followed by an extraordinary growth of German industry and commerce, and nothing weakens moral fiber and mental effort so much as material prosperity. Let us consider, then, how Germany is likely to suffer from this slackening of "the will to surpass."

Germany is a curious amalgam of a hierarchy framed and fitted for war, grafted on democratic institutions and inspired in civil life by an intensely democratic spirit of equality and willingness to work—a sort of despotism with strong socialistic tendencies. There can be no doubt that it is the despotic side which has been strengthened by the war so far, just as the nominal socialism has been weakened. And this process is certain to continue and increase, even if Germany holds but its own in the war and makes a draw of it.

National vanity will come into play, and the German Kiplings and Newbolts will all declare that no nation ever faced so formidable a combination of enemies without flinching. German valor and German virtue will be lauded to the skies; in fact, everything German will have an added value and take on a new luster. The first consequences are already showing themselves; the authority of the Hohenzollerns will be affirmed, the power of the military caste inordinately strengthened; German socialism will become critical rather than revolutionary; the reforming elements will all be weakened; German pride will appear to be a merit, and for some time the fighting strength of Germany will be increased.

If Germany in the result holds a suzerainty over Belgium and keeps control of Antwerp its oversea commerce and its navy will increase by leaps and bounds. At once its rivalry with England will become the central fact of the new time, and a contest with England for the hegemony of the seas and ultimately for South Africa, as a field of colonization, is as certain as anything can be.

Who will win in the desperate duel depends on the effect of the war on Great Britain, for it is surely obvious now to every one that Germany and England are the real rivals and foes.

What Germany ought to do at once is to conclude peace with Russia and with France and address itself to the real conflict, with England. It would have done that already if its diplomacy had been at all equal to its fighting power. Clearly it is now its most pressing need. But is it possible? one will ask. England has been very clever in binding both Russia and France in a treaty not to conclude peace separately. What can Germany do to untie the allied bond?

Bismarck would tell it to begin with Russia. The czar admires the kaiser; the Romanoffs are still more despotic than the Hohenzollerns; in many respects, too, the needs of Russia and the ambitions of Russia resemble those of Germany. Russia wants to get to Constantinople, above all things, as Germany wants to keep Antwerp. Germany can give financial aid to Russia almost as freely as France has done, and if Russia demands territorial aggrandizement it would pay Germany to give it Galicia for the sake of an immediate peace.

With Russia pacified, Germany could deal with France at once. It could offer to withdraw from French soil and even concede some French communes in Lorraine, or else overwhelm France and overrun the whole country. France could not hesitate. It would conclude peace, and so Germany would at length come to hand grips with its real enemy.

Face to face with England alone, Germany would quickly build a navy or at least submarines and airships enough to lame English commerce and send up the price of food in Great Britain to famine height. But why do I assume that Germany will show more initiative and forethought than England? Simply because it is showing more now

Already, had there been any prevision or ordinary foresight in Great Britain, its statesmen would have established vast granaries and filled them with American corn and American canned meats. Germany has already taken measures to protect its food supplies, and Germany's need in this respect is not a tenth so pressing as England's need. But nothing will ever teach the English oligarchy or dissipate their pleasure sodden dream of perpetual parasitical enjoyment except defeat in war. They have always "muddled through," somehow or other, and it is easier to go on from day to day, and from hand to mouth, than to think and, by thinking, avoid catastrophe and prepare triumph.

The great trinity of Asquith, Churchill, and Kitchener may be trusted to muddle sleepily along till they are awakened by a sudden terrifying rise in the price of bread and by the growl of revolt from the East End, hunger supplying courage. One-third of England's population is always on the verge of starvation, as Booth proved; this is England's desperate weakness. Half a dozen bread ships captured by the Germans or sunk by their submarines, and England would have to pay at once for the callous selfishness of its rich, the corruption of its judiciary, the inhuman shortsightedness of its politicians. There would either be a social revolution in England or it would accept defeat, hand Germany its sea scepter, and sink to the level of another Holland. Its oligarchy—its Roseberys and Sutherlands, its Manchesters, Rutlands, Norfolks, and Bedfords—might in their hearts prefer this latter alternative; but the English people are a proud and struggle loving people; once "up against it," they may be trusted to get rid of their snobbishness, make short work of their parasite masters, and get down to business.

The one hope of progress in England is sharp defeat in war.

But will England be defeated? Or will it not get Italy to strike in with it, and Roumania and Greece, and slowly hem in and finally crush its great German rival? Even in that case its day of trial can only be deferred; there is no abiding place in this world for such an oligarchy as that of England. I regard German virtue—that is, German efficiency and German valor—as the highest in the European world today; I do not believe that Germany can be beaten by the allies; but if it be defeated and forced to accept conditions of peace it will spring again to power, quicker than before, and will then be unable to make any mistake as to its real foe: sooner or later Germany and England must fight their quarrel to an issue.

It would be easy for England to put its house in order without the sharp compulsion of defeat and necessity; but I am convinced there is no hope of it. Those who think so don't know England, the numberless warnings it has had, and the adder ears it turns to every suggestion of right and justice, or even of enlightened self-interest.

Prophets have been sent to England such as Carlyle and Ruskin; but the English do not even listen to their Jeremiahs. Again and again, as in the South African war, England has only managed to escape defeat, and at an overwhelming cost; but still it won't stop even to think.

Let us suppose that the allies ultimately win, either through the defection of Austria, which seems the most likely cause, or through a gradual process of wearing down, or because of the entrance of fresh powers into the field, such as Italy and Roumania. Let us admit the worst—that Germany may have to consent to partial dismemberment. Every one knows how the English governing classes at the beginning of the war talked of giving Alsace and Lorraine back to France—in fact, of making the left bank of the Rhine the French boundary; Galicia, it was hinted, would be a suitable reward for Russia, or a new boundary line might be drawn through Danzig and Thorn, giving Königsberg and that slice of northeast Prussia to the Bear; then monetary compensation would have to be provided for Belgium; Helgoland would have to go back to Great Britain, with most of the German colonies in East Africa, and the Kiel canal would be destroyed or handed over to Holland.

What, in such a case as this, would be the spiritual outcome of the war? What soul of goodness would come to light?

France would have to be more on the alert and better armed than in the past; Belgium would have to ally itself closely with France for protection; Russia and England would palter on in the old way—the autocracy in the one and the oligarchy in the other would alone be satisfied. England probably would adopt conscription, might even take some half measures toward increasing its home production of foodstuffs, but in the main everything would go on as before, and—Germany? What would become of Germany?

Slowly but surely Germany would win up again; international capital is very acute, and international capital would flow to Germany. In ten years, or in twenty, according to the conditions imposed, Germany would again come to the front and challenge its rival. The next time England will not be helped by Russia, France, and Japan; and, by itself, it has hardly any chance of succeeding, for this reason: its ablest sons all go to India, or in England devote themselves to upholding the oligarchy, because of the rewards. There is no middle class education in England; hardly any high education of any sort; the mental product is woefully insufficient. I always come back to the same refrain: only through defeat will England be brought to its senses or turned into a modern state.

The task before England is gigantic; the oligarchy must be abolished, primogeniture done away with; the land must go back to the people; the middle classes must be educated; the judges must be democratized, their pay reduced to one-quarter of what it now is; the church must be spiritualized, and the pay of its bishops and archbishops diminished by at least four-fifths. Doctors and dentists should be paid a minimum wage by the state; scientists and artists, writers and journalists should be regimented and given professional status and a small salary; the mental and spiritual power of the state should be vastly increased and made independent; finally, every one should be trained to arms as a part of the national schooling in manliness.

Gay Capital of Austria in War Time

The London Times has engaged a literary man from a neutral country to write a series of articles dealing with life in the metropolises of Germany and Austria-Hungary in war time. The name of the author has not been disclosed. Herewith is presented his article on Vienna, the gay capital of Austria.

The [illegible] Times

HOWEVER unnatural it may seem, the effect of the war on life in Vienna has been to make it, if anything, rather more lively than ever. This is brought about chiefly by the streams of Galician refugees who poured in from all parts of the occupied districts, many of these refugees being people of wealth who have nothing else to do now but to spend their money.

The poor refugees are helped by public funds, as also are a large number of the people of Vienna who have lost their means of livelihood through the war. The central bureau has received about 3,500,000 crowns (£140,000) for relief purposes, so that there is no real poverty to be seen in the town. But the wealthy Galicians never had such an opportunity to spend their money agreeably, and every night in the Graban café one can see the Polish ladies in their fur trimmed gowns thoroughly enjoying the entertainments of the capital.

There is an exhibition of paintings going on composed exclusively of pictures of the Emperor Francis Joseph, and the Kapuziner Gruft—the imperial mausoleum—remains open to visitors as usual. These two patriotic attractions are about all that there is at the moment to satisfy the art craving of the people of Vienna.

In the streets collecting boxes are set up into which the public can drop cigarets, newspapers, and other comforts for the troops. Men called to the colors wear in their caps the gay bunches of artificial flowers which are traditional with conscripts. The Austrian field uniform is of a gray less greenish than the German. Besides the flowers many decorate themselves with little flags. The public lavish cigars and cigarets upon them and they generally seem to be in the best of spirits.

In the Prater everything speaks of the state of war. The vast exhibition field has been transformed into a great camp for convalescent soldiers. The Rotunde, a relic of the world's fair of 1873, has become a huge hospital. In the popular Wurstel Prater the buildings used for public entertainments, which are usually shut up in the winter, are used as depots for the equipment of newly formed contingents.

Subjects of enemy states still move about freely in Vienna. As compared with Berlin,one hears much less talk of "spionitis," much less talk about the war as a whole, and much less of the bitterness against England. Vienna is still a city of a mixed cosmopolitan population, and above all, there remains the unmistakable French stamp on many things. The Viennese in conversation still use many foreign words, but in public notices and signs one sees evidence of the same puristic craze as rages in Germany.

Opinions on the campaign for the patriotic reform of the language are by no means unanimous. The writing of menus in German is generally applauded, and the movement to abolish the word "adieu" in favor of a German formula of farewell has wide support. On many of the shop doors one sees a sign recommending the change. But all except the extremists say frankly that it would be a folly, by which Austria herself would be the only loser, to prune everything which has a foreign color out of the life and language.

It has been rather the fashion to give hotels and restaurants foreign names, and many are now being rechristened. In Vienna the old Tabarin has become the Ballhaus. Maxims is now the Paradies Gärtl. In Munich I stayed at a hotel which had given up its "grandeur" as a sacrifice to the fatherland, the "Grand" having been conscientiously painted over everywhere.

As for the Germanization of feminine fashions, in which it is proposed to shake off the domination of Paris, the results, so far, seem to have been only indifferently satisfactory. A Viennese lady of taste who saw the first picture of the new styles in a Berlin paper, said that they looked like the illustrations in a comic weekly.

At the two famous Vienna theaters, the Hof Burgtheater and the Hof Opern theater, the prices of admission have been reduced so that the best seats only cost 6 crowns—about 5s—the salaries of performers having been correspondingly reduced at the same time. Performances are only given on three nights a week at each, the two alternating; and then the houses are kept crowded at every performance. I heard Electra at the Opern house. On that occasion the steh-parterre, that typically Viennese institution, a sort of seatless pit below the royal box, was crowded with young officers.

The better theaters are not given up to the so-called patriotic plays, and even at the vaudeville one does not see much of them. At the Lustspieltheater, in the Volks Prater, is running a piece with the title "The Barbarians," by which is meant the Austrians themselves, or rather, their German allies. Plays of a Parisian origin are not necessarily banned. The Volksoper gives free admission to soldiers wearing either the silver medal of gallantry or the iron cross. All places of entertainment seem to be doing a good business.

The 5 o'clock teas at the Grand hotel, which has not changed its name, are still the rendezvous of the fashionable world, and there you see sumptuous costumes and cheerful faces. I heard in conversation a contrast drawn between Berlin and Vienna; the former is all optimism and seriousness, the latter all pessimism and gaiety. On the surface I was able to see nothing of pessimism in Vienna.

The people do not take the happy issue of the war so much for granted here as in Berlin, but they have great confidence in their powerful ally and the Austrians have lost nothing of their naturally gay disposition.

At night in the bars you will see little to remind you that the nation is at war, except the young officers parading themselves coquettishly with their bandaged arms, dressed in their gala uniforms (for they seem to think the gray service uniform is insufficiently becoming). They fit admirably into the bright picture, except that the black silk arm-sling makes rather a grotesque contrast with the flamboyant costume of their over-dressed companions.

I dropped one night into a well known cabaret with the expectation of hearing war songs, but was disappointed. It is true that the halls were decorated with war caricatures in which the hatred of Great Britain sufficiently expressed itself, but the only song which even had a faint connection with the war was one, "If Only Bismarck Knew!" which seems to be very popular.

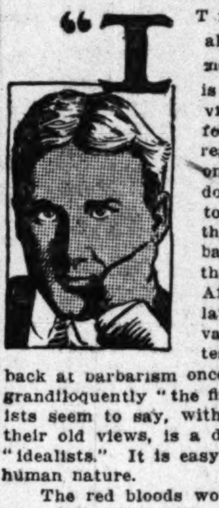
In the early days of the war I understand patriotic songs were much in vogue. Now the applause which they used to win is given to Turkish tunes and the "Marche Hongroise" of Berlioz, which is popular in all the cafés.

The inhabitants of Vienna were always experts in the art of spending more money than they earned, and they have not lost the trick of it. One may see the usual evidences of dissipation in the Stephans Platz an hour or so after midnight, and there is little sign that Viennese youth is denying itself any of its pleasures.

In some details the cost of living has increased, as in the price of eggs and flour, which reflects itself in the high price of all dishes in restaurants in which eggs are used. In some restaurants you are also charged an additional twopence for the Red Cross. But these things seem to make little difference to the course of Viennese life, which flows on the surface very much as usual.

Human Nature Again!

By Robert Herrick.



"IT is human nature—there always has been war and there always will be." That is the most disheartening comment that you hear on all sides about the great war. It is said by loud voiced militarists with complacent conviction and by kindly old ladies with acquiescent sighs for the inscrutable decree of Providence. Having reached this ultimate basis of "human nature," every one seems satisfied to leave the question there. One can do so little with human nature! So little has been done to modify its primal character since the beginning of that small span of time called civilization. So we settle back with something like content at this fresh proof of the ineradicable folly and inhumanity of human nature. After all the talk, all the effort to establish international law, the aspirations of peace societies and the contrivances for Hague tribunals and conventions, when the test comes—when mankind is really stirred—we are right back at barbarism once more. We settle our quarrels with blood and call it grandiloquently "the final arbitrament of arms." Progress, the human naturists seem to say, with secret relief that they will not be forced to change their old views, is a delusion of amiably minded but impracticable people—"idealists." It is easy to shift one's moral burdens on to the broad back of human nature.

The red bloods would have been vociferously grieved had human nature proved itself capable of settling its troubles without the flourishing of big sticks, the maintenance of expensive and spectacular armaments with which to threaten and intimidate. For the red bloods and the militarists generally don't like a peaceful human nature. There seems to them something weak and womanish in the hopes of those who dream that human nature, nationally, might rise to the level of human nature in an ordinarily decent and peaceful citizen. They suspect all pacifists of a secret cowardice and refer to them as degenerates and lovers of grape juice—as if red blood were nourished on something stronger than the unfermented juice of the grape! (We know the kind of courage that is made by fermented liquors.) Although some red bloods admit the possibility of a distant millennium when human nature will exist without murder and riot, and will not consider the ambitions of a few diplomats or of a small professional class of fighters or traders a sufficient justification for the slaughter of millions of perfectly uninterested and inoffensive human beings, they do not really believe in the possibility of keeping blood properly red and vital under any condition of permanent peace. "Human nature," according to the red bloods, requires the frequent exercise of its worse passions in order to remain human nature at its best, its most virile. They fear the loss of courage in youth, the loss of the spirit of devotion and self-sacrifice, which they exalt as patriotism when it is poured out in war. As if courage and self-sacrifice were solely induced in men by the will to kill in an organized fashion! Any child can see the fallacy of such an assumption. The devotions of peace are infinitely harder to make than the spectacular sacrifices of war. The truly heroic even in war are not those who spill their blood prodigally on the battlefields, but those women, children, and old men who give more than blood to maintain the red blood sacrifices.

The truth is that these red bloods who talk so glibly about the nature of human nature in general and the necessity of the primitive institution of war are no higher authorities on the difficult subject of human nature than the pacifists. They create for themselves a theory of the nature of human nature that suits the inclinations of their own human natures. If they feel muscular and bellicose, they say that all real men must feel the same way—or else be stigmatized as degenerate. They refer straightway to history for proof. They depend a great deal upon history for their interpretation of human nature, and history seems to bear them out in their contention that men have always fought, have always killed each other, robbed and oppressed in the sacred names of God and fatherland. The kaiser is merely a modern version of any tribal chief who bowed to the totem pole of his god before he set forth to lick his neighbors.

But history, the red bloods seem to forget, is a brief affair, the story of but a few yesterdays. And even during the epochs of recorded history human nature has not remained precisely constant in its manifestations. We drop bombs and torpedo inoffensive merchant ships in the name of God and fatherland; but we do not torture prisoners (except in the comparatively respectable way of starving and insulting them). We do not boil our captives in oil or set them to fight with wild beasts in the circus for the sport of the conquerors. We do not give over their women to rape. It is no longer good form to enslave a conquered population except industrially, and that we do to our own people. Even our red bloods must admit that certain modifications and alleviations have been introduced into the nature of human nature when it fights.

If we could see beyond the cloudy confines of recorded history no doubt even more extensive differences in the nature of primitive human nature from that of her own would be discovered. Somewhere on the long road that human nature has had to travel it was felt that the human animal might stand upright and walk on his hind feet to his manifest advantage, might even dispense with the use of a tail. Think of all the protest among the red blooded apes, the sneers and contempt for their "degenerate" brethren who were visionary enough to believe in a tailless and upright ape! Imagine all the patter that went on among leafy tropical trees over the growing dissatisfaction with tails aand arboreal gymnastics. And what reassurance and wise shaking of heads among the red bloods when some lively family of Borneo apes broke out into the ancient principles of ape nature and took to the forests on all four feet to the very real discomfort of their two footed relatives. So it must have been, too, when it came to the use of artificial clothing, and at the still more recent date when the habit of monogamy began to prevail. How the good old red bloods must have raved at the degenerate idea of having but one female for each male in place of the good old human way of men hunting down their women and dragging them home like beasts. (Some of the red bloods, indeed, have never been wholly reconciled to this last innovation in human nature and relapse more or less today into the primitive habit—sub rosa, of course!) Thus it has gone slowly, O very, very slowly, with painful lapses and errors, since the first emergence of human protoplasm from the primordial slime. Why should it not go on?

Who, in fact, are these assured red bloods who talk as if they had the last word of revelation on this deepest, most mysterious secret of all that God has reserved for himself—the true, the ultimate nature of human nature? My guess is as good as theirs; my reading of history as accurate—and a good deal broader in its view. I refuse to be upset in my notions of the essential possibility of human nature because a German kaiser and a few millions more of his kind still believe in the primitive way of doing things and prefer fighting to the more difficult methods of reason and peace. There is still time for the human race to learn, for human nature to change its character without committing suicide. Meanwhile it comes especially hard on those innocent millions who are not believers in the red blood creed, but are forced to the sacrifice by the pitiful coil of destiny that has brought them into being ahead of their day.

And the red bloods and the militarists, the timid old ladies and the unthinking multitudes alike, who live on catchwords caught from others, are all doing their best to keep back the next great experiment in human nature by their careless use of the term as a sufficient excuse for any kind of inhuman folly, for the justification and perpetuation of all that is basest, most anachronistic and futile in human nature. They are trying to perpteuate the tradition of a static and barbarous human nature, which humanity has struggled blindly to escape from since the beginning of time—from the skin of the beast, the mark of Cain. No doubt it will take a good long time yet, thanks to these red blood reactionaries, before mankind will make the one small step necessary towards the regulation and extermination of our barbaric inheritances from apedom. Yet because it may take centuries instead of a few decades to accomplish this change in the nature of human nature, that should depress nobody, should make no one ashamed before the swelling chest and the confident sneers of our red blooded friends. (Nor admit ever that their blood is any ruddier or less degenerate than the fluid in our own veins!) Time is of the essence of the contract in all spiritual growths. Think of the ages that elapsed before men rose to the altitude of their hind legs.

Above all let us believe in the beauty and mystery of the thing we call so lightly human nature. No man yet—priest, poet, philosopher, or red blood—has fully divined the nature of human nature, has plumbed all its black depths, climbed all its shining heights—nor predicted with authority its collective future. I am weary, for one, of having all the ape in me excused as "human nature."

British Soldiers Optimistic.

[FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

LONDON.—Most curiously, the temper of those at the front is more sanguine than among those at home, where we still think of the war as likely to last a long time.

People come and go constantly between France and London, and thus we are kept well informed of the inner as well as the outer history. Some of the big generals have been here for week-ends, and many journalists, like Spencer of the Westminster Gazette, go to France periodically to catch impressions of events there.

At the front they talk of a great advance by Gen. Joffre at an early date and the successful driving back of the Germans by furious shelling. They are confident of the ability of the French and British troops. Even at home self-confidence rises weekly. Perhaps the sudden burst of brilliant sunshine after weeks of bad weather accounts for the outburst of high spirits which London has seen this week.

It is a striking fact that after Germany's most recent menaces her "Hymn of Hate" has made everybody laugh. The threats of naval piracy have bucked everybody up in London. Both are regarded as a sure sign that Germany has lost her temper and the loss of one's temper is always the beginning of the end.

The tremendous outburst of indignation on the part of the American press has helped to raise the spirits of the English to a high level.

The one setback of the week has been the further postponement, apparently, of Roumania's entrance into the war with half a million soldiers, which is due to the old difficulty of satisfying Bulgaria.

Regarding the threats of German submarines I consulted a high official of the admiralty who told me that Germany has done her worst with her submarines and that their power to do mischief has been grossly exaggerated. Any vessel that is big and fast can defy them.

Another cause of the present outburst of hopefulness is the success of the financial conference in Paris. There was some apprehension that poor John Bull might have to foot the bill for all the powers that came to his aid. Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George, with the Russian minister of the treasury and the French authorities, made a deal which equalizes the burdens of all the allies.

It is not true that Lloyd-George went to the Latin quarter during his stay in Paris, as was stated in some of the papers. The poor man did not end his work any day he was in the French capital until 11 o'clock at night, and then he was only too glad to get to bed.

The session of the house of commons which convened last week is utterly unlike what it ever had been before. Not one-fourth of the members ever appear at any day's sitting, and any division along party lines is so impossible that the cranks who attempted one because they were dissatisfied with the censorship became ashamed at the last minute and yielded. Few of the members ask questions outside of the young members who are making their way and want to keep before the public, or certain old members who are fussy and are haunted by the spy mania, one of the diseases which is now quite common and is encouraged a good deal by the yellow journals that live on sensation.

The ministers make short speeches and then suddenly the house finds its business done. For the first time in many centuries the members can go home to dinner and visit the theaters.

The reminders of war are all around us. Many members appear in khaki, and the the other day a new member for the first time in history took his seat in navy blue uniform. Some of the khaki clad warriors bring out the contradictions which have arisen from this mighty unheaval. Josiah Wedgewood, who stood out in the house as a crank of cranks and as a follower of Henry George, Joseph Fels, and Tom Johnson in a belief in the single tax as a panacea for all human ills, and who made the last and fiercest speech against war before the war began, is now in charge of the armored motors and participated in the siege of Antwerp. Now, rather to his horror, for he is a Republican, he keeps watch of the residence of the king. One day this week he was refused admission to the house because he carried a revolver in his belt, the wearing of arms being prohibited in the house.

Three members have been seen at the sittings who a few months ago were full of the highest spirits, but who now have had to return wounded and shaken by their terrible experiences. Several members have lost sons, although they do not betray a sign of grief. With characteristic English stoicism they never even allude to the subject unless you mention it and they then dismiss it in a word.

Of the ministers Asquith looks the best preserved, being almost jaunty in his air and walk. Sir Edward Grey, secretary of foreign affairs, never appears in the house and is said to look worried. David Lloyd-George, head of the nation's finances, looks lined and tired.

There is nothing to show any sense of the stress of war. The first and only discomfort that I have personally endured was when, for two days, I was unable to get a hot bath in my flat because of a shortage of coke.

Most of the Irish members of the house have remained in Ireland, but Dillon came over for a few days to consult with John Redmond. Both will soon return to Ireland to attend to pressing business. Dillon confirms Redmond's account that the tide of opinion in Ireland has definitely turned in favor of the allies and that the situation, which at the beginning was uncertain, is now thoroughly secure. Even the Sinnfeiners are compelled to hold their peace. The virulent feeling caused by severe anti-clerical legislation has melted before the stories of the German atrocities in Belgium.

The arrival in London of another batch of Belgian nuns with stories too horrible to relate, at the hands of German soldiery, has added fuel to the burning indignation which every man of true Irish blood feels.

Warning to the United States

Maximilian Harden, foremost German political writer, who has been called the "Teuton Bernard Shaw," in the latest issue of his magazine, Zukunft (The Future), warns the United States against shipping provisions to England while denying them to Germany. He criticizes the United States for its spirit in connection with the war, and says "the state is a pestiferous marsh, decency is an infrequent guest, the official a corruptionist, the lady a little upholstered peacock woman." A translation of the article is presented herewith.

By Maximilian Harden.

THE land of the Stars and Stripes is besought only to give her neutrality the color of sympathy. That the United States, in accordance with the advice of Mr. Roosevelt, who was made an honorary doctor in Berlin, and as a private citizen inspected a brigade maneuver, will support our enemies with fleet and land armies is for the present improbable. Nevertheless, experience warns us to be prepared for every shift in the barometer from the distant west as well as in the far east and to guard against denunciation as much as against flattery.

Sentiment of Americans is unfriendly to us. Despite tours of princes, the statue of Frederick the Great, the exchange of professors, and Kiel week? Yes. Despite them all.

We cannot alter it. Missionaries of our foreign office brought with them over the sea in trunks and in bundles the most beautiful zeal, but sometimes chose unfruitful, in a few cases harmful, mediums. Lectures and literature, both of defense and denunciation, the number of defenders, the completeness of their argument, alike fortified only suspicion.

That which could be done to make clear German conduct was done by Germany's upright children, who knew the country and the people. The American business man does not enjoy climbing mountains of paper. He has grown up in a different sphere of interest and is accustomed to a different set of values than that of the middle European.

To familiarize one's self with foreign surroundings and to become finally a psychologist in daily intercourse will become the chief duty of Germany of tomorrow.

The North American, among whose ancestors are Britons, Spaniards, Celts, Hollanders, Frenchmen, and low Germans, despite language, cannot easily understand that the Englishman calls him boorish, stiff, and cold, and charges him with self-seeking and calculativeness. For the most part it is a quarrel of relatives who wish to overcome but not to kill one another.

Only over the alliance with Japan did Jonathan wrinkle his brow more deeply, but every Briton swore he would close to the yellow one the way to Hawaii and California, through the Philippines, and use him in Asia's fields only as scarecrow for the Russians and Germans. Doubt the remainder and yet we let slip the opportunity of joining hands against the Japanese invasion.

Yesterday we were patted. Today we are pinched. Over there the dollar rules alone. All that concerns the state is a pestiferous marsh, decency is an infrequent guest, the promoter a crook, the official a corruptionist, the lady a little upholstered peacock woman.

The individual idealism or the cheerful ability of the Amercian, his joy in giving, his achievements in and for art, science, and culture were scarcely noticed. Compliments didn't wash out that uncouth picture.

Before Mr. Roosevelt bared his horse teeth to Berliners he had talked cheerfully to Admirals Dewey and Beresford about a starry banner war against Germany. And the quieter compatriots of that noisy being said: "You Germans are wonderful and hellishly devoted to duty. You scorn us because we pursue business. We take piles of gold across the sea and then you raise your nose high in the air as if it stank."

Even in time of peace an understanding would have become difficult. The American wishes to be neither arrogant nor subservient, to count for no less as a merchant than as an officer and official, to do what appeals to him, and if it pleases him to characterize his president as an ox. Let him be what he is, and don't continue to damage the empire and its people through an attempt to force foreigners to your ways of thinking.

Isn't it understandable that the American satisfied himself after his own fashion as to the origin of the war; that he sees the fate of Belgium through other eyes than German and decries "the army for its own purposes" as "militarism"; understands us no better than the German Michel understands him, and curses furiously when, after a long drought, the European war destroys his harvest? Then he will raise himself aloft in unprecedented magnificence.

No matter how the dice fall among us you will rake in the bulk of the winnings. The war costs old Europe through investments without interest, devastation, and business loss a hundred thousand million marks or more. She will stagger under loads and taxes.

In our territory is an extraordinary accomplishment not to be achieved for many a year. All will seek you out, the finance minister and arms manufacturer, the inventor and promoter. You have only to free yourself from corruption and to tear out the weeds of demagogism to become actual lords of the world, when you may travel to Europe as to a vast Nuremberg, which teaches one how narrow were the concerns of order and time.

The circumference of your plant and fulfilments and splendor of your living will be as dazzling as a fairy tale. Among us, the victor and the vanquished, the neutrals must espouse simplicity. Your complaint is baseless. Have patience for but a little while. Whether affairs which you carry on in wartime shall do good or bad, we will not yet put to test. Law and custom permit them. Why should you bother about the sorrows of a foreign heart? Denunciation cannot avail.

Until the war has been fought out and the book of fate has been raised above every doubt your verdict will weigh with us as a chicken's feather. Let our writers and speakers be silent, and not one more syllable of defense be uttered. We are not offended; we have not time for that. We are delighted that you are donating ten millions a month to Belgium, that you desire to help care for Poland, that you open the savings bank of your children.

We earnestly request, however, that there be no outcry if American ships are damaged through attacks of German submarines. England wants to prevent us, and we want to prevent England, from importing foodstuffs and raw materials. You don't attempt to land on our coasts. Keep away from the British as well. You were warned in good time. What is about to happen has been imposed by pitiless necessity, and must be. And let no cry of pain and no menace sound in Germany's ear.

WHEAT STRONG; SHORTS COVER

Big Cash Demand Is Bull Help; Country Sales Continue Light.

COARSE GRAINS RALLY.

A decided shift in sentiment was shown in wheat yesterday and prices made sharp advances. Offerings were light at the start and there was general buying by shorts. Commission houses were free buyers throughout the session, and while prices were affected by the selling on the swells, there was a good demand on all reactions and prices closed 3@3½c higher.

The strength developing in the cash situation is the main bull factor, and reports from all markets yesterday indicated an increased scarcity of offerings, with no letup in the demand. Cash prices were strong in all directions, and the movement from the country is falling off. Primary receipts were only 455,000 bu, and for the week the western run was more than 1,000,000 bu less than a year ago.

Seaboard Sales Large.

Local cash sales were small, as there was but little wheat offered, but sales in all positions were reported at 1,000,000 bu at the seaboard. St. Louis sold 180,000 bu No. 2 red for export, and at Kansas City there were sales of No. 2 red at 6c over the May, while prices bid for wheat via the gulf were 2c higher relatively than on Friday. Sales of Manitoba wheat were also large, and Duluth sold 200,000 bu to eastern mills.

Receipts here were 37 cars, and the inspection yesterday showed 39 cars in. Northwest receipts were 242 cars, against 265 cars a year ago. Winnipeg had 199 cars, against 157 cars a year ago. Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 100,000 bu for one day. Receipts there continue light, and it is expected the government report tomorrow will show small reserves in the northwest.

Liverpool Prices Steady.

Liverpool cables were unchanged. The advices in regard to the Dardanelles were indicative of slight further progress on the part of the allies, and there were reports from Russia saying traders would be disappointed in the amount of wheat that would be shipped from Russia, as wheat supplies in that country were small. At Rome reports were bullish, further rises being reported. The export demand for Plate wheat continues good.

Buying of wheat was led by Armour, Babcock-Rushton, Lamson, and Rosenbaum Grain. Chapin and Logan-Bryan were sellers on the advances. Some of the local bulls sold out just before the close. Indications are for a good sized decrease in the visible supply tomorrow. Clearances for the day were 946,000 bu.

Firm Tone in Corn Mart.

In corn there was a firm undertone and prices closed ⅝ to ⅝@⅞c higher. Offerings were fair, but the strength in wheat stimulated buying and prices responded fairly well to the buying. Cash prices were steady to ⅝c higher and there were sales of only 30,000 bu, including 25,000 bu for export. Country sales were light and weather conditions continue unfavorable for the marketing of corn.

Receipts were 114 cars with 72 cars the inspection yesterday. Primary arrivals were 562,000 bu, against 1,144,000 bu a year ago. For the week primary receipts were about half as large as a year ago. Clearances for the day were 84,000 bu. Liverpool was affected by the prospects for liberal offerings of Plate corn and was ½d off for spot corn. Outside cash markets showed considerable strength.

Oats Follow Wheat Lead.

Oats followed the lead of other grains and there were net gains of ½@⅝c. Cash sales were 205,000 bu, including 175,000 bu for export. The seaboard reported a good demand. Clearances were 244,000 bu. Receipts here were 152 cars, with 166 cars inspected yesterday. Country offerings were moderate, many receivers reporting the smallest consignments in several months. Primary receipts were 57,000 bu, against 714,000 bu a year ago.

Hog Products Stronger.

Provisions were strong and there was general demand from commission
ouses, Logan-Bryan, Barrell, Tietgens, ennett, and Gregson being good buyers.
ackers were credited with buying lard,
t some of the smaller packers sold roducts on the swell. Receipts here were
,000, with 41,000 estimated for tomor-
ow, and 165,000 for the week. Prices
, the yards were 10c up. Western reipts were 568,500, against 508,000 last eek and 429,000 a year ago. The cash ade is showing some signs of improveent.

Rye Prices in Rally.

Rye sold at an advance of 2c a bushel, ith part cars of No. 2 at $1.13½, No. 3 at
.16, and sample grade at 95c. No. 2
osed at $1.14 bid. Receipts, 4 cars.

Barley was firm to 1c higher, with sales malting at 71@77c, feed at 68@72c, and reenings at 66@72c. Receipts, 23 cars.

Timothy seed was quiet at $4.25@6.50

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

The cash wheat situation is gaining in strength daily in practically every market in the country. Bids for wheat at the gulf were reported 2c higher relatively than the previous day, and at St. Louis 180,000 bu No. 2 red were sold at highest premium of the crop, and at Kansas City 55,000 bu No. 2 red sold at 6c over their May. In the local market bids were 2c over May for No. 2 red in store and 3½c over May for No. 2 hard in store. With the strong bids on wheat the country offerings showed a still greater shrinkage. Primary receipts are materially smaller than a year ago, and local arrivals are extremely small. Exporters at the seaboard report a continued big demand, and, as at all other times since the war broke out, it is not so much a question of price as it is to get the wheat. The last week or so the offerings of spring wheat from the northwestern markets were taken eagerly, and at last accounts the offerings from that section were much smaller, indicating stocks had been well sold out. The supply of wheat at Buffalo is supposed to be mostly all sold, and the same is true of Duluth and Kansas City stocks. Minneapolis supplies are much smaller than a year ago, and country elevator stocks as well as farm reserves are said to be extremely small in the three states.

Gregson says of provisions: "The inflation caused by the European conditions is out of product, the hogs have been packed on a basis of about 60 to 65 per cent corn, leaving a good profit to the grower, and according to good judges an excellent prospect for the holders without undue inflation; although a betterment in European conditions would, it is thought by many, add value to the present stocks."

Charles Sincere & Co. say: "Many of our country correspondents are beginning to discuss crop possibilities and we are surprised to find so many complaints of unfavorable conditions in the southwest and in Indiana, mostly dry weather and alternate freezing and thawing. Ploughing for oats is reported in many localities and seeding operations near at hand."

"Discounts are narrowing and No. 3 mixed corn now brings 2 cents under the May," said R. I. Mansfield. "The adverse factors are the large visible and poor cash demand; the favorable ones the holding attitude of farmers, firm views of owners of all corn in the visible, and light eastern stocks everywhere."

The Ohio report for March, as wired by King of Toledo, makes wheat condition 97, same as last December and 94 last March. Crop was estimated last year by government at 36,000,000 bu. Michigan report says 260 correspondents claim no damage to winter wheat and 172 say there was some damage.

Cash corn was unchanged to ⅝c higher here and oats ⅜@1c up. Sales were small of all grains. 20,000 bu wheat, 30,000 bu corn, and 205,000 bu oats, including 25,000 bu corn and 175,000 bu for export. Country sales of all grains were light.

A Petrograd cable to Slaughter & Co., said Russian wheat supplies were small and that reports of big shipments via the Dardanelles as soon as they were opened were unfounded.

There was quite a decided increase in the commission house buying of provisions. Offerings were not heavy and the demand was more general than for some time past.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 39 cars; corn, 72 cars; oats, 166 cars; rye, 4 cars; barley, 23 cars; hogs, 41,000 head. Hogs for all next week, 165,000 head.

Chila has put wheat and flour on the free list. Only a short time ago it was thought Chila had an exportable surplus of several million bushels wheat.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 100,000 bu for one day. Duluth stocks decreased about 36,000 for the week.

Omaha reported eighteen inches of snow there and there was quite general precipitation throughout the west.

Seaboard reported export sales of about 1,000,000 bu, including 440,000 bu Manitobas.

Omaha cash wheat was reported 4@5c higher. Corn and oats, ½@1c higher.

Peoria cash corn was quoted ½@¾c up. Oats, ¾@1¼c up.

Duluth reported sales of 200,000 bu for export.

Winnipeg sold 100,000 bu wheat for export.

With receipts posted at only 10,000 head, the hog market at Chicago yesterday was active and largely 10c higher than on Friday. The fresh receipts and all stale hogs in the pens at the opening of business found buyers before the close, although the market developed a little weakness on late rounds. Top sales were made at $6.95 and the bulk of the supply found an outlet at $6.75@6.90. Shippers were credited with purchases of 2,000 head and packers took 8,600 head at an average price of $6.84. There was a sharp contraction of the eastern demand for pigs and prices of the latter were 25@40c lower for the day.

Final prices made hogs largely 20c higher than a week ago, while pigs were mostly 15c lower for the week, with desirable shipping grades closing at $6.25@6.40. The average price of the 166,000 hogs received at Chicago this week was placed at $6.70, compared with an average of $6.65 last week.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 3,100; Swift & Co., 1,000; Sulzberger & Sons, 700; Morris & Co., 400; Anglo-American, 500; Hammond, 500; Boyd-Lunham, 400; Roberts & Oake, 300; Miller & Hart, 400; Independent Packing company, 400; Brennan Packing company, 300; butchers, 600; shippers, 2,000; total, 10,600.

CATTLE.

Beef steer values finished the week practically unchanged from the level in force a week ago, while cows and heifers showed an advance of 10@15c for the week. A feature of the trade on closing days was the strong preference shown by many buyers for the lower priced beef cattle. Dressed beef values have been greatly reduced since the beginning of this year, but consumers appear to have become accustomed to the cheaper cuts, which are selling relatively higher than more expensive portions of dressed carcasses. Receipts for the week showed a moderate increase, and the market did not display much buoyancy on closing days, which traders accepted as a warning against indiscriminate forwarding the coming weeks. Calves sold higher at the opening of the week, but had a late reaction and closed barely steady.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 112,500, against 100,700 the preceding week, 113,000 a year ago, and 115,100 two years ago. Total for 1915 to date, 1,100,000, against 1,136,000 the same period in 1914.

SHEEP.

Highest prices in recent years were made by sheep and lambs at Chicago this week, and final quotations made sheep and yearlings 25@40c higher than a week ago, while lightweight lambs showed a net gain of 10@15c. Heavy lambs were 25c lower than a week ago. High prices were touched during the midweek session, when sheep reached $8.00, yearlings $9.00, and lambs $10.10, prices that were the highest made since 1912 for all classes. A late reaction wiped out part of the gains made, but the market closed in a healthy condition, with values showing a tendency to resume an upward movement.

Lackawanna Steel.

R. S. R.: Based on operations for last year the $6,000,000 note issue of the Lackawanna Steel company would look anything but attractive, but last year was extremely bad for steel companies. If the average earnings for the last five years are taken as a basis there are shown annual net earnings of $3,752,798 applicable to interest charges of $1,745,728. After setting aside $1,076,493 for depreciation there is an average surplus of $930,577. The result for 1914 was a deficit of $1,727,725. The present note issue is to refund part of a $10,000,000 issue of debentures, the rest of which have been cared for out of current funds of the company. The change will reduce the annual interest charge by $139,700. There is now outstanding $34,750,000 of common stock, $6,000 preferred, $25,000,000 of bonds, and $6,299,000 bonds of subsidiaries, besides the present issue. One dividend of 1 per cent has been paid on the common. That was in 1913. The expression "gold" notes means nothing now. Twenty years ago, when a campaign was being waged to put the country's money on a silver basis, it meant much. The price of 98 and accrued interest means $980 plus interest on $1,000 from March 1 to the day a $1,000 note is sold.

Government Should Protect Securities.

What is government for?

Evidently its primary function is to protect the lives and property of the people; to defend the weak from aggression by the strong; to guard all from the thief who robs under cover of night and the swindler who cheats under the cloak of false pretenses.

If you own a house, or a farm, or an automobile, or a set of carpenter's tools, it is the duty of the government to protect you in the legitimate use and enjoyment of them, to prevent any marauder from breaking the windows of your house, trespassing on your farm, or stealing tires from your auto. If you own a bond or a share of stock, is it not just as much the duty of the government to protect your use and enjoyment of it and the income it produces?

Is not a wanton attack on the value of securities just as great a wrong as the wanton wrecking of a farmer's wagon or the destruction of a fisherman's nets? The fact that a few security holders are wealthy and that some wealthy men are unjust has no bearing on the matter. The overwhelming majority of security holders are poor, a minority are well-to-do, and a few are rich. The average security holder needs the protection of the government just as much as the average farmer or the average storekeeper, and he is just as much entitled to it.

The duty of practicing economy and accumulating a little property against sickness and old age has been preached by moralists ever since the dawn of history. The great mass of security holders today are men and women who have painfully and patiently heeded this preaching. They own a few shares of stock or a few bonds and depend upon the small income from these for support. If financial marauders are permitted to destroy the value of securities, or, worse still, if hostile legislation brings about the same result, the sufferers are these small holders.

A majority of the large security holders are not rich individuals, they are life insurance companies and savings banks whose holdings are really owned by the 10,500,000 savings bank depositors and the 30,000,000 life insurance policy holders of the country. These 40,500,000 persons added to the millions of direct owners are a majority of the people of the country, and their securities are entitled to protection just as much as their farms or their workshops.

Sutter Basin.

J. C. W.—The Sutter Basin company has a land reclamation project in California. Its $2,750,000 note issue is secured by a deposit of a total authorized issue of $6,000,000 bonds, the bonds being secured by first mortgage on 40,000 acres of land. This amounts to $150 of bonds an acre, which looks large, but it is asserted that similar reclaimed lands in the Sacramento valley are worth $250 to $300 an acre. The statutes of California make stockholders personally responsible for the debts of the corporation and the holders of most of the Sutter stock are Chicago men of great wealth. This gives the notes added strength. However, obligations whose main security is an incompleted project are not a suitable investment for the money of a widow. Trust funds should have a first mortgage on something that is already actually earning twice the interest on its debts.

LOAN INCREASE SHOWN BY BANKS

Weekly Figures of New York Institutions; Offer for Cambria Iron Co.

CLEARINGS DECREASE.

The New York bank statement showed an increase of nearly $30,000,000 in deposits, but there was an expansion in loans of over $32,000,000. This is the largest loan increase noted in a number of weeks.

Time deposits showed a relatively small gain while the excess reserve decreased $5,167,960. However, since the surplus is in excess of $129,500,000 the change was without significance. The figures:

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Cotton goods ruled steady today, with moderate trade. Yarns were dull. Dry goods imports were declining. Linens were firm. Burlaps were higher. Business in men's wear was better for the week.

METALS.

NEW YORK, March 6.—COPPER—Steady; electrolytic, $14.75@14.87½; casting, $14.25@14.62½. IRON—Unchanged.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 6.—LEAD—Strong, $3.85. SPELTER—Strong, $10.60@10.75.

SMALL REACTION IN WALL STREET

Traders as Whole Committed to Short Side, but Exhibit Caution.

RAILS UNDER PRESSURE

New York, March 6.—Some reaction from yesterday's strong undertone was manifested by today's stock market, trading in the short session being generally at the expense of quoted values. Dealings were restricted to a degree by the storm, which cut off communication with interior points. Traders as a whole were again committed to the short side, but were cautious in their attitude.

Shares of the "Soo" road were almost the only railway issues to make further improvement, most of the Pacifics, trunk lines, and Grangers being under moderate pressure. Some of the high priced specialties, including American Tobacco, Liggett & Myers, and Lorillard, were strong. The peculiar character of the movement in dormant issues was seen in a 14 point gain for Harvester corporation common and a decline of 4½ points for the preferred.

Stocks to New Minimums.

American Locomotive preferred, with a drop of 3 points, and Pressed Steel Car common and preferred, each of which fell 2 points, met their new minimum prices. American Woolen and Mexican Petroleum displayed some weakness, the entire list showing heaviness at the end.

Grain markets made some recovery from their recent steady declines on increased buying by European interests. Foreign exchange was dull, remittances to London and the continent remaining almost unchanged.

The measure of the demand for investment issues was seen in the closing of the new St. Paul bond issue at a profit to the underwriters and participants. Trade reports indicate a better condition in the main, with some backwardness at eastern and southern points.

Financial operations of the week were primarily responsible for the large actual expansion of bank loans, which exceeded $32,000,000, while the cash holdings were slightly increased. Excess reserves were contracted, however, to the extent of over $5,000,000.

Bonds were steady, with total shares (par value) $1,597,000. Panama registered 3s advanced ⅝ per cent on the week.

Review of the Week.

More confident sentiment was reflected in the firmer and quieter stock market this week. There was evidently less fear of this country becoming involved with belligerent governments on account of reprisals affecting our commerce. Official optimism at Washington over Germany's reply to this government and the chances of British concessions helped this feeling.

On the other hand, the British plan to interdict German sea trade and the attempt to open the Dardanelles had the effect of increasing belief in rumors of peace prospects. Speedy disproval of some of these rumors established their purely conjectural nature.

Wheat's violent tumble was affected indifferently by fears of interrupted shipments through war measures and of release of Russian shipments and by rumors of cancellation of export orders on peace prospects. Foreign trade generally was decidedly affected by these influences, February's fourth week trade balance showing a marked decrease from preceding weeks, while foreign exchange rates stiffened.

Favorable trade auguries were drawn from iron and steel news, showing increase in February production and March 1 furnace capacity further expanded.

Mercantile paper, 3¾@3½. Sterling exchange steady; 60 day bills, 4.7975; for cables, 4.8135; for demand, 4.8085. Bar silver, 49⅝c. Mexican dollars, 37½c.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, March 6.—The stock market was quiet but firm today. The chief business was in oil shares, which continued to harden. The war loan was inclined to ease off, but otherwise there were few markings. American securities were a trifle more active and dearer. The closing was steady. The money market welcomed the $250,000,000 exchequer bond issue which it is expected will yield 3½ per cent. Bar silver, 23¼d per ounce. Money, 1 per cent. Discount rates—Short and three months, 1½ per cent.

PARIS, March 6.—Trading was active on the bourse today. Three per cent rentes, 70 francs for cash. Exchange on London, 25 francs 36 centimes.

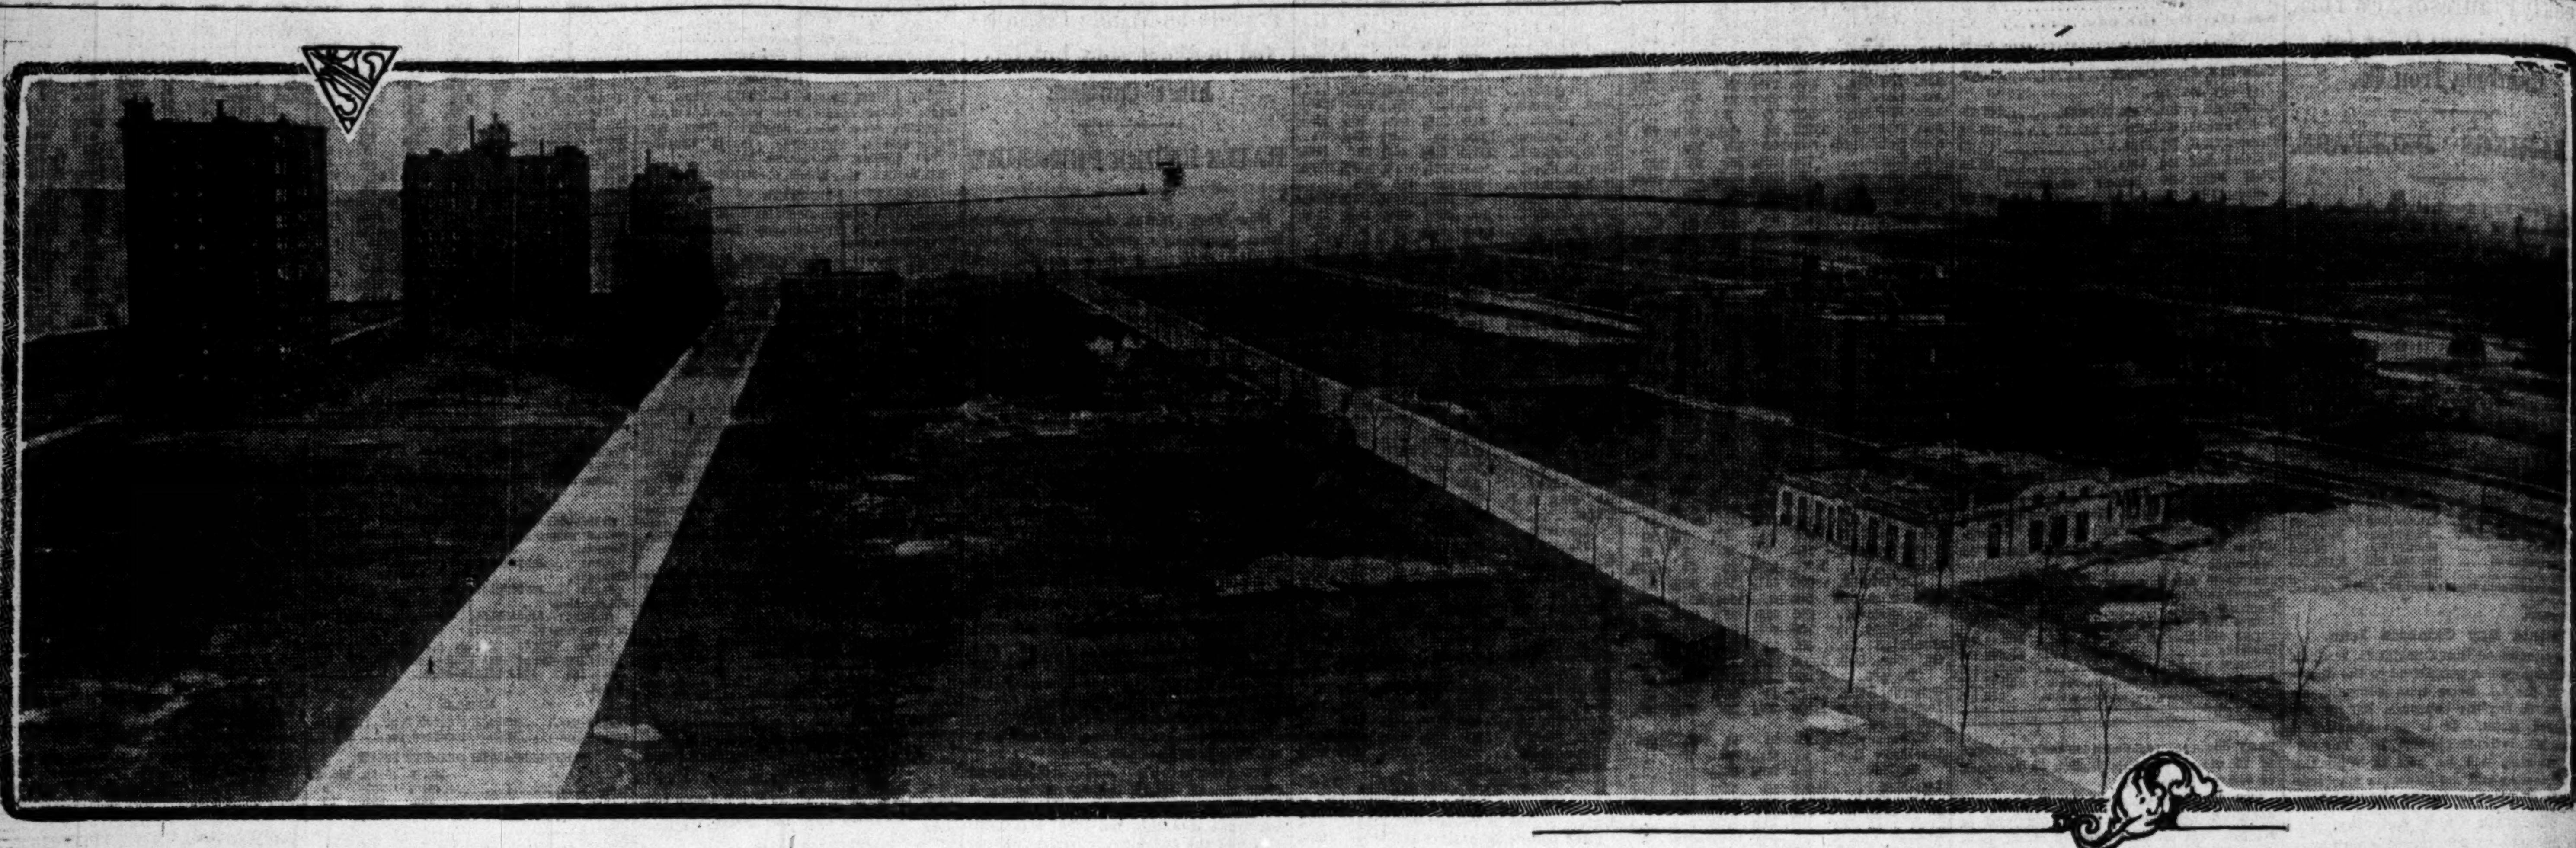
STREETERVILLE—BUDDING DISTRICT OF HIGH CLASS HOMES.



These are boom days in a building way for "Streeterville," as the district east of Lincoln parkway to the lake and north of Pearson street to Oak street, extended, has come generally to be called. Despite its rather plebeian name, the district has become an essentially exclusive one, and is in especially high favor with builders of ultra high grade apartment buildings. This is shown by the fact that six buildings to cost around $850,000 are either in course of construction in this district or contemplated, work on which will begin in the near future. The high character of the buildings is shown by the fact there is only one in which the monthly apartment rent is under $200, the Rinn building on Pearson street, east of Lincoln parkway. The others will command a yearly rent of $2,500 to $5,000, the latter for apartments in the building to be erected by Dr. E. C. Dudley on the Lake Shore drive, just south of the Oak street extension of the drive. The Dudley, which will set a new standard for Chicago in the way of duplex apartments, will occupy the forty feet of frontage facing the lake, between the McClurg building, at the bend of the drive, and the Walker building, to the right. It will be ten stories high, of strictly fireproof construction, and will contain five apartments, each of which will occupy two floors, and will contain fifteen rooms, and will cost $150,000.

In addition to the Dudley building, the buildings in course of erection and planned comprise:

The three apartment building being erected by Bertram M. Winston and W. Ernest Walker at the southwest corner of Seneca street and Delaware place.

The nine apartment building being erected by Walter J. Rinn on Pearson street, 200 feet east of Lincoln parkway.

The ten apartment building being erected by Nelson Gross in Delaware place, south front, near Seneca street.

The twelve apartment building to be erected by F. A. Hardy at the southeast corner of De Witt place and Delaware place, to cost about $150,000.

The four story apartment building to be erected by W. B. Martin in Walton place, between Seneca street and Lincoln parkway, to cost about $150,000.

W. O. Goodman will erect a high grade nine apartment building at the northeast corner of State and Scott streets, to cost about $150,000.

The building being erected by Mr. Winston and Mr. Walker will occupy 50x100 feet of ground, will contain three apartments of twelve rooms each, which will command an annual rent of $3,600.

The Gross building will be five stories high and will contain ten apartments of nine to ten rooms, which will rent at $3,000 a year. It will cost about $200,000.

PROBABLY the most interesting feature of the week's real estate market was the activity shown in subdivision property. Business property, comprising that in the downtown district as well as in the more outlying parts of the city, made an excellent showing and divided honors fairly well with the subdivision property, but it failed to make the spectacular showing the other did in the matter of advancing values.

In this respect the operations of the week were of an unusual character and they are likely to give an impetus to the market for this class of property, which has been one of growing promise for some time past. Sixty days ago its prospects were of a decidedly indifferent character.

Easier Money Spurs Market.

With the coming of easier monetary conditions and the gradual improvement in the general business situation, however, it has taken on a much more promising outlook, until subdividers generally have come to regard the situation most hopefully.

The fact that a profit of $33,800 should be taken in the sale of a tract of eighty-nine acres acquired only last November is certainly a most encouraging sign for this class of property, and while the profit taken in the other subdivision sale of the week, comprising the 600 feet of frontage on Oglesby avenue, south of Jackson park, was not on so generous a scale, it was large enough to satisfy any but the greediest of operators.

The two transactions certainly go to show that there are some great possibilities in the market for this class of property.

Oak Park Tract Sold.

The first sale referred to was that of the so-called Teller tract of eighty-nine and two-tenths acres in north Oak Park. Early in the week its sale by the Henry B. Teller estate of Denver to William J. Gilbert, president of the Chicago Fire Brick company, and Arthur W. Egan for an indicated consideration of $100,000 was announced. They are said to have acquired the property last November, but the transfer was not filed for record until early last week.

The Teller estate was represented by Schrel & Read, while White & Coleman represented the purchasers. Later in the week its sale by Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Egan to Oliver Salinger and Clarence W. Hubbard, large subdivision operators in Rogers Park, was reported at an indicated consideration of $133,800.

Choice Subdivision Acreage.

The tract, which was owned for many years by the late Senator Henry B. Teller of Colorado, has long been regarded as being particularly available for high class subdivision purposes. It is bounded by North avenue on the north, Division street on the south, Oak Park avenue (Sixty-eighth avenue) on the east, on which it has a frontage of a half mile. It has a quarter of a mile of frontage on Division street and North avenue, and is in the midst of an attractive residential neighborhood.

The tract will be subdivided and placed on the market at once, and to meet the requirements of a community like Oak Park it will be divided into 560 deep lots, with the exception of North avenue, which will be the only business street in the subdivision. These lots will be 25x125 feet.

Plans for Beautification.

The development will be carried out along the same general lines as characterized the three subdivisions in Rogers Park so successfully marketed by Salinger & Hubbard last summer. Sewer and water are now in a part of the property and will be extended over the rest.

There will be an elaborate ornamental brick and stone street name column at all street corners, while it is proposed to landscape the entire tract, plant trees, shrubs, etc. The middle street will be a boulevard 114 feet wide and a half mile long, with a parkway of fifty feet throughout its entire length. It will contain tennis courts for the use of lot owners, pergolas, etc., and it is proposed to expend about $90,000 for the improvements noted.

600 Feet Frontage Sold.

In the south side deal the property involved comprises the entire frontage of 600 feet on Oglesby avenue between Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth street, west front, which was sold by John A. Carroll & Bro., for Robert Stuart, treasurer of the Quaker Oats company, to Frank H. Lang and August W. Quanstrom, the builder.

It comprises the half of the block bounded by Yates boulevard on the east, Oglesby avenue on the west, Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth streets, which Mr. Stuart purchased from William A. Alexander about two years ago. A nominal consideration is named in the transfer, but the revenue stamps on the deed indicate a consideration of $50,000.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Stuart paid $60,000 for the entire block and has sold Yates boulevard frontage at a reported rate of $150 a front foot, so that he takes a fine profit on his investment.

High Class Flats to Go Up.

The block in question is one of the choice ones in that district, where there has been much activity during the last year or two, and particularly during the last six months. It adjoins Jackson park and overlooks the lake and the South Shore Country club grounds. The Yates boulevard frontage is restricted to dwellings. The frontage just sold will, it is stated, be improved with high grade detached apartment buildings.

Another acre sale of the week comprised the tract of twenty acres, except highways, at the northeast corner of Irving Park boulevard and Long avenue, which was sold by Edward Munroe to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, for an indicated consideration of $32,000.

In another deal W. D. Kerfoot & Co. sold for a syndicate to Frederick H. Bartlett & Co. eight acres at northwest corner of Fifty-fifth street and South Fifty-eighth avenue, and over two acres on West Fifty-fifth street, east of South Fifty-eighth avenue, for $6,000.

WINNEMAC AVENUE—Louis Knipp has purchased from Fred A. Anderson the twelve apartment building at the northwest corner of Winnemac avenue and Robey street, on 56½x125 feet of ground, for an indicated consideration of $35,000, with an incumbrance of $18,000, the purchaser paying $17,000 for the equity. Mr. Anderson took in part payment 100x110 feet of vacant on Milwaukee avenue, near Logan square; also 150 feet of vacant on Cicero avenue, near Belmont. Spelz & Walson represented Mr. Knipp and Young & Johnson Mr. Anderson. Peter J. Newman has sold to Forest C. Moshier the flat property on Humboldt boulevard, 90 feet south of Linden place, lot 35x125 feet, west front, for an expressed consideration of $23,000, subject to an incumbrance of $12,000.

LEASE MARKET BRISK IN SPOTS; FLATS IN DEMAND

Improvement Shown in Renting of Office and Mercantile Space.

There were several noteworthy business building leases reported during the week, including the downtown as well as outlying districts. The situation in this field is not altogether satisfactory as regards space in office and mercantile buildings, but among those closely in touch with the situation the belief is that a slow but gradual improvement is setting in.

This market is a somewhat spotty one, as is the flat renting market, a brisk demand at firm rents being reported for space in classes of flat buildings in certain localities, while in other localities there is only a limited inquiry. Small apartments continue to be the favored ones, but the situation as a whole is of a fairly satisfactory character. The fact that there is much building being undertaken by men of experience in this field indicates that in their opinion, at least, there has been no serious overbuilding and that the renting situation is of a generally favorable character.

No Notable Loans Reported.

There were no loans of a notable character reported during the week, the only ones appearing in the records being 6 per cent serial bond issue building loans. It may be said that 6 per cent is the prevailing rate for outside loans and 5 per cent for high grade loans in the downtown district. There is little inquiry, however, in this field.

One of the most notable of the downtown leases was that in which George E. Cole & Co., printers and stationers, have leased through Dibblee & Manierre the store in the new Conway building at Washington street and Commerce court, 42x95 feet, for ten years from May 1 at an average annual rent of $11,250. Cole & Co. will move from 118 North Dearborn street, where they have been for thirty-seven years.

W. B. McIlvaine, trustee, has leased to the A. L. Randall company, importers of artificial flowers, the entire second floor in the Le Moyne building, southwest corner Wabash avenue and Lake street, for a term from April 1 at a term rent of $110,000. Albert H. Wetten & Co. were the brokers.

Cigar Store Gets New Home.

E. F. Keebler & Co. have leased for John R. Thompson to the Best & Russell company the store at 137 North Clark street, in the City Hall Square building, for a term of ten years at a term rent of $60,000. This is another of the stores formerly operated by John J. Dolan, and the Best & Russell company has purchased the fixtures and will use the space for a retail cigar store. It will give that company twenty-six stores in the loop district.

Keebler & Co. also leased for the Chicago Business college to the World Film corporation, also to the celebrated Players' Film company, also to the F. H. Jacobson company, jewelers, space in the Chicago Business College building at the southeast corner of Wabash avenue and Adams street for a term rental of $45,000.

H. George Miller negotiated the recent lease by which the Globe-Werneke company acquired the lease of the six story building at 11 North Wabash avenue, owned by the Mandels, and which is occupied in its entirety by the C. F. Adams company. The leasehold interest, having several years to run, was acquired by Albert S. Louer for the Mandels from the Adams company and then leased to the Globe-Werneke company for a term at a reported annual rent of $33,000.

Two Theaters Leased.

Mr. Miller also has leased for Frederick R. Barnheisel to the Adams company the upper floors of the building at 219-25 South State street for a term rent of $100,000.

The Alfred Hamburger Theatrical syndicate has invaded the north side and leased two theaters. One is the new Pine Grove theater at 717-19 Sheridan road, between Broadway and Pine Grove avenue, which he leased from Julius Born for a term of ten years at a reported term rent of $85,000. The building is on a lot 50x156 feet, and is said to have cost in the neighborhood of $100,000. Hugo Ash was the broker.

He also leased from Laurence J. White and Nelson Thomasson Jr. the Laurence theater at 4814-24 North Kedzie avenue. The building, now in course of construction, is to be three stories, with eight stores and eight flats besides the theater, and is expected to cost about $100,000, and S. W. Straus & Co. have made a loan of $70,000 in the form of a 6 per cent serial bond issue.

Space in Garland Building Leased.

An interesting lease in the downtown district covering a part of the second floor in the new Garland building at Wabash avenue and Washington street is reported, in which the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter company has leased the space in question from the trustees under the Wabash and Washington trust agreement, the owners of the building, for a term at a total rent of $65,000, and have sublet their store and basement at 123 North Wabash avenue to the Remien & Kuhnert company.

The lease of the typewriter company is interesting as illustrating the tendency of concerns which have considered store space essential to their business to move to the lighter and better ventilated quarters in some of the new office and mercantile buildings. The lease was negotiated by P. K. Stockwell & Co.

In connection with the construction of a three story store, flat, and office building on 234x80 feet, north front, on Forty-seventh street between Ellis and Ingleside avenues, Sherman T. Cooper has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $100,000, six years at 6 per cent.

H. O. Stone & Co. have negotiated a serial bond issue building loan of $40,000 to the Lawndale Masonic Temple association for the purpose of completing the new home of the association at the southwest corner of Millard avenue and Twenty-third street, facing a small public park.

The lot is 75x125 feet and the building is three stories and basement, with an audtiorium having a seating capacity of 600, main and small lodge rooms, banquet hall and kitchen, ladies' parlor, men's smoking and lounging rooms. The entire investment will represent a cost of approximately $100,000.

Contracts are said to have been entered into by Carl Marty, wholesale cheese importer and manufacturer, now at 327 West South Water street, for the construction of a five story and basement cold storage warehouse and office at 216-218 West Ohio street. The building, of mill construction, will cover 100x100 feet and is expected to cost $150,000. Paul Gerhard is the architect.

TELLS HOW TO RAISE VALUES.

The best way legitimately to increase property values is to put up permanent business buildings and rent them to desirable tenants at nominal rentals, says a writer in the National Real Estate Journal.

Merchants cannot do business on vacant lots, enither can they build up successful businesses on undeveloped or partially developed streets, without having a few years' leeway, at nominal rents, during which to pull business to the new location.

A landlord should consider his property in the same light as a merchant or a manufacturer does his business, expecting only small returns at first, to be increased later in accordance with the mercantile activity of the street.

My experience with tenants has been that, taken as a whole, they are a fair minded set of business men, and when business conditions warrant are willing to pay legitimate increases in rentals.

BUILDING PERMITS INCREASE

The present activity in building is shown by the fact that 232 permits were issued by the city building department last week with a total estimated cost of $1,511,100, as compared with 140 permits for the corresponding week a year ago.

REAL ESTATE CORPORATIONS URGED BY CHICAGO BOARD.

Bill Along Conservative Lines to Be Introduced in Legislature—Will Not Permit Ownership.

The Chicago real estate board has revived the campaign in favor of a change in the present laws so as to permit of real estate corporations. It is along most conservative lines, however, following closely the bill introduced at a former session of the legislature, which passed both houses, but owing to the crush during the closing hours failed to receive the governor's approval.

The bill to be introduced provides that the proposed corporations are not to acquire or own real estate or any interest therein, except that they may lease an office or offices in which to conduct their brokerage business. It is believed the bill will meet with no opposition in this form.

The board also went on record as opposing the pending fire extension limit ordinance, suggesting in its stead a reasonable present extension with a provision for an automatic extension for the future. Henry G. Zander, chairman of the legislative committee of the board, who introduced the resolution, said the council committee seemed to think the lumber and brick interests were alone interested in this matter, whereas the real estate interests were more vitally concerned than either of them.

NEW BUILDING TO GO UP AT HARRISON AND FIFTH.

Of much interest as bearing on the present low cost of building is the announcement that J. B. Moos has decided to erect an entirely new building on his property at the northeast corner of Harrison street and Fifth avenue instead of remodeling the present building on the premises, as he originally contemplated.

This change of plans was due to the fact that the erection of the new building would entail only a relatively small additional cost as compared with that of remodeling the present building, owing to the low price of building material and the greater efficiency of labor.

He accordingly has let a contract to the Solomon-Waterton Construction company for the erection of a four story mill constructed building covering the entire lot, 50x95 feet, in accordance with plans prepared by Architects Wheelock & Shank.

The building is expected to cost about $40,000, and the corner store, 18x20 feet, has been leased to the United Cigar Stores company at a term rent of $24,000 by James A. Hool of John R. Magill & Co., the agents of the building, who report other leases covering space in the building in course of negotiation.

NOTRE DAME UNIVERSITY DISPOSES OF HOLDINGS.

An interesting development in the Calumet district is the recording by the University of Notre Dame of the vacation of a number of blocks from One Hundredth street to One Hundred and Third street and Muskegon avenue to Torrence avenue. It includes a part of the property of the Wisconsin Steel company and the right of way of the Rock Island road. This is said to be one of the preliminary steps for converting a considerable portion of that territory into industrial property, and that important developments are pending the opening of One Hundred and Third street, for which there has been a general agitation in the Calumet district for some time. The entire tract will be filed under the Torrens system.

Considerable activity has been noticeable in real estate transfers in this section.

"DON'T PAINT A NEW HOUSE."

"Don't paint a new house as soon as it is finished," is the advice given by a paper devoted to this business, and the reasons are as follows:

"Today most lumber is kiln dried. This means that seasoning has been artificially forced. The pores of the wood are open and will soak up moisture. Besides, it contains all the salts and acids of the wood in concentrated form, which, if not removed in some way, will prove detrimental to the durability of the paint.

"For this reason it is generally thought advisable to allow a new building to stand for a month or two unpainted."

TWO LOOP SALES BREAK INACTIVITY OF MANY WEEKS

Business Property Market in Free Movement in All Parts of City.

Business property was well represented in the week's market, and for the first time in several weeks the downtown district had two transactions to its credit. It is true they were not of any great magnitude. A few years ago they would have cut a poor figure alongside the frequent six figure transactions of those boom days, but two deals put over in one week now seem like real money, even though they are only around the $100,000 mark. It is to be noted, too, that they were exceeded in size by a transaction in outside business property, the W. A. Wieboldt purchase on Milwaukee avenue, but they were encouraging just the same.

Big Flat Deals Lacking.

Big flat deals, which have been conspicuous features of the market for several weeks, were not represented in the week's business. There was a fair run of medium sized deals, from $25,000 to $6[illegible],000, and a rather freer movement of small properties than has been the case for several weeks past. With the coming of more favorable weather conditions it is believed there will be a sharp improvement in the market for this class of property.

Bernard A. Eckhart figured as the purchaser in one of the downtown deals, acquiring from Rachel Friedlander the property at 166-68 Lake street, between La Salle and Fifth avenue, for an indicated consideration of $95,000.

The lot is 48x148 feet to an alley, south front, and is improved with a five story and basement building, said to have a gross annual rent of $9,000. Part of the ground floor is occupied by Dellemand & Co., wholesale liquor dealers.

Mr. Eckhart gave in part payment his former residence at 210 South Ashland boulevard, east front, between Adams street and Jackson boulevard, at a reported valuation of $15,000. The house is a handsome three story brown stone structure and is said to have originally cost over $60,000 to build.

Mark Levy & Bro. represented the seller and William R. Tucker Mr. Eckhart.

The property was sold by Mrs. Friedlander through Levy & Bro., to Robert C. Thorne for $15,000. Including the building the Lake street property sold for a trifle over $13 a square foot. Percy Eckhart and E. A. Buzzell attended to the legal details.

Market Street Property Sold.

The other deal involved the acquirement by Albert F. Marthe from the estate of H. F. Waite and John F. Farnsworth of the property at 29-31 North Market street, west front, 102 feet south of Washington street. He acquired 20½x80 feet from each of the grantors for a total indicated consideration of $120,000, and gave a trust deed to the Chicago Title & Trust company to secure a part purchase money mortgage of $66,000, five years at 5½ per cent. The improvements comprise a four story and basement building.

Mr. Marthe then conveyed the property to the trust company as trustee for an indicated consideration of $120,000, in connection with which transaction P. S. Theurer conveyed to Mr. Marthe the vacant 128x170 feet at the southwest corner of Lincoln Park West and Fullerton parkway, for an indicated consideration of $83,000, made up of an incumbrance of $33,000 and $50,000 paid for the equity, as evidenced by the revenue stamps.

Mr. Marthe then conveyed this to Joseph E. Swanson for the same consideration. It is stated the latter plans to improve with an apartment building to cost $200,000. R. A. Connell & Co. are said to be the brokers.

Wieboldt Acquires More Ground.

The property purchased by Mr. Wieboldt comprised the premises 1269-71 Milwaukee avenue 50x125 feet to an alley, and 50x125 feet in the rear facing Bowman street. It adjoins the Wieboldt & Co. store on Milwaukee avenue, just north of Paulina street.

The Milwaukee avenue frontage is improved with a three story and basement birck store and flat building, while the property in the rear has two story frame improvements. A consideration of $18[illegible],500 is indicated in the transfer.

There will be no changes in the property until the expiration of leases having about three years to run, after which it is thought the property will be improved and occupied by Wieboldt & Co. The deal was negotiated by George J. Haberer & Co., who represented both parties.

Deal on the South Side.

An interesting transaction in East Forty-seventh street business property was the sale by William A. Hoops to Cyrus Bentley of the property at the northeast corner of Greenwood avenue for an indicated consideration of $57,500. The lot fronts 100 feet, with a depth of 97.8 feet, and is improved with a two story white tile front building, with stores on the ground floor and offices above.

The purchaser gave back a part purchase money mortgage for $32,500, paying the difference in cash. E. J. Norcott of H. F. Norcott & Co. represented the seller and S. P. Duedney, the purchaser.

In the exercise of an option contained in a contract made about two years ago, Jacob White and Harry O. Stokes acquired from John A. Spoor and Arthur G. Leonard a tract of about one-third of an acre of inside property between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-seventh streets, Ashland avenue and railroad right of way.

RESTA FIRST IN VANDERBILT CUP ROAD RACE

Englishman, in Peugeot, Shows Way Home to Wilcox, in Stutz.

PULLEN, MERCER, THIRD

How They Finished.

Pos. Car and Driver.	Time.
1—Peugeot, Resta	4:27:37
2—Stutz, Wilcox	4:34:36
3—Mercer, Pullen	4:35:37
4—Mercedes, De Palma	4:39:07
5—Maxwell, Carlson	4:44:12

Others to finish: Delage, Newhouse, sixth; Maxwell, Oldfield, seventh; Simplex, Disbrow, eighth; Ono, Hughes, ninth; King, Klein, tenth.

San Francisco, Cal., March 6.—[Special.]—Darius Resta, the English driver brought to this country to handle the French Peugeot, which American drivers have failed to win with in a single road race, duplicated his victory in the Grand Prize of last Saturday by taking the tenth annual Vanderbilt cup race from a field of the greatest domestic drivers over the exposition course here today.

Resta's time for the 300.3 miles was 4:27:37. His average was 67.5 miles an hour, nine miles faster than the mark he established in the Grand Prize. Trailing the Englishman across the finish line was Howard Wilcox in his Stutz. Wilcox's time was 4:34:36.

Wilcox Runner-Up.

Wilcox also had the honor of finishing second to the Peugeot in the grand prize, and to the Stutz company goes the honor of owning the first American car to cross the tape. Pullen was in close pursuit of Wilcox when he crossed the line. His time was a minute slower than that of the Indianapolis drivers. De Palma, twice winner of the Vanderbilt and a favorite with his six cylinder Mercedes, was a poor fourth, and William Carlson was fifth in the Maxwell.

Four accidents, none of them fatal, resulted from the terrific pace and the treacherous condition of the course. Jim Cleary, mechanician for Bob Burman, the eleventh hour nominee of the Case management, suffered two broken ribs, a broken shoulder blade, and several fractured ribs in an accident to Burman's machine. The car turned turtle when Burman was making a desperate attempt to gain the lead over Resta.

Burman Only Bruised.

Burman escaped with a few bruises. Ed O'Donnell and his mechanic escaped injury when their Duesenberg turned over and was completely wrecked late in the race, while Ruckstall and his assistant were fortunate enough to come unscathed from a similar wreck during a final sprint on the part of the Mercer pilot to overhaul the Peugeot. A tire thrown from the rim of Capt. Kennedy's Edwards special struck a spectator, who was knocked unconscious.

Ideal weather conditions and a crowd that breaks all previous records greeted the drivers as they lined up at the tape. The course was as fast as it possibly could be made considering the number of turns. De Palma ruled the favorite, with Resta running second, and third honors divided equally among Grant, who, like De Palma, already had two legs on the Vanderbilt cup, Wilcox, Rickenbacher, Bragg, Hughes, and Carlson.

Stars in Fast Getaway.

The first trio of cars was sent away at 12:30 p. m., Ralph De Palma in the Mercedes, Durant in the Chevrolet, and Darius Resta in the Peugeot being in the first rank. Pullen in the Mercer, Rickenbacher in the Maxwell, and Bragg in the Californian were started in the second rank. Three of the hardest drivers in America, they immediately began the task of overhauling De Palma and Resta. At regular intervals of fifteen seconds the field got under way. Rickenbacher overtook Resta and De Palma at the end of the third lap and established a slight lead. This he held until motor trouble developed. He retired in the sixth lap. Alley, pilot of the Duesenberg, who had been in the background from the start, drew up to the lead at the end of ten laps, with Resta running second, Pullen in the Mercer, third, Oldfield in the Maxwell fourth, and Ruckstall in the Mercer fifth.

The speed averaged 68 miles an hour, considered fast for the course.

Three Eliminated Early.

No change in the five leaders was evident at the end of fifteen laps. Le Cain and Durant in the Chevrolets and Nikrent in a Mercer had joined the Rickenbacher Maxwell at the pits. The average had dropped to 67.5 miles an hour.

Resta wrested the lead from Alley, who stopped at the pits in the twentieth lap. Pullen was second, Burman in the Case third, Oldfield and Carlson in the Maxwells fourth and fifth respectively. Marquis retired his Bugatti with a broken spring. The leaders were running so close a stop for any cause changed the complexion of the race.

At thirty laps Resta still retained his lead, but Burman had pulled the Case into second position. Pullen had dropped back to third, Carlson held his Maxwell fourth, while Ruckstall had displaced Oldfield as fifth. Wilcox had moved to sixth place with his Stutz. He was closely pursued in the order named by De Palma in the Mercedes, Disbrow in the

FIGHT IN HAVANA EARLY IN APRIL

Curley Fails to Move Johnson in Effort to Go to Juarez for the Scrap.

Havana, March 6.—Jack Johnson has won his argument with Promoter Jack Curley. The Johnson-Willard battle for the heavyweight championship, scheduled for today in Juarez, Mex., will be held here the first week in April. Curley so announced here tonight.

"I couldn't convince Johnson that it would be safe for him to go to Mexico," Curley declared. "It was not because he was afraid of United States officers grabbing him, because the Mann white slave act, under which he was indicted in Chicago, is not extraditable. What he did fear was that some hotheaded Texan, when he saw Johnson beating Willard, as he says he would be doing, would rise up with a six-shooter in his hand and start popping at him. Jack said he didn't want to be a target for bullets. He said he is anxious to meet Willard, as he feels sure that the ex-cowboy will be easy for him.

Thinks Havana Preferable.

"Jack told me that if Juarez was the only place available for the fight he would go there. But he believes that Havana is a much better place even from the promoter's standpoint."

Reports that Johnson was broke and so badly in need of money that he would have to fight Willard were dispelled by the negro himself. He offered to pay back to Curley expense money that had been advanced him. "Sparklers" stood out all over the big negro. One in his tie vied with a couple on his fingers in lighting up the room in which he was talking to Curley.

A delegation of local men waited on Curley and made him an offer of a bonus in case the fight is staged here. The promoter was also assured that the Havana race meeting would be prolonged a couple of weeks if the fight would be held here.

Cables Expense Money.

Johnson tonight cabled money to Bob Armstrong for expenses, notifying him to start for Havana at once. Armstrong has been the champion's chief trainer in the past, and he is expected to officiate in that capacity for this bout.

Curley has cabled Willard to come here at once. He stated that he expects no hesitancy on Willard's part in coming here, even, if his manager, Tom Jones, opposes the move.

Jones Demands Guarantee.

El Paso, Tex., March 6.—Tom Jones, Jess Willard's manager, said tonight that he would not send Willard to Havana unless he was guaranteed a sufficient sum. Willard has not returned from Los Angeles.

FAVORS GOPHER BOXING BILL

St. Paul, Minn., March 6.—The bill legalizing ten round, no-decision boxing contests in Minnesota was recommended for passage to the state house of representatives today by the committee on general legislation. The measure, which is patterned after the Wisconsin boxing law, is expected to meet with much opposition when it comes up for consideration in the house.

BRITTON OUTPOINTS TOLAND.

New York, March 6.—Jack Britton of Chicago outfought and outpointed Jack Toland of Philadelphia, in a ten round bout, in Brooklyn tonight. The weights were Britton, 138½; Toland, 146.

White Sox Beat Angels, 8 to 2, but Ray Schalk Is Disabled

Wild Pitch Dents Catcher's Side and He May Be Out for Week; Jasper Stars on Slab for Hose.

BY SAM WELLER.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 6.—[Special.]—Rowland's White Sox scored their third straight victory over the Angels today, 8 to 2, but one of Cap Dillon's wild hurlers took all the joy out of the game by puncturing Ray Schalk in the left side and damaging the catcher so badly he may have to lay up for repairs for a week.

Schalk was disabled in the fourth inning. Horstman let loose one stray curve that grazed Larry Chappell, then followed with another fast one that Schalkie was unable to avoid. The little backstop was forced to quit, Mayer taking his place behind the bat in the last half of the round.

Jasper and Klepfer Hurl.

"Hy" Jasper and Ed Klepfer had little trouble with the Angels, while the Sox pounded the offerings of Horstman and Love for thirteen ringing blows. Off the former the hose collected two runs in each of the first three rounds. Love held them to two tallies in the last four sessions. Jasper stepped five rounds and quit with only one hit, a double by Metzger, charged against him. In four innings Klepfer was nicked for seven safeties, the Angels scoring one run in the sixth and another in the eighth.

"Shano" Collins led the heavy artillery with three singles. Eddie of the Collins tribe clouted a pair of doubles, and Happy Felch followed with a single and a three bagger. Weaver contributed two singles.

Sox Score at Start.

Schalk, John Collins and Weaver poled singles in the first inning, and Eddie Collins swatted a double which netted two runs for the round. Passes to Brief and Baker, a sacrifice, a wild pitch and a safety by Chappell counted another in the second. Felch delivered his triple in the third and it scored Eddie Collins and Weaver, who were put on the runways by Angel boots.

Klepfer gave the coast leaguers their first counter in the sixth. Harper's double, a single by Abstein, a walk and an infield out produced the score. The sacks were full when Klepfer finally managed to retire the side. John Collins added one to the Sox total in the seventh when he singled and completed the trip around on Felch's safe smash.

A two ply drive by Eddie Collins and Shano's third hit developed the final Chicago tally in the last frame. The Angels staged a weak rally in their half, Love's single and a double by McMullen yielding one run.

Wants Youth and Speed.

Youth and speed will predominate on the White Sox team of 1915 if Manager Rowland strings along with his present regulars. If Rowland picks Scott to pitch the opening contest in St. Louis on April 14 the Chicago club will go on the field with a team averaging 25 years young. Only three of the regulars, Eddie Collins, Shano Collins, and Scott, are over the 24 years mark, and the first named pair are the fastest men on the squad.

Even if Rowland makes a few shifts, the 25 years average may still hold. Of the regulars, Brief at first base is 24; E. Collins, 27; J. Collins, 28; Weaver, 23; Bromwich, 24; Chappell, 24; Felsch, 21; Schalk, 23, and Scott, 29. Should Fournier, who is 23, displace Brief, or Breton (23) get the nomination over Bromwich—and these seem to be the only possible shifts—the Sox will loom up a bit younger, but no faster.

From now on Rowland will devote much time to picking the right man for the lead-off position. Last season this honor was heaped upon Buck Weaver. Chappell is doing the first up trick at present, but the manager may decide later to drop Larry to fourth or fifth place and send Buck to the top. Larry is a stranger to the lead-off rôle.

Whatever shifts are made, none will affect the two Collins. Third place has been wished upon Eddie, and "Shano" will clout from the clean-up position just behind. Owing to the dearth of left handed batters Rowland will find it hard to arrange the lineup in such a way as to secure some evenly balanced battery strength.

At San Diego This Week.

The southpaw swatters are Fournier, Demmitt, Weaver, E. Collins, and Chappell, exclusive of the pitchers. Only three of the hurlers are left handed—namely, Cicotte, Faber, and Russell.

Fournier and Demmitt are with the Goofs, so the first team has only three portside clubbers, Eddie Collins, Chappell, and Weaver. Buck is a two-way batter, equally effective right and left handed.

After tomorrow's combat with the Angels here Rowland's men will board a rattler for San Diego, where they will become part of the Panama-California exposition, appearing there Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday against the Vernon club of the Coast league. All the games will be staged in the exposition stadium.

SEALS HAND GAME TO SOX SECONDS

Oakland, Cal., March 6.—[Special.]—Ed Walsh's Sox Seconds secured revenge for yesterday's defeat by beating San Francisco today, 8 to 5. Owing to lack of pitchers, "Red" Faber worked the whole nine innings and finished strong. The Seals started brisky in the third inning, scoring four ruuns on a combination of hits and errors.

Five walks, a hit batsman, two errors, and one hit netted seven runs for the Sox in the seventh. Charley Smith, ex-Cub pitcher, was on the field. Secretary Grabiner of the Sox arrived today from Los Angeles. Score:

Sox II.....................8 6 3
San Francisco...........5 11 3

Batteries—Faber and Kuhn; Barham, Ross, Couch, Benham, and Clarke.

REGULARS BEAT CUB YOUNGSTERS

Roger Gives Four Slab Veterans Initial Workout; First Team Wins, 8 to 5.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Tampa, Fla., March 6.—[Special.]—Manager Bresnahan put his protégés through a nine inning scrap today to make up for their semi-vacation yesterday, and the regulars got square with the Goofs by trimming them, 8 to 5, in a combat featured by blunders, demonstrating how green the athletes are with only a week's warming up in advance of starting their exhibition series on Monday.

The double practice helped limber up the players, as the field was in as perfect shape as training fields can be put and the weather was all that could be desired in spite of a breeze from the northwest.

Roger "Plays It Safe."

The two squads were sent against each other in the same order as in Thursday's game, with the exception of the pitchers. Later on Bresnahan threw baseball convention to the winds and shifted athletes in utter disregard of the uniforms they wore. Bresnahan himself played on both teams, officiating as catcher for the regulars and as shortstop for the Goofs. He made sure of being on the winning side.

In the early innings the slab assignments were given to veteran pitchers. Cheney and Vaughn worked three innings apiece for the Goofs, and McConnell and Lavender three rounds each for the regulars. Although McConnell is a Cub recruit, he belongs in the G. A. R. class as a pitcher and worked that way.

Young Hurlers Follow "Vets."

Standridge and Schorr were the two "kid" pitchers who were put into the fry and while they had no such control as the older men they stammered through the assignments successfully. Schorr, who brought about the defeat of the regulars by his wildness in Thursday's combat, finished today's game for the same regulars and held the Goofs to two runs, one of which was due to a bobble by Bob Fisher. Schorr displayed a bit of wildness in the ninth, when he walked his slab opponent, Standridge, but recovered in time to prevent a repetition of the previous walkfest.

Standridge got through two innings with only one hit against him and gave only one pass. The free ticket was followed by a wild pitch and an error by Phelan for the only run the regulars got off him.

Hargrave "Lemon" at First.

The Goofs might have won but for the troubles of "Bubbles" Hargrave in trying to play first base. He could not keep his feet on the bag. Several teammates gave "Bubbles" advice, but after he had handed the regulars several runs Bresnahan gave him the best advice. That was to go behind the bat and let Archer play first. The difference in the work of the Goofs was marked. Archer pulled an unassisted double play at first in the sixth inning, the first of the season so far as known here.

The Cub squad was enlarged by the arrival of "Zip" Zabel, the Kansas collegian, who was assigned to the task of umpiring the game. Zabel passed his examinations successfully and is now an engineer—chemical, not locomotive. Filbert Pierce was on the silk list with a high fever which kept Doc Hart busy in the morning, but was out in citizen's clothing at the game.

WHALES LEAVE TO START WORK FOR FLAG RACE

Main School Due to Reach Shreveport Training Camp Tonight.

MANN REPORTS LATER.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Charley Weeghman's Whales, a whole school of them, departed last night for the sunny south to get in shape for the coming baseball season. There were two carloads of athletes and enough others to make a party of over forty, which departed at 6:35 o'clock from the Twelfth street station. The party is due to reach Shreveport, La., where the training camp will be pitched, tonight about 10 o'clock.

Twenty-two of the athletes belonged to the Chicago team and ten were from the new Newark club, in charge of George Stovall. Several of the players took their wives, and they, with Secretary Williams, a brace a war scribes, and Trainer Brady, made the party exceed forty in number.

President Weeghman found it impossible to go because of business cares, but intends to visit the camp inside of ten days.

Mann Fails to Arrive.

At the last minute there was some concern over the nonarrival of Leslie Mann, the former Boston world's champions' outfielder, who has cast his lot with the Whales. Manager Tinker expected him to report yesterday, and when he had failed to show at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the manager was about to send telegrams hither and yon in search of the star.

Then Tinker discovered that Mann had written to President Weeghman several days ago saying he desired to stay in Springfield, Mass., until after Thursday, because the basketball team he has been coaching had an important game. Weeghman wired his permission and told Mann to go direct to Shreveport from his winter quarters. He is expected there in time to start work with the squad Monday.

Reach Memphis This Morning.

The Whales will arrive in Memphis early this morning and be hauled across the big bridge over the Mississippi. All day they will ride through the state of Arkansas until they reach a crossing which leads down to Shreveport. There the special cars will be unhitched and will make the balance of the journey as a special train, arriving in the camp in time for early retirement and a good rest before starting the long grind of training.

The members of the Whales who boarded the train here were: Manager Tinker, Wilson, Beck, Farrell, Zwilling, Wickland, Flack, Brown, Rankin, Johnson, Lange, Prendergast, Smith, Beard, Black, Clemens, Fischer, Jackson, Kavanaugh, Rossinger, and Wagner.

Those who will report at Shreveport are Mann, Hanford, Zeider, Hendrix, Brennan, Baumgartner, McGowan, Warner, and Walter Johnson (perhaps).

New Infielder with Party.

An ambitious infielder, W. G. Gifford, went along as a member of the party. He begged Manager Tinker to give him a trial and offered to pay his own expenses. Tinker liked the spirit of the boy and took him along. Zeider had intended to report here yesterday, but asked for a few days of grace because of the illness of his wife.

The members of the Newark team in the party were: Manager Stovall, Enzenroth, Henning, Blackburne, Kulp, Benton, Shaw, Main, Bradley, and Gilmore. They will train at Marshall, Tex., forty miles west of Shreveport. The other players of the club will be there to begin work tomorrow.

Although it was the third getaway of a Chicago ball team this season, there was a big crowd of north side fans at the station to give a cheer for Tinker and his athletes. The north side fans are even noisier than those in the neighborhood of Comiskey park and apparently are making efforts to show up their rivals in the art of rooting.

Everything Ready at Camp.

At Shreveport everything is in readiness for the start of training tomorrow. Groundkeeper Murphy of the north side park has been down there for the last month giving the training field his personal expert attention and reported it in fine condition more than a week ago. A year ago when the Tinker tribe arrived there they found a rather bad diamond, but before they left it had been worked into good condition. No trouble is expected this year.

A regular clubhouse, with lockers and hot showers, is in waiting. The practice field is about three miles from the hotel, but the distance never thwarted Tinker's plan to have two workouts a day last year, and he intends to follow the same method this time.

ELGIN LIKELY TO JOIN LEAGUE

Rockford, Ill., March 6.—[Special.]—President B. M. Parsons has deferred the meeting of the Bi-State league pending the result of the canvass at Elgin, where an effort is being made to finance a team. The Elgin committees hope to raise $2,000, in which event, it is understood, traction interests will provide a park.

JOHNSON JOINING SENATORS.

Coffeyville, Kas., March 6.—Walter Johnson, the baseball pitcher, left here today for the training camp of the Washington Americans at Charlottesville, Va. Johnson said he expected no attempt would be made by the Federal league to prevent his playing with Washington.

PUSHING ONE'S SELF ISN'T ALWAYS PUSHING FORWARD

CONTROL ADDED TO BRAINS MAKES PITCHING STARS

Speed and Curves Second in Requirements of Really Great Slabmen.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Greatness in the world of pitchers requires two things which are essentials—brains and control. The general impression is that speed and curves are the slabman's greatest assets, but these are only incidentals.

There have been great pitchers whose delivery lacked speed and others have attained high esteem without much in the way of curves, but many seekers after pitching glory have been sentenced to the minor leagues for life for lack of control and the brains to use their talent intelligently.

Occasionally a hurler has attained greatness in the major leagues without an unusual supply of gray matter beneath his own skull, but in such cases it usually will be found that his efforts were controlled and abetted by the brains behind the mask of his catcher.

Control Is Essential.

There has been more than one such instance where the world has lauded the prowess of a slabman whose success really was due to the uncrowned hero who wore the big mitt and transmitted his orders to the slab by finger signals. But there never has been a successful pitcher who did not possess control. All the brains in the world backed by all the speed of a Walter Johnson and aided by the hooks of a Plank will not get by in the big leagues without the ability to put the ball just where the slabman wants to.

The lad on the lot who aspires to become a slab marvel imagines he is on the high road to fame when he first learns to put the snap on a ball that will cause it to curve. As soon as he has acquired the knack of throwing a wide sweeping curve—such as is known as a "roundhouse" in the baseball players' vocabulary—the young man will consider himself ready to tackle a job in the National or American league.

If in addition to this curve he can throw a fast ball that will make a noise like a small firecracker when it hits the catcher's mitt the would-be pitcher probably will consider himself ready to face Ty Cobb and able to strike out the Georgia marvel every time he comes to bat.

Must Get Ball "Over."

It would pain this youngster to be told that instead of fanning the air ingloriously Ty Cobb probably would amble smilingly to first base on balls every time the Tiger swatsman faced him. That would happen as sure as sunset unless the pitcher could deliver at least three out of six pitched balls over some portion of the home plate.

If he could do that, Cobb probably would make a single, double, triple, or quadruple every time up unless the aforesaid aspirant to slab laurels was able to put the ball over the corners of the plate and make it hard to hit safely. For all the speed imaginable or curves three feet wide would not baffle a good batsman if they were always in the groove when they came over the plate.

How "Hutch" Got Control.

Pitching aspirants cannot begin learning to control the ball too early in life, nor maintain that control without constant practice. It is related of Hutchinson, the once famous twirler of Anson's old White Stockings, that he acquired control every spring in unique manner.

"Hutch" used to carry a bat with a square end out to the baseball park and pick up a small boy somewhere on the way to the grounds. Arriving there, Hutchinson would stand the bat on its square end—always the big end—on the ground near the grand stand or the fence. Then he would pace off the pitching distance and start throwing the ball at the upright bat, the small or handle end of which is considerably smaller than the width of the home plate. The fence or stand served as a natural backstop and the small boy threw back the balls.

When Hutchinson acquired the ability to hit the bat and knock it down twice in five attempts with straight balls, he began to try curves, and when he could topple over the bat once in three attempts with a curve ball he allowed he had control enough to start the championship season. He did not quit practicing, however, but kept up his original scheme for gaining perfect control at intervals during the season.

Confidence Is Big Asset.

Given the brains to know how to pitch to different batsmen and the control which enables a slabman to put the ball where he wants to, the rest of the art of hurling is accessory. If a pitcher possesses a varied assortment of "goods" in addition to brains and control his task is that much easier.

Nick Altrock made good for a number of years with nothing except a dinky slow curve and a skinful of confidence. He had perfect control and a wonderful baseball instinct. Ed Walsh became a hero of the diamond without a curve ball worth mentioning. He had marvelous control of the spitball, which answered the purpose of a curve, and had a fast ball that was really fast. In addition he had a world of confidence, and when he was making his nation wide reputation he had the brainiest catcher of modern times—Billy Sullivan—directing his efforts. If you care to stop and ponder a moment, the beginning of Walsh's decline coincided with the relegation of Sullivan to the bench so exactly as to be eloquent.

Only One Real Curve.

There is considerable misunderstanding in the world of fans regarding the "stuff" possessed by the average pitcher. The impression is general that three or four different kinds of curves are necessary to success on the slab. As a matter of fact, the average pitcher uses only two kinds of delivery—the curve and the fast ball. The curve is almost invariably the familiar out curve of fan parlance, and the fast ball is what the public calls the "inshoot."

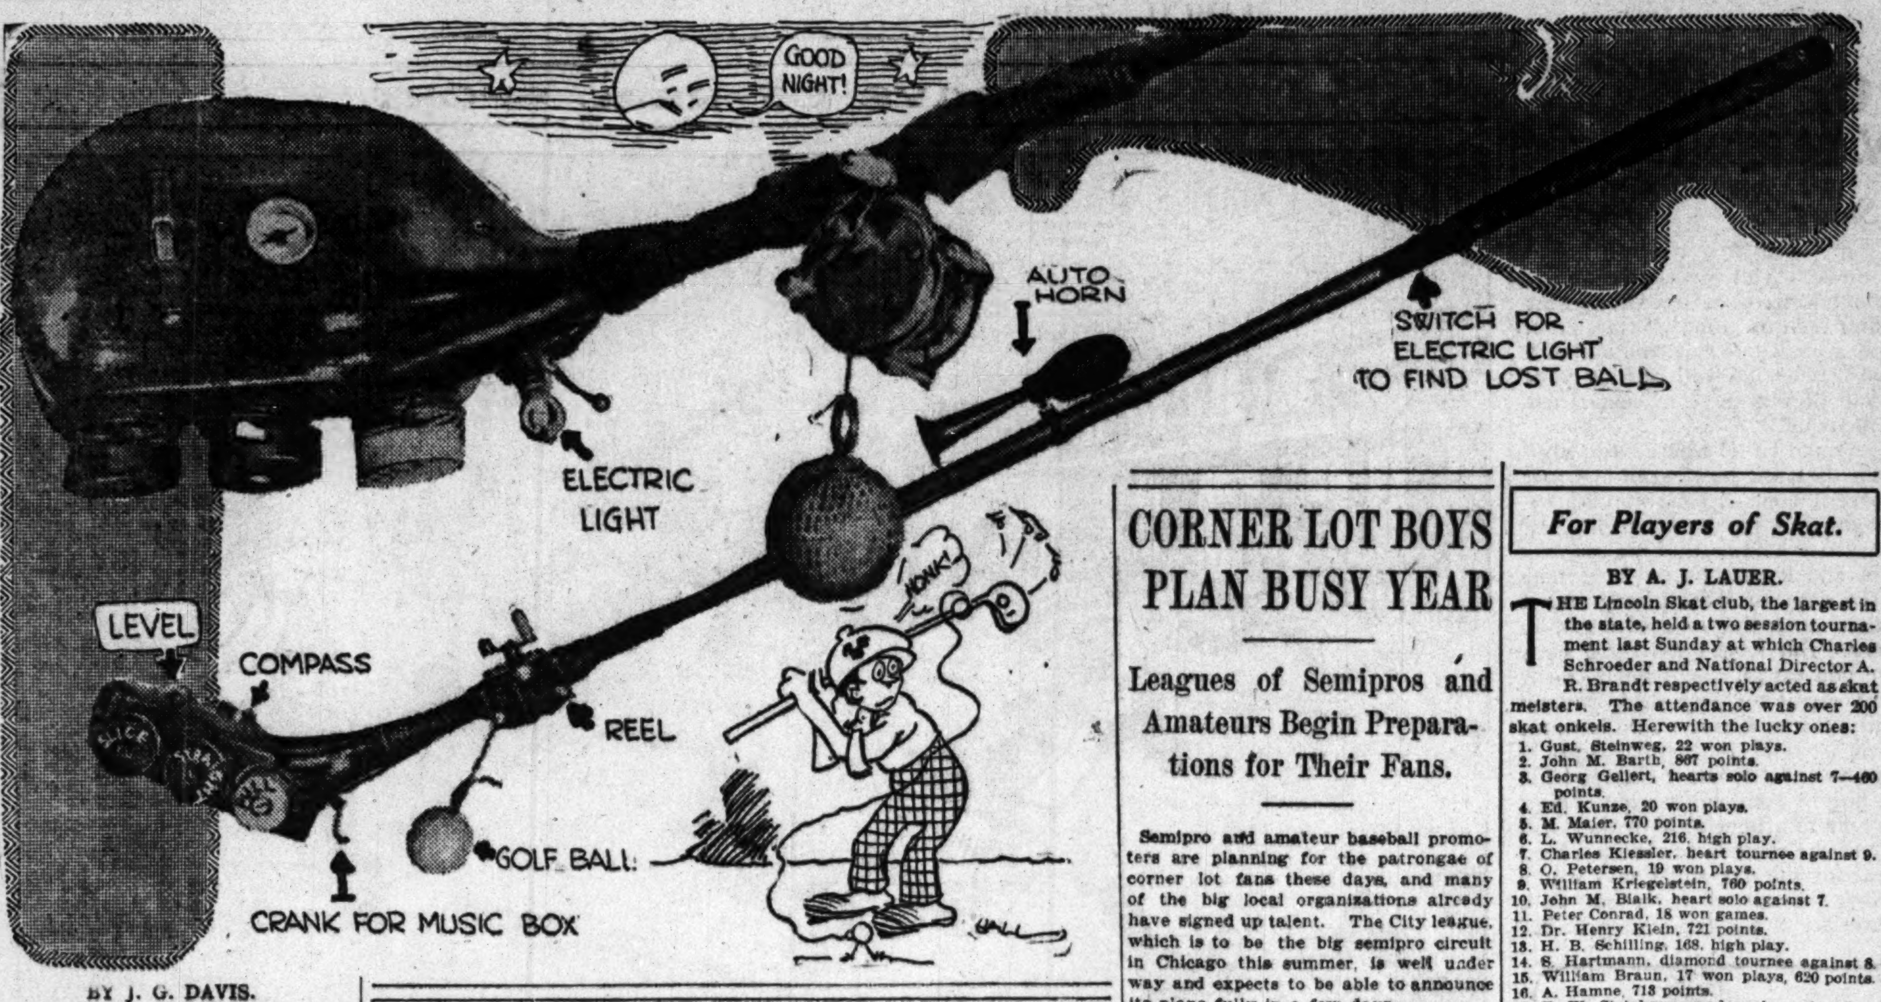
No one has yet been able to pitch a ball that will curve "in." It usually curves "out," although some pitchers use a variety of the out curve which is called a "drop." The in curve of popular fancy is merely a fast ball with a "jump" or a "hop" on it. It is thrown with the opposite twist to that which produces the out curve, but with such speed that it varies from a straight ball only slightly.

Matty's Famous "Fadeaway."

The nearest to an in curve is the fadeaway, developed by Mathewson, who acquired the ability to hurl a "jump" ball slowly enough so that it would break in toward a right handed batsman or away from a left handed batsman. But the fadeaway is not nearly as pronounced in its variation from a straight line as is the ordinary out curve.

The more common spitball is a freak which has the deceptive effect of a "drop" without being as slow as a real curve ball must be. It breaks downward from its natural course just before reaching the batsman. Few pitchers use it often, but many make a bluff at it, merely throwing enough spitballs to demonstrate that they can do so, thereby keeping the batsman guessing.

Here It Is! The Golf Club Fitted to Overcome All Difficulties.



BY J. G. DAVIS.

HENRY AUGUSTUS (GUS) FOSS, weighmaster of the board of trade, is an ardent morning golfer. It is said he has been known to locate in a rocking chair at the Jackson park shelter at 11 p. m. and keep vigil through the night so as to be first in line at daybreak.

Early morning golf is not without its drawbacks, among them being bad light and fog. With a commendable desire to assist Gus in his climb to the championship of the B. of T. his associates in the weighing department decided to present him with a club that would make his matutinal golf an unalloyed pleasure.

Joseph Schmidt was appointed inventor because of his constructive ability and the fact that he lives in Edgewater, where he breathes similar atmosphere to Champion "Chick" Evans. Hence he is well fitted to solve golf problems. The result of his genius can be seen in the accompanying photographs.

The head of the club is seven inches long and two inches deep. On the top is a compass by which Gus can steer his course, and a spirit level has been added so he can tee when he gets off the flat. Three springs with wooden heads, marked "pull," "straight," and "slice," are fastened on the face of the club, enabling Gus to hit where his fancy dictates.

Should the light be poor, Gus can touch a button located in the grip and illuminate a small incandescent lamp located near the neck of the head. If the long night watch makes him weary he can turn a handle located at the heel and hear the tinkle of a music box.

"Safety first" is the keynote of the next device, located six inches up the shaft. Here is fastened a fishing reel with a ball attached to the end of the line. If Gus drives out into the fog and cannot locate the pellet, all he has to do is to wind up the ball. "Quite elementary, Watson."

Half way up the shaft there is a small horn, so that when the weather is thick Gus can "toot, toot" and keep the neighboring craft familiar with his location.

St. Andrews, with its many years of golf, never saw anything like the wonderful club which was presented to Foss at the annual dinner of the weighing department. Players looking for the latest ideas in club construction can view the club at the Golf shop, where it has been placed on exhibition by its owner.

CUB REGULARS BEAT RECRUITS

came in from Lakeland looking for some more exhibition dates with the Cubs, but if Bresnahan increases his schedule it will be in favor of the Phillies. Score:

Goofs ....0 2 0 0 0 1 0 2 0—5 6 5
Regulars .....2 2 2 1 0 0 1 0 *—8 10 1

Batteries—Cheney, Vaughn, Standridge, and Archer and Hargrave; McConnell, Lavender, Schorr, and Bresnahan and Tyree.

Opposes Early Games.

Manager Bresnahan is not much of a believer in the value of exhibition games as a method of putting athletes in trim. That is, he doesn't care much for the exhibition thing too early in the season, believing that ten days or a fortnight of practice games at the finish of a spring trip are sufficient to polish off the players for a pennant race.

Nevertheless the Cubs are booked for a lot of hard exhibition games beginning day after tomorrow after having had only one week in which to limber up joints and muscles that have been disused for nearly six months. Bresnahan's tribe has to tackle the Philadelphia Nationals on Monday, then stack up against the Athletics for a series of three games on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of next week.

Lame Wings Are Expected.

The Cubs will have had two more days of training than the Phillies, who did not get to St. Petersburg until Tuesday night, beginning their work last Wednesday. Nevertheless the players are likely to extend themselves in this initial game, because of the rivalry that naturally exists between major league outfits, and they will not be in the best of physical condition for going the limit. The series right afterward with the Athletics also will call for hustling by the Cubs, who will be more anxious to beat the American league champions than they will be to lick the Phillies on their own circuit.

With a long pitching string to draw from Bresnahan does not worry about the effect of these battles on his hurlers, but he does dislike to put his regulars through too many hard games so soon after beginning work. To obviate this the Cub manager thinks of using two teams of in and out fielders alternately if the Florida public will stand for it.

Two Sets of Fielders.

There are enough players on hand for two sets of fielders without playing anybody out of position except at first base. Vic Saier is the only guardian of the initial sack on the list. Phelan and McLarry can be alternated at second, Fisher and Keating at short, and Zimmerman and Corriden at third if desired by the manager.

There are seven outfielders, so Bresnahan can put into the games a trio of left handed batsmen to face right handed pitchers and three outfielders who bat right handed to face the southpaw pitchers. Williams, Good, and Schulte all swing their clubs from the first base side of the plate, and can be alternated with Knisely, Johnston, and Allison. Raymond Murphy, the young protégé of Heine Zimmerman, is the seventh outfielder on the roster.

CORNER LOT BOYS PLAN BUSY YEAR

Leagues of Semipros and Amateurs Begin Preparations for Their Fans.

Semipro and amateur baseball promoters are planning for the patrongae of corner lot fans these days, and many of the big local organizations already have signed up talent. The City league, which is to be the big semipro circuit in Chicago this summer, is well under way and expects to be able to announce its plans fully in a few days.

The fraternal leagues are making rapid progress also, nearly all reporting increases in membership. Meetings of the Knights of Columbus, Knights of Pythias, Craftsmen, and Columbian Knights already have been held, and the schedules probably will make their appearance before the end of the month.

Amateurs Want Early Close.

President E. C. Patterson's National Amateur Baseball association held preliminary meetings last month. The organization is endeavoring to get the local leagues to finish their regular schedules early in August in order to permit the playoff between the league title holders for the city championship. What success the national body will have with the leagues is not known, although it is likely to encounter some opposition from leagues which wish to play all through the half holiday period that ends on Labor day.

The Wholesale Grocers' league is following last year's successful season by endeavoring to expand to eight clubs this year. The clubs already signed are Sprague, Warner & Co., Reid, Murdoch & Co., W. M. Hoyt & Co., Steele, Wedeles & Co., and Durand & Kasper Co. The McNeil & Higgins company and Franklin MacVeagh & Co. have been invited to join. Officers are: J. A. Popp, president; W. S. Uckerman, vice president; P. B. Dunn, treasurer, and A. C. Sullivan, secretary.

Juniors in the Field.

The Junior Amateur Managers' league will hold its first meeting of the year tomorrow night at 63 E. Adams street, although President Sheahan does not expect the season to start until the middle of April. The organization is the first one of the free lance bodies to get under way.

For Players of Skat.

BY A. J. LAUER.

THE Lincoln Skat club, the largest in the state, held a two session tournament last Sunday at which Charles Schroeder and National Director A. R. Brandt respectively acted as skat meisters. The attendance was over 200 skat onkels. Herewith the lucky ones:

1. Gust. Steinweg, 22 won plays.
2. John M. Barth, 867 points.
3. Georg Gellert, hearts solo against 7—460 points.
4. Ed. Kunze, 20 won plays.
5. M. Maier, 770 points.
6. L. Wunnecke, 216, high play.
7. Charles Kiessler, heart tournee against 9.
8. O. Petersen, 19 won plays.
9. William Kriegelstein, 760 points.
10. John M. Bialk, heart solo against 7.
11. Peter Conrad, 18 won games.
12. Dr. Henry Klein, 721 points.
13. H. B. Schilling, 168, high play.
14. S. Hartmann, diamond tournee against 8.
15. William Braun, 17 won plays, 620 points.
16. A. Hamne, 713 points.
17. F. W. Steinhaus, spades solo against 6.
18. Hugo Fritzsche, 17 won plays, 510 points.
19. John Heaney, 700 points.
20. A. M. Weinberger, 140 high play.
21. John Bindgen, spade turnee against 6.

At this time it might be well to advise all who are interested in the welfare of the Chicago league to reserve Sunday, March 14, for the tournament at which George Mahler acts as skatmeister.

President J. M. Gross of the North American Skat league, while in city a few days ago, was highly elated over the outlook for breaking the records of attendance in the meet to be held at Peoria, June 12, 13, 14.

The state tournament of the Wisconsin State league has been awarded to Juneau, Wis., and will be held on Aug. 1. No doubt arrangements will be made at Milwaukee to make it possible to connect with the Chicago train.

The average player holding the West hand would have discarded a diamond at trick 2, taken out the trumps, and then started the spade suit, which would have given North and South four tricks. CULLOP BACK TO NEWARK.

New York, March 6.—It has been announced at the Federal league office that Pitcher Nicholas Cullop, who was traded recently by Newark to Brooklyn, has been returned to Newark. The deal was made before the new owners of the Newark club took control, and they refused to sanction it. William Bradley, Albert Shaw, and Bert Maxwell, the players sent to Newark in the trade, may remain at Newark.

YACHTSMEN SET DATES FOR RACES

Arrange Schedule Which Promises Busy Season for Chicago "Tars."

BY JACK PROCTOR.

Action taken yesterday by local clubs assured Chicago yachtsmen the most active season of racing ever held on Lake Michigan. The schedule committee of the Lake Michigan Yachting association met the chairmen of the regatta committees of the Chicago, Columbia, Jackson Park, and Lincoln Park Yacht clubs and mapped out a schedule of events that will keep the skippers busy throughout the season.

Twelve big open events were decided upon, in addition to a number of minor fixtures. The season will open on May 31 with races at all clubs. The Michigan City race of the Columbia Yacht club was set for June 19, and the Chicago Yacht club's Mackinac race was set for July 17. The date chosen for the L. M. Y. A. joint regatta to be conducted by all clubs and sailed over the Lincoln park course was July 5. The Lipton cup races probably will be sailed between boats of class R and will be held on Aug. 26, 27, and 28.

Schedule for Season.

The complete schedule follows:

May 31—Officia opening of all clubs.
June 12—Lipton trophy race, Chicago Yacht club.
June 19—Michigan City race, Columbia Yacht club.
June 25, 26, 27—Triangular cruising race, Chicago Y. C.
July 3—Race for Stratford cup, St. Joe and return, Columbia Y. C.
July 5—L. M. Y. A. joint regatta.
July 10—Open regatta, including race for Nutting cup, Chicago Y. C.

Columbia Club Meets.

Members of the Columbia Yacht club met at the Randolph street clubhouse last night and laid plans for an active season. Commodore Robert L. Doran presided and reported gratifying progress in the proceedings to clear the club of debt and place it on a sound financial basis.

Style, Finish, Mechanical Excellence
—In these, Pathfinder leads

Style in your motor car is as much an expression of your own individuality as the design of your home, your selection in clubs or your choice of amusements.

Pathfinder style is an expression of the utmost refinement in body design and in the Pathfinder Daniel Boone model, with the detachable winter top, you get not only a luxurious closed car that follows closely the highest development of tasteful good style, but on the same chassis you get a touring car of the highest order.

PATHFINDER

Without quality of finish the best design in a motor car soon loses its appeal. Pathfinder finish applies to the painstaking way with which body finish is applied, quality of leather, and upholstery, and to the harmonious outfitting of the car with such accessories as add to convenience, comfort and pleasure. Mechanical excellence finds in the Pathfinder motor, Pathfinder clutch, rear axle, cantilever spring suspension and flexible tire saving final drive construction—a combination that insures years of satisfactory service and a continually high resale value.

Every detail of Pathfinder construction is shown in a graphic manner in our complete exhibit of parts at our new salesroom. Come in to see it.

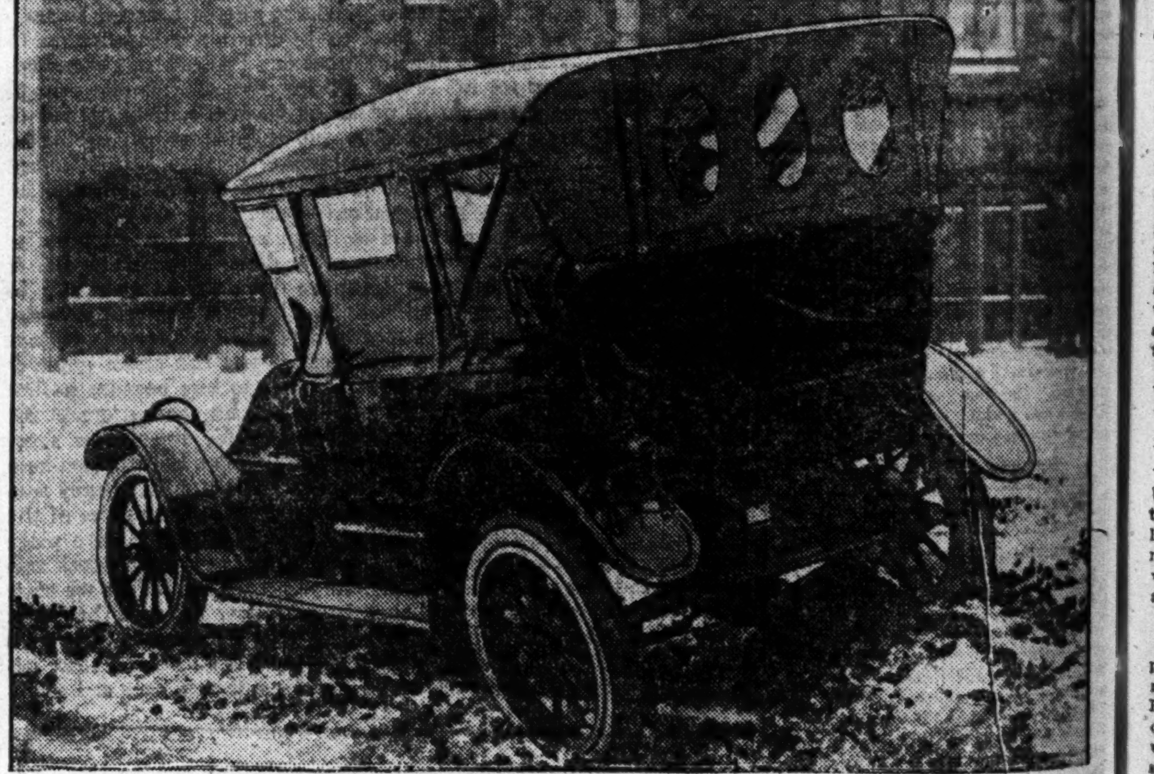
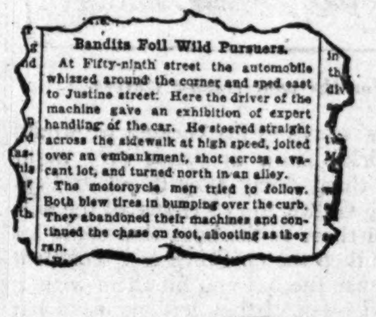
"AUTO BANDIT CAR"
WAS A FRANKLIN



74 Miles in Three Hours Through Crowded City Streets With 15 Stops

This is the record made by the auto bandits on last Wednesday in their terrorizing trip through Chicago's streets. They used a Franklin car. Their trip proved the ease of control and flexibility of the Franklin, and its wonderful tire supremacy. The matter of turns and other "stunts" through which this car was driven was an unusually severe test of its construction and the Franklin proved every claim we ever made for it.

—From Tribune, March 5th



Bandits Foil Wild Pursuers.

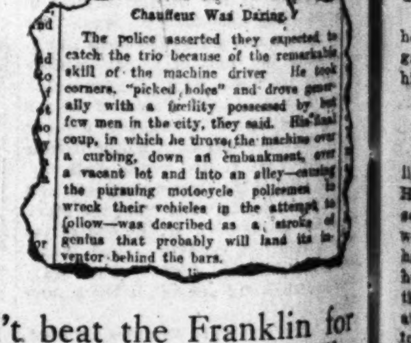
At Fifty-ninth street the automobile whizzed around the corner and sped east to Justine street. Here the driver of the machine gave an exhibition of expert handling of the car. He steered straight across the sidewalk at high speed, jolted over an embankment, shot across a vacant lot, and turned north in an alley.

The motorcycle men tried to follow. Both blew tires in bumping over the curb. They abandoned their machines and continued the chase on foot, shooting as they ran.

Newspaper Comment

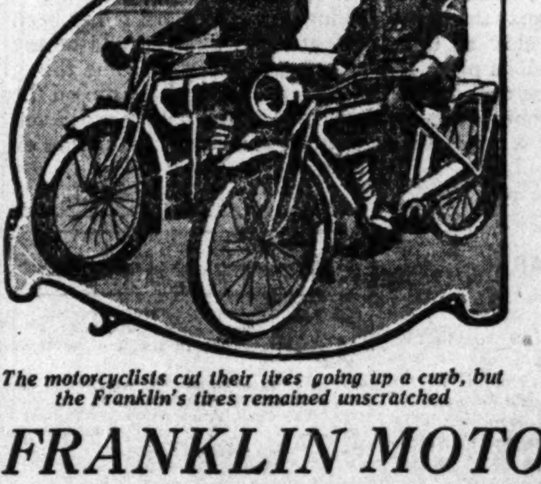
These newspaper clippings tell what happened to the motorcycles, but they don't say that the Franklin came through the ordeal in excellent shape. Its headlights and a door were broken and some of the varnish was scratched, but the car's efficiency is just as good today as the day it left our factory.

—From Post, March 5th



Chauffeur Was Daring.

The police asserted they expected to catch the trio because of the remarkable skill of the machine driver. He took corners, "picked holes" and drove generally with a facility possessed by but few men in the city, they said. His final coup, in which he drove the machine over a curbing, down an embankment, over a vacant lot and into an alley—causing the pursuing motorcycle policemen to wreck their vehicles in the attempt to follow—was described as a stroke of genius that probably will land its inventor behind the bars.



The motorcyclists cut their tires going up a curb, but the Franklin's tires remained unscratched

You can't beat the Franklin for ease of control and flexibility. The wonderful tire mileage Franklin owners are securing is not a question of luck, but an engineering feat of more than passing note. Franklin cars are the result of the greatest scientific work in automobile construction.

Come in and allow us to explain how you can duplicate this performance

ECONOMY CANNOT BE CONFOUNDED WITH PARSIMONY

BEATEN 'CHAMPS' HARBOR GRUDGE AGAINST RIVALS

Ritchie Dislikes Welsh; Wolgast Ridicules Willie; Nelson Hates Ad.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

It is a well known fact that when a champion is dethroned by a rival the defeat leaves a sore spot which never really heals. Sometimes the boy who has been pounded into defeat and knocked out of the position in which the glory and coin earning ability are blended comes out in the public prints and lauds his conqueror. It makes nice reading and the fans get the impression that the defeated boy is a game loser. A little "close touch" conversation with the losing champion, however, is convincing evidence that this lauding stuff isn't on the square.

In the lightweight ranks today there is a boy who has a rankling in his heart every time the name of Freddie Welsh, present lightweight champion of the world, is mentioned. That is Willie Ritchie of San Francisco, who was declared a loser on points to Welsh in a London ring last summer. Perhaps Ritchie has more reason to hold a grudge against the Briton than many champions who have been upset. Ritchie was not beaten decisively, everybody knows, and he claimed before he left London, he declares today, and perhaps during all the days of his life he will assert that he was robbed of the title he won from Ad Wolgast.

Briton Goes After Coin.

When that decision was handed to Welsh it took from Ritchie the thing that he seems to like better than anything else—money. In the short time—a little more than a year—that he was champion the California boy grabbed off huge chunks of kale. In fact, it is said that he cleaned up more than $100,000. His loss of the title, doubtful as the decision may have been, opened the way for Welsh to do just what Ritchie had done, and like the coast boxer, the Briton has reaped a harvest of golden shekels. Since losing to Welsh, Ritchie has fought only one bout and that a four rounder in San Francisco, for which he received an amount so small that no mention ever was made of the exact figures.

Therefore when everything is taken into consideration it is no wonder that Willie becomes riled up a bit when anybody talks of Freddie Welsh. The honor and the big money are gone so far as he is concerned, and he no longer is given the consideration that a champion receives at the hands of the promoters and the public.

Wolgast Loves Ritchie—Not.

Going back a little further one runs across the name of another lightweight who hasn't any love for the boy who took the title away from him. This boy is Ad Wolgast, the little Cadillac "Bearcat," who now is fighting fellows who make no pretense of being of championship caliber. Wolgast is the kind of boy who does not indulge in bunk. He says what he thinks, and so plainly at times that it would not pass in print even as fifth class matter, if there is such a thing.

In the memorable battle which cost Wolgast his title and which made Ritchie the champion, the "Bearcat" was adjudged the loser on a foul. To this day Wolgast does not deny that the blow which cost him the crown was a foul one, but he does assert and vehemently, too, that he doesn't think it was a smash below the belt, which announcement was made by the referee. He fought Ritchie with all the viciousness at his command, and that was just the way Ritchie fought.

Calls Willie Fluke Champion.

Since that defeat Wolgast has been panning the Californian, perhaps the mildest thing that he said being that Ritchie was a "fluke champion." The other day when Wolgast was in Chicago, where he trained for a bout which was staged at Columbus, some one in the training party happened to remark that Ritchie had developed into a vaudeville performer and that he was appearing on the stage in California. The "Bearcat" listened, then smiled, but not the kind of smile that is brought on by joy. Then the smile departed, and Wolgast gave evidence of the real feeling that he has for Willie Ritchie when one of those present brought out a photograph showing Ritchie in a dancing pose with his sister, who is a partner in his vaudeville act.

The picture showed Ritchie attired in swell clothes, the evening kind, and, with dancing pumps on his feet, he presented the appearance of a regular Beau Brummel. In the pose his sister was landing a straight left to his chin.

"Say," almost shouted Wolgast when he got a peek at the picture, "that's the game for that fellow. He's boxing with his sister, and not taking any chances."

Does Ad love Willie?

And 'Bat' Hates Wolgast.

Now, there's another story in the same lightweight ranks, which concerns our Hegewisch hero, Oscar "Battling" Nelson and this same Ad Wolgast of whom we have been speaking. "Bat" Nelson has his likes and dislikes, just like any human being, but there isn't any doubt that his dislike for Ad Wolgast is far and away predominating. "Bat" goes back to that memorable occasion a few years ago when he ran afoul of Wolgast in a ring at Port Richmond, Cal., to rekindle the fire of hatred. For forty rounds the Dane fought gamely to hold the title he had battled ten years to win. In the end, with a face battered out of shape, he was declared the loser, and left the ring never again to become champion.

Like Wolgast, Nelson doesn't hesitate to say what he thinks, and he has been putting "cruel" words into sentences ever since that defeat in an effort to express the contempt that he feels for the Cadillac "Bearcat." None of these sentences would appeal to the ears of Adolph, but Wolgast only smiles, and with real joy, too, when he hears what Bat thinks of him. He doesn't expect the Dane to like him very well after what happened in that Port Richmond ring, and so he isn't hurt.

Smith, Knoble, and Garling were big point winners for Wisconsin in the horizontal bar parallel bar, horse, rings, tumbling, and club events. For Wisconsin Stirn easily won over Cook in fencing and broad swords. At wrestling the 125 pound class went to Ramsdel of Wisconsin by default. VANDERBILT CUP TO DARIUS RESTA

Simplex, Alley in a Duesenberg, and Grant in a Stutz. The remaining twenty drivers of the twenty-five still in the race were trailing. The average speed was 67 miles an hour.

The half way mark, or forty laps, showed Resta still in the lead. Howard Wilcox in the Stutz was in close pursuit two minutes behind. Burman was a minute behind Wilcox, Pullen thirty-five seconds behind Burman, and Carlson two minutes abaft Pullen. Resta's margin was less than half a lap. Less than five minutes separated the first five cars and the speed was gradually being forced up.

Resta still led at fifty laps. In close pursuit were Pullen in the Mercer, Ruckstall in a Mercer, Carlson [illegible] the Maxwell, and Wilcox in his Stutz. Burman was running third when his accident in the forty-seventh lap put him out. The pressure of the Mercers was beginning to be felt and the speed was materially increased. Resta at fifty laps had averaged 68 miles an hour. He stopped to take on fuel, but Pullen also drew up to the pits.

On leaving the replenishment station they were in the same relative positions. Resta retained his lead through the sixtieth and sixty-fifth laps, with Pullen hanging doggedly to his heels six minutes behind. At sixty laps Ruckstall was close in pursuit of Pullen, with Wilcox fourth and Disbrow fifth. The cars held steadily in this position at the seventieth lap, but Ruckstall in a futile attempt to pull up on the leader turned over on his seventy-second circuit, giving Wilcox third place. From that position Howdy gradually worked ahead of Pullen, who finished third.

Pittsburgh Wins Title.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 6.—Pittsburgh university tonight defeated Penn State, 39 to 35, here, thus winning the college basketball championship of western Pennsylvania.

Resta, Italian, Wins in French Peugeot.

DARIUS RESTA, winner of both the Grand Prize and the Vanderbilt cup, the two leading motor classics at the San Francisco exposition, is of Italian parentage, although he has lived in England so many years that he usually is classed as a Briton. Coming to this country for the purpose of driving an English Sunbeam in the 500 mile race at Indianapolis, he switched his alegiance to the French Peugeot, which he piloted to victory in the Grand Prize and Vanderbilt. A pretty little romance in conection with his trip to this country is the fact that right now be is enjoying his honeymoon. Before starting for the Pacific coast he was quietly married to the sister of the late Spencer Wishart, one of America's greatest drivers, who was killed during the annual road race at Elgin last August. Wishart and Resta were chums, the American spending half his time in Europe.

Sporting News Notes.

Another team is wanted to complete the Merchants' Baseball league. Applications must be in the hands of President J. A. Simpson, room 927 La Salle street station, by March 8. The league will meet the following evening.

Victory for Karlicek will place him in a tie with Collier for second place. Phil Wolf will tackle two hard men at Flenner's alleys tonight at 8 o'clock, meeting Jimmy Blouin and Paul Behrendt.

John Meyers, claimant of the welterweight championship of the world, and "Young" Colonies will be the principals in the main bout of the wrestling show in Polonia hall, at Hammond, Ind., tonight. In the opening contest Razimar Pawkwoski and Joe Wallace will take holds and Joe Suhajda and Frank Ritter will clash in the second bout.

KENOSHA'S CARD JUMPS 2 DAYS

Events Postponed to March 18 Because of Board's Decision.

Because of an edict issued yesterday by the Wisconsin boxing commission, the all-star boxing card scheduled for Kenosha on March 16 has been postponed until March 18. According to Walter H. Liginger, chairman of the commission, the original date of the Kenosha show would conflict with the bout between Jack Dillon of Indianapolis and "Gunboat" Smith of New York, which was arranged three weeks ago for the same day at Milwaukee.

As a result of the trials in the amateur tourney held at Forbes' yesterday to pick a team to meet an aggregation to be selected by Jimmy Clabby from Gary, East Chicago, and Hammond in the latter city on March 27, Harry Forbes has selected four boxers, but he is undecided as to his selections in the other three classes.

Forbes has picked Tony Melchor for the heavyweight class, Leo Laporte for the middleweight division, Arnold Thompson for the 145 pound class, and Walter Jacobson for the lightweight class. Boxers for the 108, 115, and 125 pound classes will be selected next Saturday.

Edward Chopps of the Standard A. C. won from John Diehl of the Humboldt A. C. in the first bout of the lightweight division. Sol Weisbaum, unattached, outpointed John Bart of the Megerons A. C., and Walter Jacobson of Forbes' beat Ben Kallis, unattached, in the other contest. As the winners of the other bouts refused to go with Jacobson, he was selected to represent Chicago in this class.

The final bouts to select the best boys in their respective classes for the Toronto boxing tournament were held yesterday at Gilmore's gymnasium. Following were the results:

108 pound class—Allen Douglas, Gilmore A. C., won by default from George Bly, unattached.

115 pound class—Teddy Murphy, Gilmore A. C., won by default from Billy Quinn.

125 pound class—Curtis Peters, Gilmore A. C., won over Joe Ross, unattached, four rounds.

135 pound class—Lee McMahon, Gilmore A. C., won over Willie Lewis, Gilmore A. C., three rounds.

145 pound class—Tommy Kelly, Gilmore A. C., won over Mike Clifford, unattached, three rounds.

158 pound class—Harry Bowman, Gilmore A. C., won by default from George Knapp.

Woman Cyclist Offers to Defend Her Title.

Chicago, March 6.—[To the Sporting Editor.]—My attention has been called to an article which appeared last Sunday representing Miss Jessie Stalter as the champion woman cyclist of the world. How familiar that title sounds! But really does anybody except Tom Eck know of any such person as Miss Stalter as holder of that title?

May I ask when, where, or whom did she wrest the title from? To be sure, I have no intention of going into the home trainer side show business, but if Miss Stalter or Manager Eck want to arrange a real race (on a real track) I shall be very glad to accommodate them.

As I am the holder of the world's championship title for women cyclists and as I have no intention of giving it away or forfeiting it by refusing to defend it, there is only one way for Miss Stalter or anybody else to get this title, and that is by defeating the holder of the title. I am willing to defend my title against all comers.

TILLIE ANDERSON (SHOBERG),
Champion Woman Cyclist of the World.

"Miss Anderson's" claim to the title is based on her defeat of Frankie Nelson July 28, 1896, for the American championship and her defeat of Lisette, the French rider, on Sept. 5, 1898, for the world title.

CHARLEY CUTLER OUT TO 'CLEAN UP'

"Tribune" Still Has That $100 Forfeit He Posted for Mat Match.

NO WRESTLER BARRED.

BY HAMMERLOCK.

Charley Cutler, claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling title since the retirement of Frank Gotch, invites some of the mat reformers to assist him in "cleaning up" the game. Cutler's ideas of a "cleanup," however, vary considerably from those of some of the recent converts to the welfare of the mat game.

"The best way I know for these fellows who have so much to say through the newspapers to 'clean up,'" said Cutler yesterday, "is to accept the challenge I issued through THE TRIBUNE two weeks ago and to cover the deposit made by my manager, William Rothells, at that time.

"A certified check for $100 is posted with the sporting editor of THE TRIBUNE as a forfeit to meet any wrestler in the world. This forfeit can form part of a purse of from $500 to $5,000 to be deposited by each contestant and the winner to take all. Plestina, Hokuff, and Hussane and their managers are invited to accept.

"I don't care to be disagreeable, but the fellows who seem to be trying to cast slurs on me choose words instead of money, and newspapers instead of the arena to prove their superiority. The best way to insure the square matches they talk so much about is to post enough money, real money, mind you, with THE TRIBUNE or any other reputable stakeholder and then get onto the canvas. That's where I stand."

BY MAROON.

Coach Jones' University of Illinois basketball champions made good their claim to the conference championship last night by downing Chicago in the scrappiest game of the "Big Nine" season, 19 to 18. The work of the diminutive Woods brothers and the splendid guarding of the Illini gave the game to the downstaters after the Maroons ended the first half with an 11 to 9 advantage.

Twenty-five hundred persons, the largest crowd to see a contest in Bartlett gymnasium this year, filled the floor and the running track above it. The two teams played through the contest without substitutions, although the players were kept sprawling on the floor through the frequent clashes.

High Point Winner.

Williford, Illinois forward, was high point winner for his team. He tossed seven free throws, keeping his team in the running by caging the throws on penalizations by the Maroons. Ralph and Ray Woods ran a neck and neck race, the brothers tying with two baskets.

Capt. Josh Stevenson led the Maroons in scoring with eight free throws out of nine tries and three baskets.

The Maroons jumped into the lead at the start on a basket by Stevenson a minute after the opening gun. Ray Woods evened the score, and the Maroons retaliated with four points due to two free throws by Stevenson and a basket by Kixmiller. The Chicago players spurted at critical times throughout the half on free throws and baskets by Stevenson.

Takes Lead Early.

Rowland, George, and Ralph Woods engaged in two combats, when double fouls were called. Illinois took a lead early in the second half. Sensational shots by the Chicago forwards and by one or the other of the Woods brothers kept the lead alternating. At the end of the half, with the crowd on its feet, Ralph Woods threw a winning shot a minute before the close of the game. Lineup:

Woods Twins Factors in Illinois Success.

RALPH WOODS, FORWARD
RAY WOODS, GUARD.

EVANSTON contributed materially to the success of the Illinois conference championship basketball five this season by sending the Woods twins to Urbana. Yes, they are twins, but they don't look it. Ralph Woods is a 123 pound midget, while his brother is thirty pounds heavier. Ray Woods is an all round star and a masterful defensive player. The work of Ray Woods and Capt. Duner at the guard positions this year was called equal to the best ever seen on a conference floor. Ray also was a potent factor in scoring. Ralph's forte was his speed and agility. He was hard to catch. Despite his lack of beef, he stood the gaff well and generally lasted through a hard game.

MORIN EXTENDED TO GAIN VICTORY IN CUE TOURNEY

Hahman Plays Brilliantly in First Match in Three Cushion Meet.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Forced to go at top speed by the dark horse of the tournament, Charley Morin scored a brilliant victory in the opening game of the world's three cushion championship at the Inter-Ocean building last night.

Opposed by John Hahman, the rangy professional of the Minneapolis Athletic club, the local player went out in sixty-four innings, winning 50 to 44. His high run was 5, Hahman topping this by one point.

Twelve Stars Competing.

The brilliant display of caroms was a fitting baptism for the three cushion classic, in which twelve of the leading experts are competing for the Brunswick diamond trophy and $3,000 in cash prizes.

Morin won the bank and missed, and so did Hahman. After each had scored a single Hahman gathered a fine run of six. At the end of the tenth inning he led, 10 to 4, and five innings later led by nine points. Morin then began a fine spurt, a run of five being the starter. A two at the twenty-fifth inning put him on even terms, each player having 18.

Morin, playing beautiful billiards, counted 2, 1, 2, 3, 1, 2 in succession, and after one cipher added 1, 2, 1, giving him a total of 33 for thirty-five innings, an average of close to 1.

Hahman, with a run of four in the thirtieth inning, kept in the race and was only six points behind at the end of the thirty-fifth session.

Game Becomes Close.

Once more the Minneapolis man got a scoring streak and as Morin drew a number of ciphers the race again tightened. A brace of caroms in the forty-eighth inning by Hahman deadlocked the count at 39, but Morin, with a single, again went to the front.

In the fifty-sixth inning Hahman after scoring a single played the first safety shot of the game. After a little jockeying Morin scored a two and was close to the wire. Hahman scored a single and then missed a natural, and Morin went out with a couple of single counts. Score:

De Oro was outplayed at the start, Lean leading, 24 to 15, at the thirty-fifth inning, but De Oro caught him in the sixty-seventh inning, the score being 36 all. A run of three in the seventy-first inning, followed by a single and a five put De Oro five from home, and he went out in the next eight innings with five singles. Score:

All letters for this department should be addressed to Alfred P. Lane, care Sporting Editor, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

BY ALFRED P. LANE.

W. McJ., Chicago.—[1] Through inheritance I have come into possession of a fine shotgun. It has been little used for a number of years. The barrels are foul and apparently considerably rusted. What cleaning preparation and process would you recommend?

Ans.—I would suggest that you take the matter up with the manufacturers and see if they can refinish inside and out for you.

[2] Is it likely that a gun would be ruined by rust if fired off occasionally during several years and not cleaned?

Ans.—The chances are about one hundred to one that such treatment would ruin a shotgun barrel beyond redemption.

H. T., Decorah, Ia.—Will you kindly inform me as to the standard range for .22 caliber rifle and revolver shooting? Also the diameters of the respective bullseyes.

Ans.—The standard range for indoor .22 rifle shooting is twenty-five yards. The bullseye is one-half inch in diameter. Add one-half inch for each succeeding ring. For revolver shooting the standard range is twenty yards, the bullseye being one and one-tenth inches in diameter.

R. C., Chicago.—[1] Kindly tell me the correct name for the hell diver, and are hunters allowed to shoot them?

Ans.—The "hell diver" is a popular name for the dabchick or grebe. The scientific name of the most important species is podilymbus podiceps. I am under the impression (better look this up in your state to be sure) that this bird is classed with the water fowl in the game laws. It is hardly a pleasing morsel to eat, however, as I understand it is almost as tough as the loon.

[2] Kindly tell me which shotgun is most suitable for duck shooting, the hammerless pump gun or the double barrel hammerless.

Ans.—Both types are suited to the work. It is simply a choice based on personal preference.

[3] Are hunters permitted to shoot killdeer?

Ans.—The "killdeer" is a species of ringed neck plover. The open season on plover is Sept. 2 to Dec. 16.

[4] Kindly tell me the location of the Chicago Gun club, and are strangers permitted to watch the contestants?

Ans.—The Chicago Gun club is located at Kensington. Spectators are permitted at open contests. At other times telephone the secretary for a permit.

R. D. H., Chicago.—Would you please tell me about hunting licenses? How old do you have to be to buy one, and how much are they?

Ans.—As far as I can determine there are no restrictions as to age limit in Illinois. Resident hunting license costs $1.

E. E., Chicago.—[1] What is the caliber of the 30-30 rifle?

Ans.—.30 caliber.

[2] What is the range of the Savage Arms company's 30-30 and 303 cartridge when used in a 26 inch barrel Savage rifle?

Ans.—The ranges of these two cartridges are about the same. They are good for about 500 to 700 yards.

A. G., West Chicago, Ill.—Kindly inform me as to the law relative to spring shooting in Illinois.

Ans.—The federal game law permits shooting ducks and other water fowl from Sept. 2 to Dec. 16. The Illinois state law has been changed to conform to the federal law and there is therefore no spring shooting in Illinois.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW CLOSES.

Chicago's second annual national motor boat show closed last night in the Coliseum. Local fleets of pleasure craft will be considerably augmented this coming summer as the result of boat purchases induced by the exhibition. Cruisers large and small, runabouts and speed boats of the latest type and engine force have been contracted for by Chicagoans whose enthusiasm for motor boating is comparatively recent. Not to be overlooked were the numerous purchases by dwellers in river and small lake points in Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Indiana, whose entrance into the buying field lends additional strength to the prosperity evidence furnished by the 1915 show.

CORNELL STARS FEATURE MEET

Take Honors in Eastern Games, While Columbia Men Spring Surprise.

New York, March 6.—College graduates and undergraduates yelled themselves hoarse in the exciting moments of the first indoor intercollegiate games held in Madison Square garden tonight. All the events were relays or group competitions, but the individual stars of the colleges turned out in force.

Among the unexpected happenings were the victories of Penn State in the 750 yard relay and of Columbia in the 1,200 yard event. Penn State disposed of Pennsylvania, Yale, and other good teams, while Columbia had the satisfaction of beating, not only Harvard, but the Pennsylvania team, which included champions like Meredith and Lippincott.

Best Average Wins.

The system of scoring in the field events for groups of five men each was to divide the aggregate of each team by five, the best average winning first place, the second best second place, and the same for third position.

Only one team appeared for the sixteen pound shot put, Cornell winning, unopposed.

The honors of the night went to Cornell, as the Ithaca students took the 8,000 yard relay, the shotput, the running high jump, and third place in both the 750 yard and 4,000 yard relays.

Summary of Meets.

Relay race, team of five men, each man to run 150 yards—Final, won by Pennsylvania State [Hammitt, White, Dolbin, Mason, and Cotton]; Yale second; Cornell third. Time, 1:23 2-5.

Relay race, team of four men, each man to run 1,000 yards—Won by Dartmouth [Granger, Tucker, Riley, and La Gay]; Yale second; Cornell third. Time, 9:22 2-5. Princeton finished third, but was disqualified because one of the runners threw the baton.

Relay race, team of five men, each man to run 300 yards—Final heat, won by Columbia; Harvard second; Pennsylvania third. Time, 2:54 3-5.

Relay race, for four man teams, each man to run 500 yards—Won by Harvard [Bingham, Capper, Biddle, and Minot]; Princeton second. Time, 4:07.

Putting 16 pound shot—Won by Cornell, only competitor; K. C. McCutcheon, 42 feet 3¾ inches, first; A. W. Richard, 42 feet 4½ inches, second; R. J. Moore, 39 feet, third; H. N. Dideroch, 38 feet 8¼ inches, fourth; and G. B. Howell, 38 feet 3½ inches, fifth.

Relay race for teams of four men, each man to run 2,000 yards—Won by Cornell [Potter, Hoffmire, Grime, and Burke]; Massachusetts Institute of Technology second, Pennsylvania third. Time—21:15 3-5.

Medley relay race for teams of four men, 2,000 yards in all—Won by University of Pennsylvania [Lippincott, Lockwood, Dorsey, and Meredith]; Dartmouth second, Michigan third, Cornell fourth. Time—4:22 3-5.

Running high jump—Won by Cornell, 5 feet 8.8 inches; Yale second, 5 feet 8.6 inches; Harvard third, 5 feet 7.2 inches; Pennsylvania fourth, 5 feet 5.6 inches; Columbia fifth, 5 feet 3.6 inches. Best individual performance, Alma Richards, Cornell, 6 feet 4 inches [new intercollegiate record].

Pole vault—Won by Cornell with an average of 11 feet 5 2-5 inches; Harvard second, 11 feet 2 2-5 inches; Yale and Pennsylvania tied for third with 10 feet 8 2-5 inches. Best individual performance, H. K. Foss, Cornell, 12 feet 3 inches.

PENN CHOSEN FOR ANNUAL EASTERN COLLEGE ~~MEET~~.

New York, March 6.—Franklin field in Philadelphia will be the scene of the struggles for intercollegiate track and field championship honors this year. This was decided today at the annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletics of America.

Only two invitations, one from the University of Pennsylvania and the other from Harvard, were received for the meet. By a vote of 10 to 7 the Pennsylvania grounds were chosen. The meet will be held on May 28 and 29.

E. Burcham Clark of Columbia was elected president, William H. Draper, New York university, secretary, and D. M. Lake treasurer for the ensuing year. R. F. Evans of Dartmouth and R. L. Denithorne of Pennsylvania State college were elected first and second vice presidents respectively.

A resolution was adopted paying tribute to the memory of the late James E. Sullivan.

PURPLE SCORES TRACK VICTORY; BEATS PURDUE

Lands Dual Meet by Count of 56 to 30; Osborne Breaks Record in Half Mile.

BY PURPLE.

Northwestern track athletes retrieved themselves last night by swamping Purdue, 56 to 30, in Patten gymnasium. Omer's men won seven firsts and the Boilermakers two. The Purple took the relay after a see-saw contest, Hotchkin making up a handicap of four yards and staggered across the tape a winner.

Capt. "Gravy" Osborne was in unusual fettle, taking the mile in 4:36 and breaking his own conference record in the 880 yard run by two-fifths of a second. Van Aken of Purdue was partly responsible for Osborne's record, as he kept on the little fellow's heels until the last lap. Osborne let out a final sprint and breasted the tape in 2:00 2-5.

Purple Jumpers Score Slam

Purdue scored heavily in the shot put, due to the absence of Schneberger, Omer's best bet, who was at the Iowa basketball game. Purple jumpers lost their Purdue contenders in the high jump at 5 feet 8 inches and took all the points. Bradley, Omer's hope in the dash event, performed in good style, taking the sprint in :05 3-5.

Purdue suffered a handicap when Banker turned his ankle in the preliminary hurdle trial and had to retire.

Summaries of Meet.

880 yard run—Won by Osborn, Northwestern; Van Aken, Purdue, second; Large, Purdue, third. Time, 2:00 2-5.

Two mile run—Won by Traxler, Northwestern; Miller, Purdue, second; Klippie, Purdue, third. Time, 10:17 2-5.

Pole vault—Won by Folz, Northwestern; Abbott, Purdue, second; McFadden, Northwestern, third. Height, 11 feet.

Running high jump—Slam for Northwestern, Crays H. James, Ottenheimer, and M. James tied for first. Height, 5 ft. 9 inches.

Relay race, 4-5 mile—Won by Northwestern [Thayer, Hawley, Barker, Hotchkin]. Time, 2:49.

Mile run—Won by Osborn, Northwestern; Campbell, Purdue, second; Bell, Northwestern, third. Time—4:36.

50 yard high hurdles—Won by Whitcomb, Purdue; M. James, Northwestern, second; Schneberg, Purdue, third. Time—:06 1-5.

50 yard dash—Won by Bradley, Northwestern; Thayer, Northwestern, second; Rautenbush, Purdue, third. Time—:05 3-5.

440 yard run—Won by Williams, Northwestern; Hotchkin, Northwestern, second; Earl, Purdue, third. Time—:53 4-5.

16 pound shot put—Won by Crow, Purdue; Prinz, Purdue, second; Bartz, Northwestern, third. Distance—39 feet 5½ inches.

SOLDIERS' TEAM TO USE FED PARK

A picked baseball team from the United States army will be assembled in Chicago next summer to compete against the best amateur and semi-pro teams here. The scheme has been laid out by Lieut. Kenney, recruiting officer for Chicago, and is planned as an added stimulus to draw high class young men into the army service.

When President Weeghman of the local Federal league club heard of the plan he wrote a letter to the Hon. Lindley M. Garrison, secretary of war, offering the north side park free for the use of the army team whenever the Chicago Federals are out of town. He also offered the services of his manager, Joe Tinker, as coach for the soldiers at times when it is possible for the leader of the Whales to be with them.

An answer was received from Secretary Garrison yesterday accepting the offer of the Chicago magnate and expressing his thanks. Secretary Garrison's letter in part follows:

"It is the aim of the military authorities to make the army as attractive to young men as it is possible to make it, consistent with the purpose for which they enter the service of the United States. With this end in view, athletics are always encouraged, and baseball, as you are no doubt well aware, is one of the most popular of athletic sports throughout the army.

"Furthermore, I am keenly interested in securing good clean men for the army, and feel satisfied that there is no better field for securing such men than among baseball players. Instructions will be given to take full advantage of your generous offer whenever conditions of the service warrant, and every practicable facility will be placed at the disposal of Lieut. Kenney and the enlisted men on duty in Chicago to keep in close touch with the baseball organizations in Chicago.

"I feel confident that the results will be most gratifying, and thank you for the interest you have shown in the matter."

EVANS PROVES VICTORIOUS IN INDOOR GOLF MATCH.

Charles Evans Jr., the western outdoor champion, defeated William Rautenbusch, city champion, 4 and 3, in the western indoor championship at The Fair yesterday. Evans will play Kenneth Burns in the semi-finals on Wednesday, and the winner will meet Robert Shealy, who defeated Don J. Heinly, 3 and 2.

Three new indoor championships will be staged at Rothschild's. A trio of silver cups have been donated by President C. E. Davis. The city championship will be open to players over 20 years of age and will start March 13. Two weeks will be given to complete the rounds.

The women's golf event will be staged on consecutive Tuesdays, beginning March 16. The third event will be the western junior and will be open to players under 20. It will start on March [illegible]. Silver cups will go to the winners and medals to the runners-up.

TRAVIS WINS PINEHURST CUP

Pinehurst, N. C., March 6.—Walter J. Travis of Garden City won the president's trophy today in the spring golf tournament here, defeating Irving S. Robeson of the Oak Hill Country club, Rochester, 6 and 4. Travis turned in a card of [illegible]

ANOTHER PAGE AD FREE

Some months ago THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE printed a full page ad free of the picture postal cards which the Art institute reproduced in color and photogravure. The list included accurate copies from ancient and modern European masters, both in the field of sculpture and painting, and sold for a penny a piece. The result of this newspaper publicity, the directors of the institute say, was an enormously increased number of requests for these miniature postals. States as far away as Texas, Oklahoma, and southern California, and even various parts of Canada showed their interest by their mail orders for the picture postals. Considering the value of the Art institute as a public institution and the real art represented within its walls, THE TRIBUNE is going to give it another full page ad free. Only this time more expensive reproductions are shown, each of the twenty-four masterpieces reproduced selling for the remarkably low price of 25 cents.

THE Chicago Art institute is offering you an opportunity never afforded before by any museum in the country. For 25 cents each you can purchase exquisite color reproductions of twenty-four of the world's famous masterpieces, the originals of which are owned by the Art institute and hang on its walls. One of the best sellers of the twenty-four has been chosen to show in full page—"A Canal in Venice," by Martin Rico. The popularity of this picture is due as much to the charm of its vivid coloring as to the sentiment associated always in the public mind with Venice. Martin Rico, a Spanish artist of the nineteenth century, has infused much of his national love of gorgeous color into the pictures of the Venice he adored. The lure of Italian skies, the sensuous magic of Italian winds, the brilliance of Italian days, and the witchery of Italian nights are all suggested here. One can almost hear, too, the strains of the "Barcarole" floating from some gondola or from some curtained window in a palace. All that Venice has meant of joy and rapture to those infinite lovers of old and modern times who have sought and still seek its skies for their first "mad months of youth" breathes forth from the canvas its universal appeal.

Another reproduction which is running the "Canal in Venice" a close second for selling popularity is George Hitchcock's "Flower Girl in Holland."

"Mother and Children," by Elizabeth Nourse, is a charming picture of a peasant woman at supper with her two small children.

"A Mussulman's Tomb, Ahmedabad," by Edwin Lord Weeks, shows the brilliant colorings of an oriental scene and is a splendid example of the artist's well known color effects.

"Returning from Market," by Constant Troyan, shows Dutch peasants and Dutch sheep returning from market and all bathed in a glow of afternoon sunlight. Constant Troyan is a master hand in landscape painting.

"Bringing Home the Newborn Calf," by Jean François Millet, is a lovable picture of peasant life and ranks with "The Angelus."

"The Young Duchess," by John Faed, is a vividly handsome painting of a handsomely gowned woman, with the details of her exquisite brocaded frock delicately brought out.

"Young Woman," by Jean Gustave Jacquet, fairly breathes forth all the warmth of coloring and the love of life such a beautiful young woman should possess. Its commingling of reds in gown and cheeks and lips is particularly attractive.

"Etretat, Normandy Coast," by George Inness, shows a rugged bit of coast line with splashing waves and a vast expanse of sea. Nor is the coloring in the picture the least of its charms.

"The August Moon," by William Trost Richards, is a gentler glimpse of sea and sky with a mystic moonlight playing softly over the whole.

"The Judgment of Paris," by Walter McEwen, is a playful application of the classic legend of Paris awarding the apple to the most beautiful of goddesses, except that the scene is in Holland and the characters Dutch peasants.

"Needlessly Anxious," by Ernst Zimmerman, is a striking effect in colors, the brilliant golden of the mother's gown contrasting against the somber background and the black of the doctor's figure.

"Watching the Breakers," by Winslow Homer, N. A., is a vigorous picture of the sea in one of its stormiest moods.

"The Song of the Lark," by Jules Adolphe Breton, is one of the best known pictures at the institute. It shows a peasant girl of Artois at sunrise in the fields, joining her song to the song of the lark overhead.

"In the Studio," by James Abbott McNeil Whistler, is a delicate, impressionistic picture of two models and an artist.

"Alice," by William Merritt Chase, is a delightful painting of a young girl in white against a rich red background of deepest hues.

"The Home of the Heron," by George Inness, is a wonderful tone symphony in reds and browns, being a landscape showing only trees and skies and a stretch of high grassed ground.

"The Grief of the Pasha," by Jean Léon Gérôme, reveals a pasha saddened at the lifeless body of a tiger stretched out before him. There is wonderful coloring in the picture.

"In Holland Waters," by Jean Paul Clays, is a picture of waters in a quiet mood with a sky serene and huge, idle sailboats drifting about.

"Golden Autumn Day," by Emile Van Marcke, is a rural scene on a late autumn afternoon with homely cows returning leisurely down the village street.

"The Two Disciples at the Tomb," by Henry Ossawa Tanner, shows Peter and John at the tomb of the risen Master. It is a wonderful study in human emotion and the coloring is no less wonderful.

"Ice Bound," by William Leroy Metcalf, is a picture in which one can fairly feel the cool sweetness of the air, the odor of the pines, and the cool of the blue shadows on the snow. It is a charming painting of a winter scene.

"The Bathers," by William Adolphe Bouguereau, is a study in the nude of two young women half reclining on some rocks by the sea.

"Fleeing from the Flames," by Adolph Schreyer, is an achievement in intense action. A mêlée of rushing horses crashing against a broken barrier of fences is pictured with the red of leaping flames behind it.

This is a most interesting collection of favorite masterpieces and the fact that these splendid reproductions may be had for 25 cents each should carry them into the thousands of homes all over the country where otherwise they could never be had. It has been hinted, too, by those in charge that more of the same variety of prints are to follow, but so far no definite announcement has been made.

The Tale of a Man Whose Wife Believed in Him.

LOUIS MITCHELL knew what it meant, even though the telegram was brief. He had been expecting it ever since the bottom dropped out of the steel business and prices tobogganed $40 a ton. Nevertheless, it came as a shock, for he had hoped the firm would keep him on in spite of hard times.

He had plenty of time to think it over, however, for it is a long jump from Butte to Chicago—but when he arrived he was certain of only one thing; he would not stand a cut in salary. Either Comer & Mathison would have to fire him outright or keep him on at his present salary; he would not compromise as the other salesmen had done—not with a wife so new, so wonderful.

No, if Comer & Mathison wanted to make any change they would have to promote him. But ten minutes with the "old man" served to jar this satisfactory determination somewhat. Mr. Comer evidently had ideas of his own.

"Business is rotten, we've got to lay you off," he announced.

"But—I'm married," said the young man.

"So am I; so is Mathison; so are the rest of the fellows——"

"I can sell goods——"

"That's just it; we don't want you to. Conditions are so unsettled that we can't afford to let you. The less business we do, the fewer losses we stand to make. Good Lord, man, this is a panic year! We'd keep you in a minute if we could. You go home now and see your wife. Of course if you could show us where you're worth it we'd let you stay; but if not——" He shrugged. "I'll see you tomorrow."

He wondered how the girl would take this, their first misfortune. But she divined the news. He saw that she was wide-eyed and rather white. When he had finished she inquired bravely:

"What is your plan?"

"I haven't any."

"Nonsense!"

"What can I do? I don't know anything except the steel business. Why, I've handled more big jobs than any man of my age on the road, and yet—I'm fired." He sighed, wearily.

"Have people quit building smelters?"

"They sure have—during this panic. There's nothing doing anywhere."

The girl thought for a moment before saying, "The last time you were in you told me about some western mining men who had gone to South Africa——"

"Sure! To the Rand! They've made good, too; whopping big operations."

"You said there was a large contract of some sort coming up in London."

"Large! Well, rather! The Robinson-Ray job. It's the biggest ever, in my line. They're going to rebuild those plants the Boers destroyed. I heard all about it in Montana."

"Well!" Mrs. Mitchell spoke with finality. "That's the place for you. Get the firm to send you."

"Um-m! I thought about that, but it scared me out. It's too big. Why, it's a $3,000,000 job. You see, we've never landed a large foreign contract in this country as yet." Mitchell sat up suddenly. "Say! This panic might——" then he relaxed.

Mrs. Mitchell's eyes were as round as buttons.

"Three million dollars' worth of steel in one contract! Do you think you could land it if you went?"

"It's my line of work. I'll bet I know more about cyanide tanks than any salesman in Europe, and if I had a decent price to work on——"

"Then it's the chance we've been waiting for." The girl scrambled to her feet and, fetching a chair, talked for a long time, until the man's gray despondency gave way to her own optimism.

"You have put new heart into me, anyhow. If you're game to do your share, I'll try it out. But, remember, it may mean all we've got in the bank and——" He looked at her darkly.

"It's the biggest chance we'll ever have," said the girl. "It's worth it. Don't let's wait to get rich until we are old."

When Mr. Comer returned from lunch he found his youngest salesman waiting, and inside of ten minutes had learned what Mitchell had on his mind. With two words Comer blew out the gas.

"You're crazy," he said.

"Am I? It's worth trying."

"In the first place, no big foreign job ever came to America. In the second place, Comer & Mathison are jobbers, and in the third place, it would cost a barrel of money to send a man to England. It would take $5,000."

"I'll do it on one and pay my own way; my wife has a thousand. I'll see the Carnegie people at Pittsburgh. If they make the right price I'll ask you for a letter, and that's all you'll have to do."

"What sort of a letter?"

"Stating that I am your general sales manager."

The steel merchant laughed shortly.

"O, I only want it for this London trip. I won't use it except as a credential. I've got to go armed, you understand.

If I don't land that Robinson-Ray contract, Mr. Comer, I won't come back—I couldn't, after this. Maybe I'll drive a bus—I hear they have a lot of them in London. But if I get that job I'll leave it up to you to do what's right in the way of salary. I won't ask any questions."

"The whole thing is utterly absurd. You haven't a chance. But—wait!" Mr. Comer pressed a button on his desk. "We'll talk with Mathison."

Louis Mitchell took the night train for Pittsburgh. He was back in three days, and that afternoon Mr. Comer, in the privacy of his own office, dictated a letter of which there was no carbon. He gave it to the young man with his own hands. "It's the most idiotic thing I ever heard of."

Mitchell smiled. "I can't fail—I'm married. I guess you never saw my wife."

It was only to her that he told of the battle he had fought in Pittsburgh, and of how the mill people had laughed at him and refused to take him seriously at first, looking upon him as a mild mannered lunatic.

"But I got my price," he concluded, "and it sure looks good to me." Now for the painful details.

"How long will you be gone?" she inquired.

"I can't stay more than a month, the bank roll is too small, and supposing I fail?"

"You won't fail—you can't—we're going to be rich. Now we'll divide our grand fortune." She produced a roll of money from her purse and took out four $20 bills from it.

"Eighty dollars?" he queried.

"It's more than enough for me. You will be back in a month." She thrust the remaining notes into his hand. "O, it's our one great, glorious chance. Don't you understand?"

Only for the girl's light hearted chatter, young Mitchell would have wavered when it came time to leave on the next day. He began to weaken and to doubt his own ability, but the girl seemed to feel that her lord was bound upon some flaring triumph. At the station her face was wreathed in hopefulness. For a moment only, at parting, she clung to him wildly, with all her woman's strength, then, as the warning cry sounded, she kissed him and fairly thrust him aboard the Pullman. He did not dream of the hopeless misery gnawing at her.

On the way over Mitchell learned all there was to learn in a general way about the proposed Robinson-Ray plant to be completed at Krugersdorpf, twenty miles out of Johannesburg, South Africa. The address of the company was 42½ Threadneedle street. Threadneedle street was somewhere in London, England.

He was up early the morning he arrived in London and was at 42½ Threadneedle street promptly at 9, beating the janitor by twenty minutes. During the next hour and a half he cracked his heels together on the sidewalk.

Upon entering he was halted by an imperious office boy, to whom he gave his card with a request that it be handed to Mr. Peebleby.

A moment later he was knocking at a door emblazoned "Director General" and without awaiting an invitation, he walked in. Before the astonished Mr. Peebleby could expostulate, he had introduced himself and was telling his mission.

Fortunately for Mitchell, all Englishmen are not without a sense of humor. The announcement that this young man had come all the way from Chicago, Ill., U. S. A., to bid on the Krugersdorpf work struck Mr. Peebleby as irresistibly funny. He smiled broadly, then, seeing his dignity jeopardized, announced with finality that the proposition was absurd and he had no time to discuss it.

"I have come for that job and I am going to take it back with me," Mitchell promptly averred. "I know more about this class of work than any salesman on the road, and I'm going to build you the finest set of cyanide tanks any man ever had clustered around him."

"May I ask where you obtained this comprehensive knowledge of tank construction?" inquired the other.

"Sure!" Mitchell ran through a list of jobs with which the director general could not have been unfamiliar. He mentioned work that caused Peebleby to regard him more respectfully. For a time questions and answers flew back and forth.

"I tell you, this is my line," Mitchell declared at length. "I'll read any blue prints you can offer. I'll answer any queries you can formulate. I am an accredited representative of a big concern, and I am entitled to a chance to figure, at least."

"To be sure," agreed the other, reluctantly. "If you wish the prints you shall have them." He pushed a button. Five minutes later a clerk staggered into the room with an armful of blue prints that caused Mitchell to gasp.

"The bid must be in Thursday at 10:30," Peebleby announced.

"Good Lord! That's only three days, and there seems to be a dray load of those drawings."

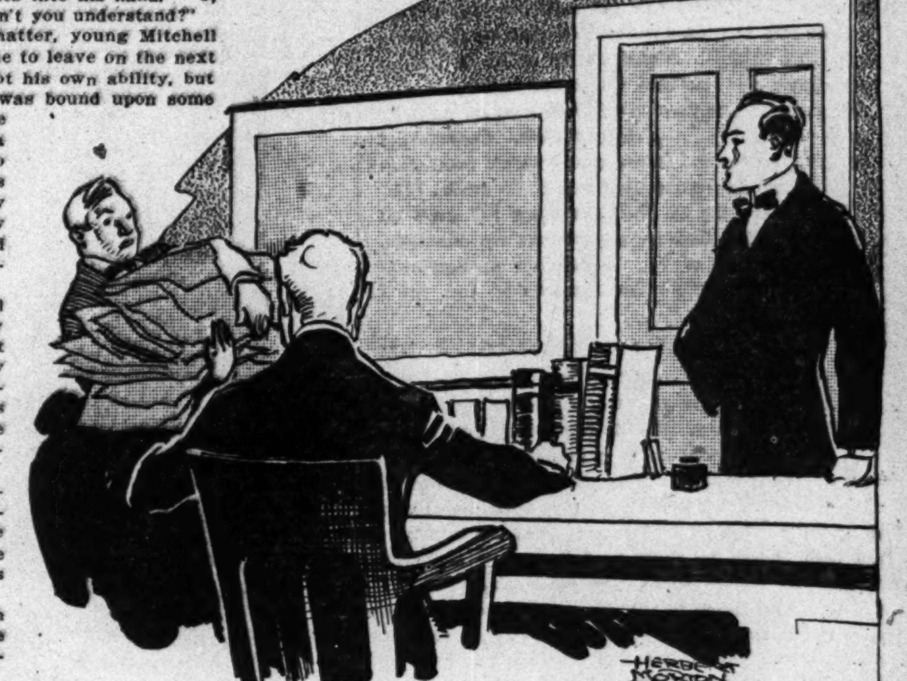
"I said it was a waste of time. You should have come sooner."

Mitchell ran through the pile with dismay. Until now he had never grasped the full magnitude of this work. There was a week's hard, constant labor before him, and Thursday was but three days off. He began to weaken—it was all so utterly hopeless. And then he remembered that wretched, golden haired girl, clinging to the iron fence of the Pennsylvania depot, and gathered the rolls up into his arms.

"At 10:30 Thursday?" he said.

"Ten-thirty sharp."

"Thank you."



At 3 o'clock the next morning he felt his way to his bed. He was up with the dawn and at it again, but by 4 that afternoon he was too dazed and exhausted to continue. His eyes were playing him tricks, the room was whirling, his hand was shaking until his figures rocked drunkenly across the sheets of paper. Ground plans, substructures, superstructures, were jumbled into a frightful tangle. He wanted to yell. Instead he flung the drawings about the room, then stamped upon them hysterically and rushed downstairs to dinner like a wild animal, then went to bed and slept like a dead man.

He arose with the sun, clear headed, calm. All day he worked like a machine, increased his speed as the hours flew. He took care to eat and drink and to smoke at regular intervals, although he did not leave his room. By dark he had much of the task behind him, by midnight he began to have hope, towards dawn he saw the end, and when daylight came he collapsed.

He had deciphered the tank plan and superstructure on forty-five sets of blue prints, had formulated a proposition exclusive of substructure, basing a price per pound on the American market then ruling, f. o. b. tidewater, New York, and he had the proposition in his pocket when he tapped on the ground glass door of Mr. Peebleby's office at 10:29 Thursday morning.

The director general of the great Robinson-Ray Syndicate seemed mildly surprised to learn that the young American had formulated a bid in this short time, then requested him somewhat absent-mindedly to leave it on his desk, where he would look it over at his leisure.

"Just a moment," said his caller, "I'm going to sit down and talk to you again. How long have you been using cyanide tanks, Mr. Peebleby?"

"Ever since they were adopted." Mr. Peebleby was visibly annoyed.

"Well, I can give you a lot of information about them."

The director general raised his brows haughtily.

"Ah! You have suggestions and amendments to make, no doubt."

"I have."

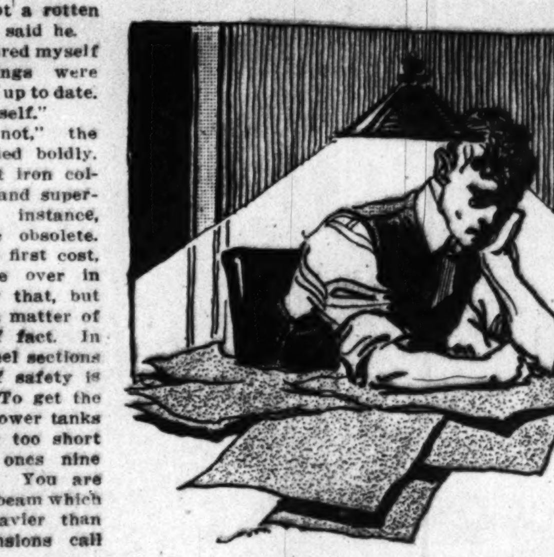
"In all my experience I never sent out a blue print that some youthful salesman could not improve upon. Generally the younger the salesman the greater the improvement."

In Mitchell's own parlance, he "beat Mr. Peebleby to the punch."

"Then you've got a rotten line of engineers," said he.

"Indeed! I flattered myself that these drawings were comprehensive and up to date. I saw to them myself."

"Well, the're not," the younger man replied boldly. "You call for cast iron columns in your sub and superstructures, for instance, whereas they are obsolete. What you save in first cost, you eat up twice over in freight. Not only that, but their strength is a matter of theory and not of fact. In your structural steel sections your factor of safety is wrongly figured. To get the best results your lower tanks are twenty inches too short and your upper ones nine inches too short. You are using a section of beam which is 5 per cent heavier than your other dimensions call for."



The director general sat back in his chair, a look of extreme alertness replacing his former expression.

"Indeed! Is there anything else?"

"There is. The layout of your plate work is all wrong—out of line with modern practice. You want interchangeable parts in every tank. The floor of your lower section should be convex, instead of flat, to get the runoff."

"Who is your engineer?" inquired the elder man, respectfully. "I should like to talk to him."

"You are doing it now. I'm him—it—them. I'm the party. I told you I knew this game. I've figured those prints alone since Monday morning. I haven't slept much. I'm pretty tired."

There was an entirely new note in Mr. Peebleby's voice when he asked: "Are you too tired to tell my engineers what you told me just now? I should like them to hear you."

"Trot them in." For the first time since leaving this office three days before, Mitchell smiled. He was getting into his stride at last. After all, there might be a chance.

There ensued a convention of draftsmen and engineers in the front office, during which an unknown America youth delivered an address on "Cyanide Tanks, How to Build Them, Where to Buy Them."

When he had finished Mr. Peebleby announced that the bids would not be opened that day.

When the two men were alone again the Englishman said: "I think I will have you formulate a new bid along the lines you have laid down."

"Very well."

"You understand, our time is up. Can you have it ready by Saturday, three days from now?"

Mitchell laughed. "It's a ten days' job for two men."

"We can't wait."

"Then give me until Tuesday; I'm used to a twenty-four hour shift now. Meanwhile I'd like to leave these figures here for your chief draftsman to examine. Of course, they are not to be considered binding."

"Isn't that a bit—er—foolish?" inquired Peebleby. "You are leaving a weapon behind you."

"Yes, but not the sort of a weapon you suspect," thought Mitchell. "This is a boomerang." Aloud, he answered lightly:

"O, that's all right."

When his request was granted he made a mental note. "Step number two!"

Again he filled a cab with [illegible] drawings. Again he want back to the Metropole and to those maddening columns of figures, back to the monotony of tasteless meals served at his elbow.

But there were other things besides his own bid to think of now. He must find the other firms that were bidding on the job. He must find the prices they had bid. The first required some ingenuity, the second was a Titan's task.

He laid out a program for himself. By night he worked in his room, by day he cruised for information. He slept at odd moments around dawn. He was forced to drive his lagging spirits with a lash. The thought of the girl did most for him. He clung to her with desperation, and her letters, written daily, were like some God-given cordial that infused blood into his brain, new strength into his flagging limbs.

With a definite object in view he made daily trips to Threadneedle street. Peebleby seemed to like him, and voluntarily granted the young man two days grace—two days! The reckoning was postponed until Thursday—oxygen to a dying man!

Mitchell asked permission to talk to the draftsman and received it. Then he dictated his opinion and in this way met the stenographer. When he had finished, he flipped her a gold sovereign, stolen from the sadly, melted $920. Mitchell was getting "feedbox" information. When he left he knew the names of his dangerous competitors, also of those he had no cause to fear. Step number four! He was gaining ground.

He now had to learn three things in order to make utterly certain that his own figures would be low—and he could afford to take no slightest chance of mistake on that score; this matter was too vital to permit of it. He must know, first, the dates of those other bids; second, the market price of English steel at such times; and, third, the cost of fabrication at the various mills. Not only did he fail to answer question number one, but he could find no market quotations whatever on structural steel shapes such as entered into the Krugersdorpf job.

Meanwhile he had been working on his draftsmen friends more assiduously even than upon his blue prints and on Tuesday night, with but one day more to go upon, he gave a dinner to all of them.

When they had dined and settled back into their chairs he told them who he was. He utterly destroyed their illusion regarding him and bared his heart to those stoop shouldered, shabby young men from Threadneedle street. He came right down to the $920 and the girl, and then told them what this job meant to him and to her and to the four $20 bills in Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

The fellows listened silently. Perhaps there were other girls in other furnished flats, other hearts wrapped up in theirs. One of them arose. He said England wanted to do business with America, and as for this particular contract, not only did the British nation as whole desire the American representative to secure it, but the chaps who bent over the boards at No. 42½ Threadneedle street were plugging for him tooth and nail. The other hollow chested men yelped their approval, whereupon Mitchell apologized for what had happened in 1776, acknowledged himself ashamed of the 1812 affair, and sympathized with them over their present trouble with the Boers. They voted him the best host and the best little cyanide tank builder known to science—and then everybody tried to tell him something at once.

They told him, among other things, that every bid but his had been in for two weeks; that they were in the vault under the care of Mr. Pitts, the head draftsman. And they promised to advise him if any new bids went in or if any changes occurred. Most important of all, they told him that in England all structural steel shapes, instead of being classified as in America, are known as "angles," and they told him where to find the official reports giving the price of these for every day in the year.

The word "angles" was the missing key; those official market reports formed the lock in which to fit it. Mitchell had taken his fifth big step; there was but one more.

When his guests had finally gone home he hastened back to his rooms, back to the desert of blue prints and to the interminable columns of figures that danced more frenziedly than ever

He slept two hours before daylight, and then was up and at it again. This was the last day. Using the data he had gathered the night before, he soon had the price of English and Scottish steel at the time the last bids were closed. Given one thing more—namely: the cost of fabrication in these foreign shops—and he would have reduced this hazard to a certainty; he could read the prices contained in those sealed bids.

He lunched with John Pitts, the head draftsman, going back to pick up the boomerang he had left the week before

"Have you gone over my first bid?" he asked carelessly.

"I have—lucky for you," said Pitts. "You made a mistake. It's 30 per cent too low. It would be a crime to give you the business at those figures."

"Well, you see, I didn't include the substructure."

"Even so, it's 30 per cent out of the way. I made allowance for that."

The boomerang had worked!

Once they had separated Mitchell broke for his hotel like a hunted man. He had made no mistake in his first figures. Even now he felt sure he could land the great Krugersdorpf job, but he must be absolutely certain, and he must make as much profit as possible, for without a good profit this $3,000,000 job might ruin his firm.

When Louis Mitchell flung himself into the dark body of his cab late that evening, his legs knee deep in those hateful blue prints, he blessed that engineer, for Dell had told him all that he wished to know, all he had tried so vainly to discover through other sources. The average "overhead" in British mills was 130 per cent, and Dell knew!

The young man laughed hysterically, a half tearful hiccough of triumph. Tomorrow at 10:30! It was nearly over. He would be ready. In less than two weeks, among an alien people and under strange conditions, without acquaintance or pull or help of any sort, he had learned the names of his competitive firms, the dates of their bids, and the market prices ruling on every piece of steel in the Krugersdorpf job at such times.

The girl would be very glad, he thought, yet she could never know the strain it had been.

Again, through the slow, silent hours of that Wednesday night, he fought off his deathlike weariness, and went over his figures carefully. There was no error.

The gray dawn was creeping in on him when he added a clean 30 per cent profit for his firm, signed the bid, and prepared for bed. But he could not leave the thing. What if some other bidder had made a mistake and underfigured? He grew dizzy at thought of what it meant to him and to the girl.

He calmed himself, however, for he knew in his heart that his figures were correct.

At 10:30 a. m. Thursday the seven Scotch, English, and Belgian mourners stared cheerlessly at each other and then at the young man from over-seas who had underbid the lowest of them by six thousand pounds sterling, less than 1 per cent. After a while they bowed and mumbled and went softly out in their high hats, their pearl gloves, and their spats—more like pallbearers now than ever.

"Six hundred thirty-seven thousand five hundred pounds sterling!" said the director general. "By Jove, Mitchell, I'm glad!" They shook hands. "I'm really glad."

"That's over $3,000,000," said Mitchell. "It's quite a nice little job."

"Now let's get at those signatures."

That night Louis Mitchell slept with fifteen separate contracts under his pillow.

On the Deutschland he slept much of the way across, and by the time Liberty statue loomed up he could dream of other things than blue prints—of the girl, for instance.

She had enough left from the $80 to bring her on and take a week's lodging in West Thirty-fourth street, and she was at the dock, although he could not find her at first. He had expected to see her with her arms outstretched, the old joyous smile upon her dimpled face, but he searched until his heart grew sick before he saw her seated over by the letter "M" where he must come to claim his trunk. There she was, huddled up on a coil of rope, crying as if bereft, her nerve utterly gone—along with the four $20 bills. She was afraid to face him, afraid there had been an error in the cablegram.

Not until she lay in his arms at last, sobbing and laughing, her slender body all a quiver, did she believe. Then he allowed her to feel the fifteen contracts inside his coat, and, once in the cab, bound for her smelly little boarding house, he even showed them to her. In return she gave him a telegram from his firm that made him cry out. It was addressed:

"Mr. Louis Mitchell, general sales manager, Comer & Mathison, New York City."

And it read:

"That goes. COMER."

Mitchell opened the trap above his head and called:

"Hey, cabbie. Drive us to the Waldorf—at a gallop."

They would have shouted had they dared for life was very sweet and the girl's cheek was against his shoulder.

VOICE of the FAN

Dear Miss Tinee: Please print this in your "Voice of the Fan" column:

Let others write the praises
  Of Jim Kruse and his wife,
And call for him once more to be
  A "hero in the strife."

But I would write of Farrington,
  Who played the villain pale,
And who, though beat at every turn,
  Still lives to tell the tale.

Who could not be a hero,
  And know the praise must come,
And love the heroine, forsooth,
  And beat the villain dumb?

The one who is the hero
  Is the one who takes the shame
Of being the devil's angel,
  And shoulders all the blame.

Then here's to the man who acted Braine,
  He's not a villain, though;
His acting's quite as perfect
  As any one's we know.

Here's to the man named Farrington,
  So firm, so brave, so true.
Please, Mr. Moving Picture Man,
  Make him a "hero," too.

EVA S. CROWE.

Dear Miss Tinee: We thought we would cheer you up for that fellow who had the grouch about "The Million Dollar Mystery." He must have gotten too much for his money or become intoxicated from the spiritual thrills in the play. We are poor and have to work hard, but we think it a big treat to see that play, and the house is just jammed and they have to put on three plays every night it is played. The only thing is we can't pick out which is the best player, just love them all. Right Off the Reel page is surely enjoyed.

MR. AND MRS. WILL ROGERS

Dear Miss Tinee: The first thing Sunday morning when I get up—yes, before I get up—I go through the paper for the "Right Off the Reel" page. The news page can wait, the sporting sheet can wait, but the movie news never. Haven't you got troubles, though, Mae Tinee, haven't you got a lot of them? I get my information from "The Voice of the Fan."

Now comes that Crabapple talking about soup. He knows that nobody is eating substantial dinners these war times. If he hadn't kept watching the stone image of Jones opening and closing the door he might have noticed the great lesson in brain power Marguerite Snow was teaching. I have noticed one thing: You have got to be the real thing to be an actor or actress on the screen.

A little of the pastoral scenes would go a long way with me, and the animals are fine to make a child have dreams and wake up in the night scared to death, though I think there should be children's theaters where plays are shown for children; perhaps some big children would enjoy them, too.

A SURE 'NOUGH FAN.

Was It Funny?

If you were to see a sealed coffin bearing a corpse suddenly move toward you in the night would you think this the funniest thing that ever happened to you? One woman had an experience of this kind and sent it into our contest labeled "The Funniest Thing That Ever Happened to Me."

If this is funny, there must be some things that are SCREAMS!

Send in your Funniest Experience, won't you please, to our Contest? The conditions follow:

Fourth prize	75
Third prize	100

Your stories must be told in either 500 words or less. They will not be considered if they are longer. Put your name and address on a separate piece of paper, inclosing it in a plain sealed envelope, and put your manuscript and the plain envelope in another envelope which you address to Contest Editor, Right Off the Reel Page, care of this paper.

The contest will close at midnight of May 2.

The prize winning stories will be made into scenarios by the Selig Polyscope company, and will be produced at the company's earliest convenience.

Norma Talmadge

PRETTY Norma Talmadge of the Vitagraph company is an eastern girl. She was born in Niagara Falls, New York, on May 2, 1895, which makes her—let's see—20 years old. She was reared and educated in Brooklyn, New York, attending first Public School 9?, and afterwards, Erasmus Hall. Shortly after her fifteenth birthday, Charles Kent, one of the directors of the Vitagraph company, employed her for the summer months. Before her vacation was over, however, her work had attracted so much attention that she was asked to join the company as a permanent member, which she did. She has been there ever since. Miss Talmadge is a versatile little woman, having played in every known variety of parts. She has been a slavey, a woman of the world, an ingenue, a boy, and, O, ever so many other things. "Under the Daisies" was a modern tragedy in which she played the stellar role. She has dark hair and brown eyes and is five feet four inches tall. She weighs 105 pounds. Her hobby is collecting antiques and it is said by those who know that she has a most enviable collection. "I love my work," Miss Talmadge says, "and work hard. I have not taken a vacation in four years. I'm busy all the time. Have practically grown up with the Vitagraph company. I call it 'my second home.'"

Answers to Movie Fans. - By Mae Tinee.

J. B.: I think I would describe "Ready Money" as a farce comedy. In which case, sir, said she, both you and your friend were wrong.

FRIEND OF R. O. R. PAGE: I think that Anita Stewart would undoubtedly send you her picture if you were to write to her, inclosing a quarter with your request. A letter addressed to Kathlyn Williams in care of the Selig Polyscope company, Los Angeles, Cal., will reach her. I'm sorry, but I have no information regarding the actress you mention. And—I'm awfully glad you're a friend.

H. T.: Do I mind your writing me a friendly letter? Well I should—just—say—not! Hurry up and do it. Address J. Warren Kerrigan in care of the Universal company, Hollywood, Cal. In the later chapters of "Zudora" Miss La Badie may take part. Yes, I think she and James Cruze play wonderfully well together.

S. F.: Yes, it's the same Charles Chaplin. He was with the Keystone company, but is now with the Essanay.

WORRIED NELL: No, Nell, James Cruze is not a Mormon.

A. V. FAN: Earle Williams of the Vitagraph company is not married. He lives in New York and is 35 years old. You're welcome.

DIMPLES: Writes as many times as you like. I'll always be glad to answer you. Crane Wilbur is 28 years old. Yes, Pearl White's picture has appeared in the "Frame."

MILDEWED: Be as sour as you like. I like sour things. Even if you don't approve of the "movies" they seem to have stirred you up—which is probably good for you.

BROWN EYES: Beverly Bayne was born in Minneapolis, Minn. She is 20 years old. I'm quite sure she'd answer your letter if you inclosed a stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply. The others you refer to are, I should judge, in their early twenties. Anita Stewart was seen recently in "Two Women," "413," and others. In "Under Royal Patronage" and "One Wonderful Night" Beverly Bayne was charming. Bryant Washburn is 25 years old.

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Miss Tinee in care of this paper.

Questions that have been answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

DOLLY M.: Send in your ballots for the "Frame" just as you like and when you like. They are counted and thrown away every week. Please remember, though, that just to say you want a favorite to receive 500 votes does not count. You must send in votes.

JANIE: No, the "Ritchie" to whom you refer is not related to the eminent gentleman you mention. I think you're a dear to say such lovely things to me in your letter. How does it feel to be 12 years old and so nice?

J. C. F.: Thank your vurr', vurr' much.

FLO S.: I'm so glad that at last you were brave enough to brave the ogress—meaning myself. O, I'm turrible—bow wow! But, just for once I'll be a lady and answer your questions. Miss Ella Hall is exactly as sweet and charming "off as on." She is about 20 years old. She is not married to Robert Leonard. Yes, when players cast in their lots with a "movie" company they have to do exactly as they are told. The beautiful extra dares not demand that she be given leads with Mr. Kerrigan or Mr. Bushman or whoever the beloved object may be. She just has to go ahead and work with any old body that's given to her. I forgive you for being afraid of me since you say you love me. Purr, purr!

Vote for the Picture of Your Favorite Player.

Harold Lockwood received the highest number of votes this week. His picture, therefore, will appear in The Frame of Public Favor next Sunday. Of the other players voted upon the following six are the leaders: Grace Cunard, Winifred Greenwood, Baby Cruze, Kathlyn Williams, Marguerite Clark and Gertrude McCoy.

In Movie Land

Sidney Bracy is running James Cruze a race for daredevil honors at the Thanhouser studio. Last week Director Howell Hansel was taking a scene for "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery," which required Mr. Bracy to climb on to an iron shutter from a fourth story window. He did it, but not without throwing a girls' boarding school, or rather the girls in the boarding school, across the way into mingled spasms of girlish terror and delight. Mr. Bracy, all unconscious of the heart havoc he was working, went gleefully (?) about the task assigned to him. He made a flying leap to the window on the fourth floor, half threw himself out, recovered his balance, and then sort of slid down the sheer wall to the shutter on the window below. A strong wind was blowing, and just as Mr. Bracy's foot neared the shutter the wind caught the latter and it slapped the wall. For an instant Mr. Bracy was poised in midair. There was a holding of breaths by those who watched. Then the shutter swung back into place, Mr. Bracy gained a footing, and all breathed easier, and the thrill that counted was there.

Moving pictures have been adopted by the Denver schools as general all around instructor. To quote C. W. Bigelow, principal of the West Side High school of that city:

"In American history I am planning to show, for one thing, the landing of Columbus; and the pupils of this school will afterwards have something better by which to remember that important date than we were taught in childhood:

"'In fourteen hundred and ninety-two
Columbus sailed the ocean blue.'

"In literature the English classics will be shown in drama form, and, of course, they will be read as well. With the moving picture projecting machine to present the works of genius on a screen, they will be more thoroughly appreciated by young minds, and more interest will be directed to the subject matter of the great English authors.

"Then in science all sorts of graphic illustrations of the problems that come up can be shown on the screen; and in art the pupils can be taught appreciation by seeing beautiful things they may have no other opportunity to look at.

"Another important use of the moving pictures will be to get the parents more interested in the school. We have planned to give a few free evening entertainments to the parents and pupils. We like to have the parents get the habit of coming to us; then we get acquainted and all pull together. We plan to run a new reel whenever we have a prize debate, and also to give some entertainments where a small charge will be made to pay for the renting of reels and to help in buying new books for the library.

"We will rent all our reels, because a greater variety can be obtained in that way. Several companies have been formed for the purpose of getting out educational films, and we will patronize them for our classroom reels."

The West Side High school, however, has not been the first in Denver to use moving pictures in educational work. The Clayton school has used moving pictures in its class work for two years with great success. During that time the children have studied the coffee industry, the logging and lumber business, and many other industrial subjects, as shown in moving pictures, with the keenest interest.

Girls, Why Do We "Fall" for Francis X.?

THERE are no two ways about it—Francis X. Bushman is one of the most popular men in the moving picture world.

Why is he?

Is it because of his beautiful eyes?

Is it because of his wavy brown hair?

Is it because of his tender mouth—his high, white forehead?

Is it because his shoulders are broad?

Is it because he knows how to make love divinely?

Is it because he is reputed to be kind to his family and friends?

Is it because he has a reputation for morality?

Is it because of his smile? Or his teeth? Or his nose?

Is it because he answers letters and sends out his photographs when requests are made?

Is it because you saw him in the street once and he looked just as adorable as when you saw him on the screen?

Is it because you approve the cut of his clothes?

Is it because his scarf pins have an air that is all their own?

Is it because he has nice hands?

Is it because he's said to be some fighter when occasion demands?

You've every one of you seen Francis X. Bushman in pictures at some time or other. In fact he's been the Essanay lodestone for many of you.

Now, do a little thinking.

Just why has he charmed you?

In another part of the paper we are presenting to you a picture of Mr. Bushman as a supplement. We wanted to give you the best kind of a likeness of him, and in order to do this decided to make the picture by the new process known as the rotogravure. This process is a comparatively new one—born and nurtured in Germany and but recently introduced into the United States. It is the only process ever found to successfully take the place of photogravure work.

Study the picture carefully. Then, when you have decided just what constitutes his charm for you, write in and tell me.

I'm curious.

SHOPLIFTERS—On Their Trail With A Store DETECTIVE

by Kate Livingston

DID you ever have the thrill of chasing a thief? Did you ever see a shoplifter cleverly plying her trade? It's exciting. There's no denying that. For a whole day I did nothing else but pursue suspected "dips" and real "dips," amateur ones and professional ones, through the mazes of crowded city department stores. And at the end of the day—well, I was breathless and heartsick. I had come too near to things that it is pleasanter to read about than to get first hand. I had been shaken up by sights I was not used to. I was devoutly glad of two things: One was that I didn't have to earn my living as a detective, no matter how full of thrills that profession might be. The other was—this may sound funny, but it's the truth—that I was honest. I never was so sure that I was glad of it, nor so satisfied with things as they are.

The bona fide detective in whose wake I trailed that day gave me a few pieces of sound advice after we started. She didn't seem to approve of my attitude.

"Say, try to look unconcerned, will you? Don't look as excited as though you were about to catch a five pound bass. We don't want to advertise our coming, you know. And keep your eyes on folk's hands. They don't steal with their faces. They do all their business with ten slippery fingers. Don't forget that."

I subsided. That is, I assumed every appearance of a person bored to tears and about to take the melancholia cure. But that didn't staisfy her, either.

"Look natural!" she pleaded. "A crook of any kind is the most suspicious mortal in the world."

Trailing a Clever One.

I think we had been strolling about the first floor of a department store for exactly forty-five minutes—I was keeping track of time by the watch on my wrist, and it was certainly dragging dreadfully—when my languidly alert little friend pressed my arm quietly.

"See that pretty young thing over by the waist counter where that $3.98 sale's going on? She's got two waists in her muff now, and that one in her hand is going to slip after the others in a jiffy. Watch her hands!" This last in a vigorous undertone. Of course my eyes were glued on her face.

Obediently I lowered my eyes to the white gloved hands that were naturally enough fingering the different waists laid out on the table. Now a white one was closely examined, now a colored one was looked over and scrutinized with all the cautiousness of a bargain hunting shopper. Again my eyes sought her face. It was such a pretty face. If the lips were a little coarse and the eyes a trifle bold and the hat on the blonde hair a bit too much to one side, the call of youth would be sufficient an excuse.

Almost as I looked she turned and moved quietly away, and I noticed the trim little tailored back and the buoyant toss of the head. She was so sure of herself, so self-possessed.

"She's a reg'lar one—nothing new about her," said my companion. "Did you see the clever way she twisted that last one into her muff while she was asking the price of the red and the black one?" We were following her slowly, keeping far enough back that she would not notice our movements.

Caught with the Goods.

I had to own that I had not seen her do the deed. In fact, it didn't seem possible to me that she really had done it. And I found myself hoping vaguely that she would give us the slip in the crowd somehow. I didn't want to be around when she was caught. But we did not lose sight of the little red feather in the close fitting hat. It bobbed and bobbed, now before one counter for a moment, now before another. Finally it came to a decided stop at a glove counter. The next moment I heard my companion's clear voice ask the price of some black kid gloves and, to my astonishment, order a couple of pairs charged and sent. I felt rather than saw that the tailored suit was next to me and that the same white gloved hands were handling the different pairs on the counter. And then, so quickly that I almost gasped aloud, I saw a pair of tan suede ones disappear in the same muff where several waists must now be lying.

"I think I'll look farther," said the pretty little thief slowly, and again moved on.

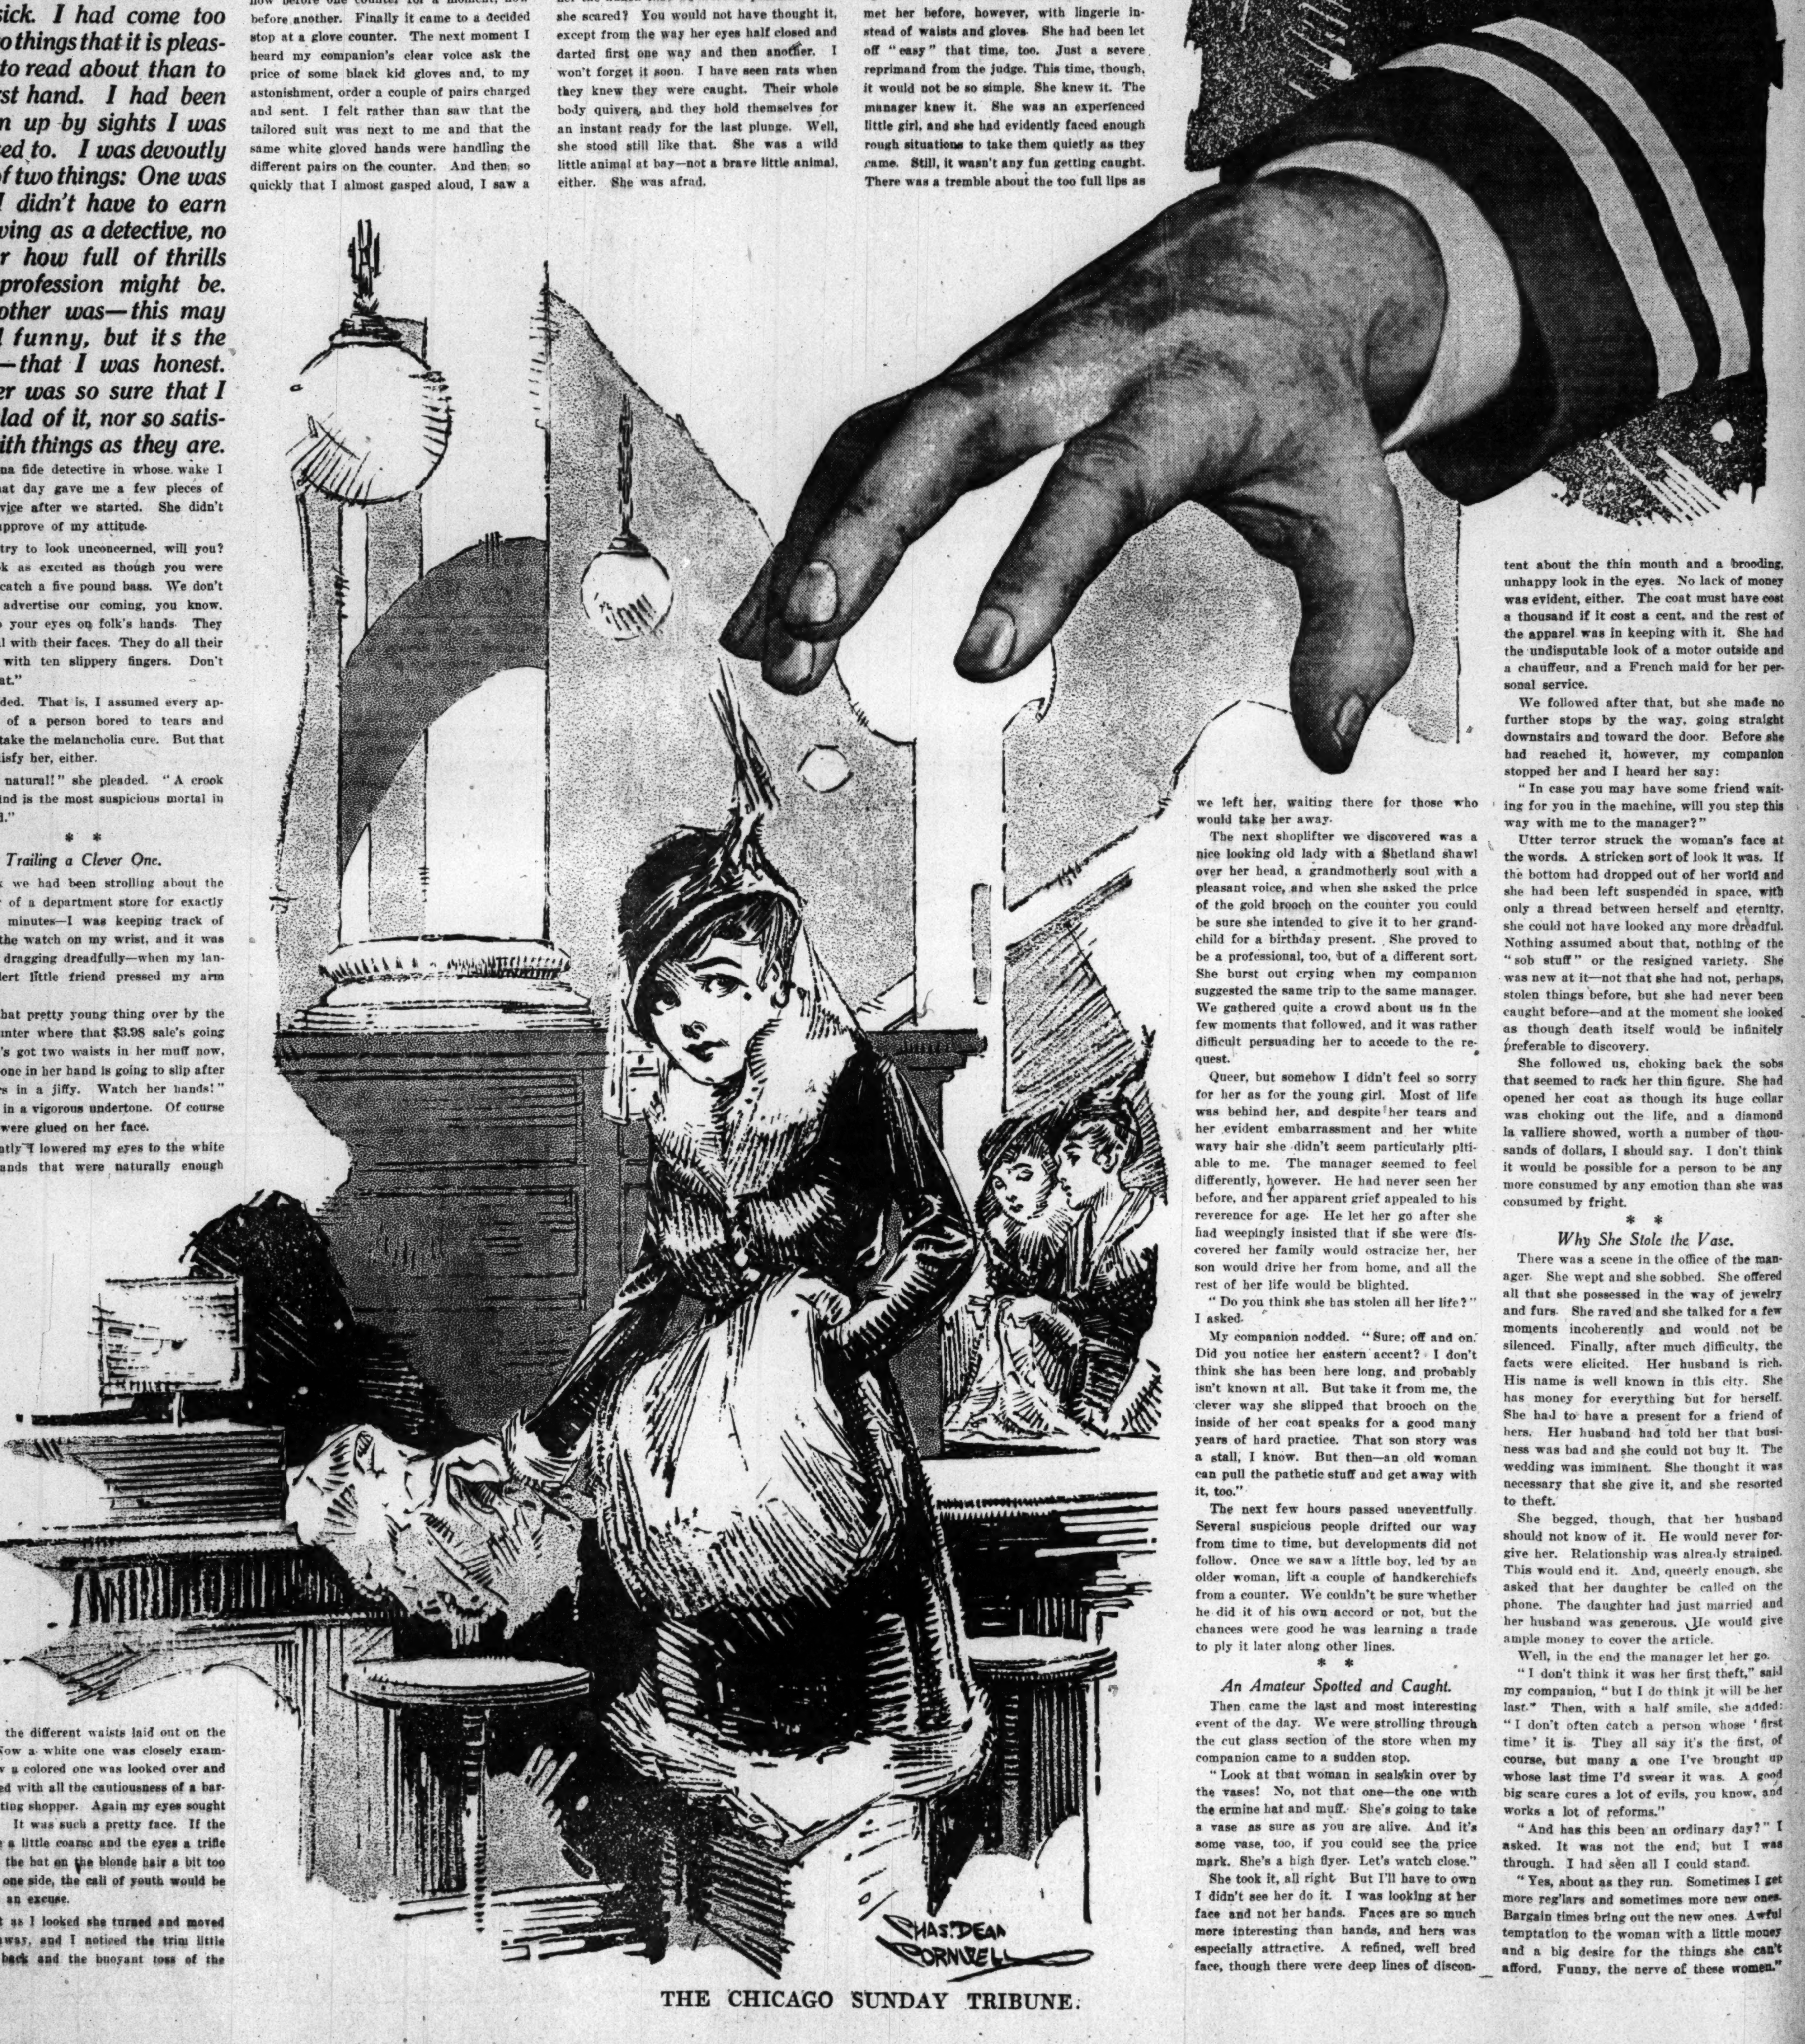
"Keep close to me," said the detective. "We'll stay after her till she gets outside. Then we'll get her with the goods on. But be sure and watch her so she doesn't get a chance to duck the stuff if she thinks we're on her trail. It's best to wait till she gets outside. There's a twist in the law about a theft not being a theft till the thief's outside the corporation grounds. Course you don't have to wait, but it's best."

It must have been at the next counter that she noticed us, and quick as a flash her suspicions were aroused, and she knew who we were. Perhaps subconsciously she had seen us before, and our continued presence gave her the hunch that we were in pursuit. Was she scared? You would not have thought it, except from the way her eyes half closed and darted first one way and then another. I won't forget it soon. I have seen rats when they knew they were caught. Their whole body quivers, and they hold themselves for an instant ready for the last plunge. Well, she stood still like that. She was a wild little animal at bay—not a brave little animal, either. She was afraid.

Afterward, when my companion had told her that she must go with her to the manager's office and see him, she followed dumbly. Her eyes were bright but tearless.

"She belongs to a gang, I'll bet," the detective whispered. "She's not pulling any sob stuff, you see. She knows she's up against the real thing."

She was "up against it," too. The manager was brusque but not unkind. He had met her before, however, with lingerie instead of waists and gloves. She had been let off "easy" that time, too. Just a severe reprimand from the judge. This time, though, it would not be so simple. She knew it. The manager knew it. She was an experienced little girl, and she had evidently faced enough rough situations to take them quietly as they came. Still, it wasn't any fun getting caught. There was a tremble about the too full lips as we left her, waiting there for those who would take her away.



The next shoplifter we discovered was a nice looking old lady with a Shetland shawl over her head, a grandmotherly soul with a pleasant voice, and when she asked the price of the gold brooch on the counter you could be sure she intended to give it to her grandchild for a birthday present. She proved to be a professional, too, but of a different sort. She burst out crying when my companion suggested the same trip to the same manager. We gathered quite a crowd about us in the few moments that followed, and it was rather difficult persuading her to accede to the request.

Queer, but somehow I didn't feel so sorry for her as for the young girl. Most of life was behind her, and despite her tears and her evident embarrassment and her white wavy hair she didn't seem particularly pitiable to me. The manager seemed to feel differently, however. He had never seen her before, and her apparent grief appealed to his reverence for age. He let her go after she had weepingly insisted that if she were discovered her family would ostracize her, her son would drive her from home, and all the rest of her life would be blighted.

"Do you think she has stolen all her life?" I asked.

My companion nodded. "Sure; off and on. Did you notice her eastern accent? I don't think she has been here long, and probably isn't known at all. But take it from me, the clever way she slipped that brooch on the inside of her coat speaks for a good many years of hard practice. That son story was a stall, I know. But then—an old woman can pull the pathetic stuff and get away with it, too."

The next few hours passed uneventfully. Several suspicious people drifted our way from time to time, but developments did not follow. Once we saw a little boy, led by an older woman, lift a couple of handkerchiefs from a counter. We couldn't be sure whether he did it of his own accord or not, but the chances were good he was learning a trade to ply it later along other lines.

An Amateur Spotted and Caught.

Then came the last and most interesting event of the day. We were strolling through the cut glass section of the store when my companion came to a sudden stop.

"Look at that woman in sealskin over by the vases! No, not that one—the one with the ermine hat and muff. She's going to take a vase as sure as you are alive. And it's some vase, too, if you could see the price mark. She's a high flyer. Let's watch close."

She took it, all right. But I'll have to own I didn't see her do it. I was looking at her face and not her hands. Faces are so much more interesting than hands, and hers was especially attractive. A refined, well bred face, though there were deep lines of discontent about the thin mouth and a brooding, unhappy look in the eyes. No lack of money was evident, either. The coat must have cost a thousand if it cost a cent, and the rest of the apparel was in keeping with it. She had the undisputable look of a motor outside and a chauffeur, and a French maid for her personal service.

We followed after that, but she made no further stops by the way, going straight downstairs and toward the door. Before she had reached it, however, my companion stopped her and I heard her say:

"In case you may have some friend waiting for you in the machine, will you step this way with me to the manager?"

Utter terror struck the woman's face at the words. A stricken sort of look it was. If the bottom had dropped out of her world and she had been left suspended in space, with only a thread between herself and eternity, she could not have looked any more dreadful. Nothing assumed about that, nothing of the "sob stuff" or the resigned variety. She was new at it—not that she had not, perhaps, stolen things before, but she had never been caught before—and at the moment she looked as though death itself would be infinitely preferable to discovery.

She followed us, choking back the sobs that seemed to rack her thin figure. She had opened her coat as though its huge collar was choking out the life, and a diamond la valliere showed, worth a number of thousands of dollars, I should say. I don't think it would be possible for a person to be any more consumed by any emotion than she was consumed by fright.

Why She Stole the Vase.

There was a scene in the office of the manager. She wept and she sobbed. She offered all that she possessed in the way of jewelry and furs. She raved and she talked for a few moments incoherently and would not be silenced. Finally, after much difficulty, the facts were elicited. Her husband is rich. His name is well known in this city. She has money for everything but for herself. She had to have a present for a friend of hers. Her husband had told her that business was bad and she could not buy it. The wedding was imminent. She thought it was necessary that she give it, and she resorted to theft.

She begged, though, that her husband should not know of it. He would never forgive her. Relationship was already strained. This would end it. And, queerly enough, she asked that her daughter be called on the phone. The daughter had just married and her husband was generous. He would give ample money to cover the article.

Well, in the end the manager let her go.

"I don't think it was her first theft," said my companion, "but I do think it will be her last." Then, with a half smile, she added: "I don't often catch a person whose 'first time' it is. They all say it's the first, of course, but many a one I've brought up whose last time I'd swear it was. A good big scare cures a lot of evils, you know, and works a lot of reforms."

"And has this been an ordinary day?" I asked. It was not the end, but I was through. I had seen all I could stand.

"Yes, about as they run. Sometimes I get more reg'lars and sometimes more new ones. Bargain times bring out the new ones. Awful temptation to the woman with a little money and a big desire for the things she can't afford. Funny, the nerve of these women."

AND I WAS SURE I WAS GOING TO LIKE BEING A TRAVELING MAN

Says Oney Fred Sweet

GRILL ROOM
INFORMATION

THERE was a bunch of us traveling men sauntering around in the hotel lobby. I had only been a traveling man for about half an hour myself and to me it was all great hope—the gilt decorated ceilings, the yellow deflected lights, the original oil paintings, the thick red plush carpets that led off to the dining room where the floor lamps were shaded with pink, the palms, the hidden music, the clerk who was so thoroughly at home hedged in between the register and the mail boxes, the saucy bell hops, the uniformed check room boy, the sweet voiced connector to the telephone booths, and the delicate complexioned girl at the cigar case.

With the latest tune I knew leaving my puckered lips in a satisfied-with-myself whistle, I crossed the floor that was tiled in mosaic, to ask the clerk if I had any mail.

"I didn't know but that I might have something from 'the house,'" I explained. "I suppose you are used to human nature. You could tell I was a traveling man, couldn't you? Say, what's the best hotel in Los Angeles? And say, by the way, point me out some old time traveling man here in the lobby. I don't feel like going to a show tonight; point out some old timer to me who has had a lot of experience on the road."

The clerk half turned to glance up at something that was concealed from me by a glass partition, and then nodded toward a party who was sitting on the leather settee that surrounded a lobby pillar.

"That guy only hits the big towns these days, but he's been in all of 'em in his day," said the clerk. "I beg your pardon, but you aren't registered here, are you?"

"Not yet," I answered flippantly, "but I am counting on making my headquarters here when I'm in town. I will probably want a sample room then and we might as well get acquainted. Have one of my cards. I had them printed just this afternoon by a fellow who had a layout in a window. If I'm wanted for anything special just have one of the boys page me."

And, feeling that I had made sufficient impression on the distributor of room keys, I sauntered over toward the traveling man who now hit only the big towns, and I shoved another one of my new cards between his face and the newspaper he was reading.

"We're in the same game, old man," I said by way of further introduction. "What's your line?"

Jumps Made By Auto Now.

The man who made the long jumps and hit only the big towns glanced up at me over his glasses, the corners of his mouth taking on a whothehellareyou expression. He did not have the flesh and the proportions and the happy smile that I had anticipated finding in my typical traveling man. He looked tired.

"What's your line?" I repeated. "Mine's cigars—La Soga cigars."

"The easiest line in the world to get into and the hardest line in the world to sell," I thought I heard him mutter.

"What's that?" I asked, nudging up beside him in friendly fashion on the leather cushion. "My 'house' this afternoon told me it was entirely up to me as to the size of the orders I placed. I am out on a commission basis. That's the only way for us fellows, don't you think so? I certainly would appreciate it, old man, if you'd give me one of your 'sure fire' funny stories—a real traveling man's story that I could spring on approaching a customer."

The man who made the long jumps folded up his paper, cased his glasses, and put the case into his vest pocket.

"Young man," he said, "a salesman on the road has to put over something besides a funny story these days. You have exactly 600,000 competitors in the traveling man game in the United States just now, and the country merchant is the wisest guy in the world about any line you may try to sell him. The quicker you get down to business the better the report you are going to send in to that 'house' of yours. I don't mean that you don't want to be full of optimism and good cheer—I don't think conditions will ever so change but what a smile will be an asset. And you've still got to know when to be a Republican and when to be a Democrat. A new man making a first trip into a new territory has as chilly a proposition as if he was making a polar exploration."

I reached in my pocket and gave the old timer one of my sample cigars.

"Here," I said, "try a La Soga."

The old timer received my offering with that same droop to the corners of his mouth with which he had received my own introduction.

"La Soga," he repeated thoughtfully and somewhat doubtfully. "Never heard of the brand before."

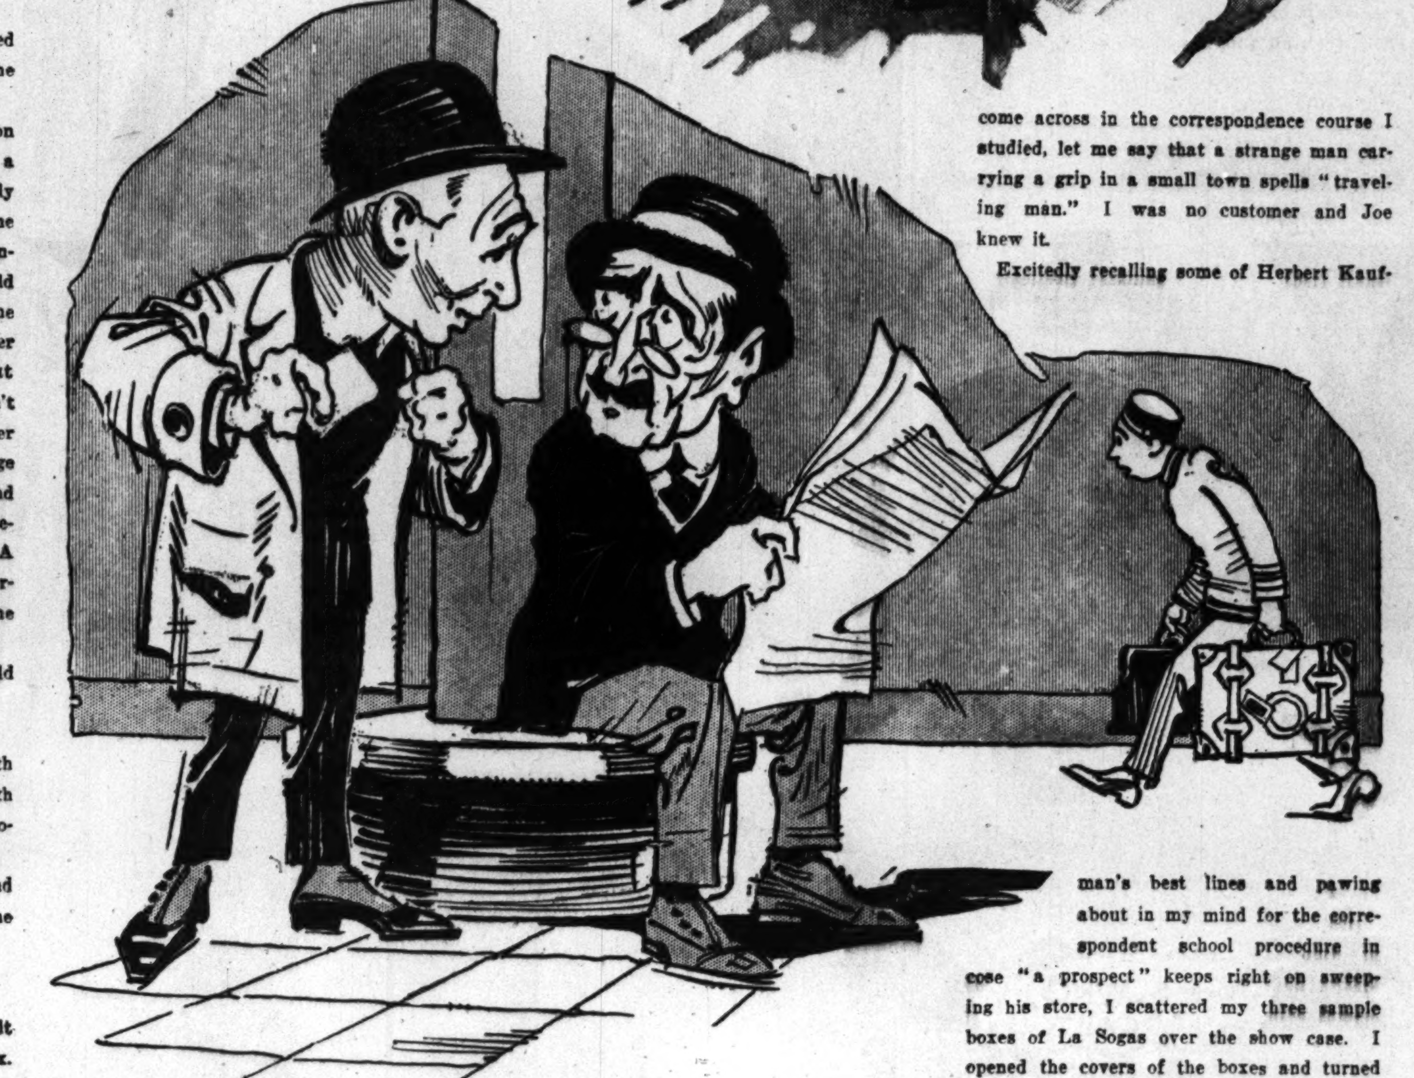
In "My Territory" at Last.

"No, it's a new one," I hastened, "but it looks a whole lot better when it's in the box. The inside cover of the box used for show case purposes has on it a picture of a Cuban girl painted in red and yellow colors, and up in one corner there is a classy gold seal. Of course, 'my territory' at first is going to be in the small towns. In a day or two I expect to be standing out in front of the 'Palace hotel' in some burg of fifteen hundred. I suppose I'll be hero worshiped more or less—looked upon as sort of a breath from the outside world. I suppose——"

"But live traveling men don't pose out in front of the small town hotels any more," interrupted the old timer. "Nowadays he don't have to wait for the next train to come through when he's got his work done. If there isn't an interurban he jumps to the next town by automobile."

I was sorry the old timer wasn't along with me that night when I took the train from the Union station to get out on "my territory." But there was a bunch of other traveling men in the smoker, my leather case with three boxes of samples stood beside me and I was as full of hope and enthusiasm as a high school commencement oration. I made a bluff of talking with the other traveling men about "rotten hotels" and "rotten train service" in this and that part of the country, and there was still the satisfied-with-myself whistle on my lips when I left the train around 2 o'clock in the morning. On my railroad folder the first town I had picked was merely a dot. As I alighted on the depot platform in the darkness, I could see the tall grain elevator silhouetted against the snow and the sky. I walked to the hotel, going over in my mind certain epigrams from Herbert Kaufman's articles about persistency and backbone. Yes, I should have gone into the commercial field long before.



I shall not attempt to describe the hotel. From the frayed, gold lettered advertisements that decorated the glass frame at the back of the writing desk I picked the firm that I would call on in the morning, not realizing at the time that most of these firms were no longer in existence. I ate breakfast at the extra priced "transient table"—so distinguished, I learned from the waitress, because of the two weazened oranges in the tarnished silver bowl posing in the table's center. I was not worrying about the extra cost, however, as, like other traveling men, I had an "expense account," even though I was secretly providing said account out of my own pocket.

There was not a great deal of glamor about my grand entrance on Main street. There were a few natives abroad, and it was a chilly, gloomy morning. I had not led myself to expect much from this first town of "my territory." I had, rather, selected it because of its smallness, just as a modest lawyer or doctor might seek a location in which there would be no competition. I walked blithly past the postoffice where the uniformed rural carriers were gathering for their day's jaunt, on past the barber shop, and had no difficulty in finding the restaurant conducted by Joe Lombandio.

Like his cousin in Chicago, Joe had grabbed onto a "best corner." I cannot say that he seemed overly pleased to see me enter his store. Right here, as a tip that I didn't come across in the correspondence course I studied, let me say that a strange man carrying a grip in a small town spells "traveling man." I was no customer and Joe knew it.

Excitedly recalling some of Herbert Kaufman's best lines and pawing about in my mind for the correspondent school procedure in case "a prospect" keeps right on sweeping his store, I scattered my three sample boxes of La Sogas over the show case. I opened the covers of the boxes and turned them toward the light so that the Cuban girl in yellow and red would show to best advantage. Joe stopped his sweeping long enough to really scan the pretty covers and the name of the brand scrolled across them in fancy letters, and then he gave a grunt that meant just the same in English as it did in Italian. Following the grunt, he gave a wave of his hand that certainly meant "nothing doing."

The Rule on Persistency Fails.

"Now, don't say things are 'pretty quiet right now' on account of the war," I expostulated. "You must stop talking war and talk business."

But Joe kept on with his broom.

"And don't say trade is bum because of the present administration," I hastened. "Times are bound to pick up, you know. All along 'my territory' there has been a big revival."

But it was as if Joe had not heard me.

"I suppose you feel that the roads are so bad that the farmers can't get in to do any buying," I went on. I was about to add, "That reminds me of a story," but on second thought I edged the three boxes of La Sogas along in the direction in which Joe was making progress with the broom.

"Oh, I know," I said, finally, "you think you can't place an order because every one around here is sending in to the mail order houses. You——"

But it looked at this juncture as though Joe, if I said any more, might use the broom for other than sweeping purposes. I decided to play safe with my La Sogas and I hastened them back into my sample case and sought Main street again.

Back in the waiting room of the low roofed green depot I did not attempt to seek explanation from my "Lessons on Salesmanship" book. I did not even seek solace in one of my samples of La Sogas. I kept bothering the man at the telegraph instrument about the expected time of the next train back to Chicago.

It Was Such a Pretty Name, Too.

It was just as the old timer had told me, a man usually has to work up in a wholesale house before he gets a real good job on "the road," but my "house" had not looked so thoroughly unpretentious when the boss had given me such glowing accounts on my starting out as it did that morning when I went back to try to recover on my sample cigars. Looking about the place then, with my optimism below zero, I could see that there was only a Cuban and a couple of girls producing the output of the establishment.

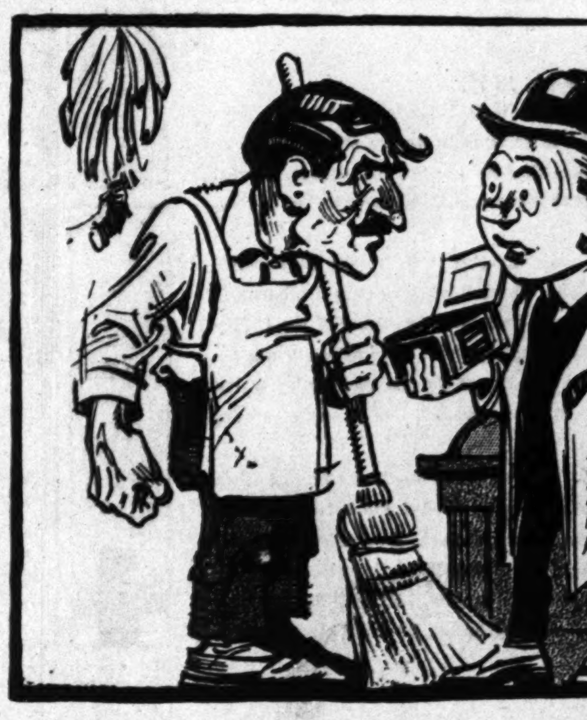
"I'm going to leave 'the road,'" I told the boss. "I've run through with my expense account and I'm ready to turn the job over to someone else. You've got a good name for this cigar, once you get it a little better advertised."

"Yes," said the boss. "The Cuban who's working here slipped me that name. If you'd been any good, you'd be making only the big towns in a little while."

All the way down the street I kept pondering. Out somewhere it was snowing, but in the loop the tall buildings turned the flakes into sleet that made me turn my coat collar up and my hat brim down. The more I pondered the more curious I became about one certain point connected with my experience on "the road." Joe's grunt still lingered in my ears. That curiosity led me into a book store, where I asked to look at a Spanish dictionary for a moment. When the clerk's back was turned I began running my finger down a list of queer words that ran alphabetically—"sofremada," "sofrito."

Here it was—"Soga."

My finger traced the definition tremblingly—"La Soga," meaning "the rope."

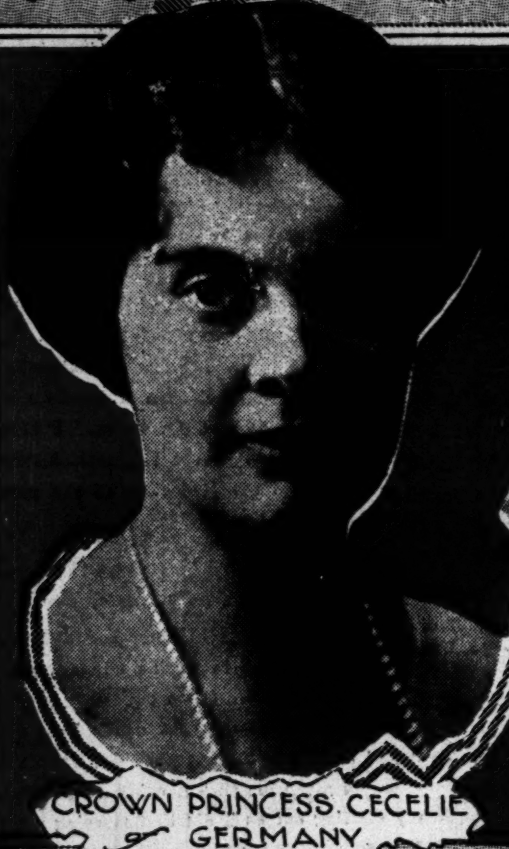


ROYAL FOLLOWERS of the SCARLET CROSS

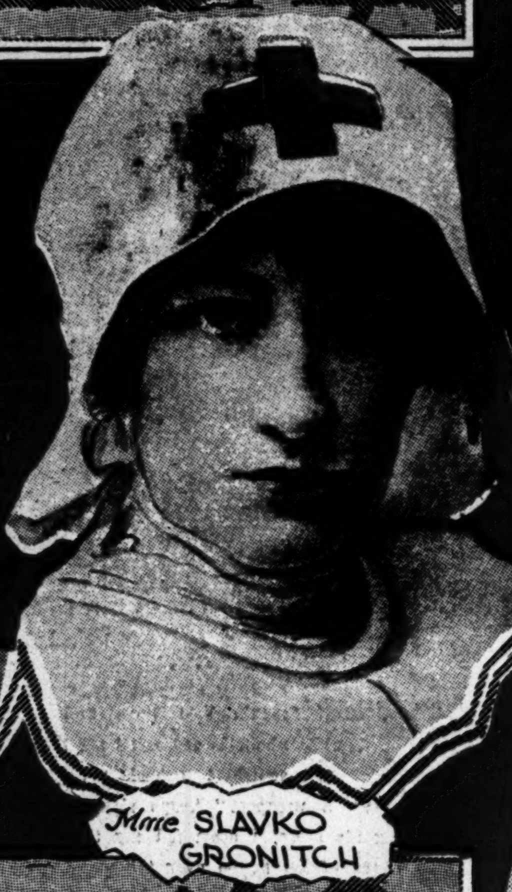
The most prominent women in Europe are playing active parts these days in the great Red Cross movement and Europe's most royal blood is at the head of its ranks. Though not more than fifty years since its birth, a vaster army is now marshaled under its white flag with the single cross of red than is under the banner of any country. It has all the strength that characterizes efficient governmental institutions and all the virtues of those who are working primarily for the relief of humanity. Appealing, therefore, both to the reason and to the emotions, it seems destined in the course of human achievement to reach the supreme heights.

ROYAL followers there are these days of the great white flag with its one scarlet cross. They are working with hand and brain. They spare no effort. They count no cost. Theirs is a common cause. Beneath its banner their rank is as though it were not. Theirs is the world-wide motto, "Inter Arma Caritas."

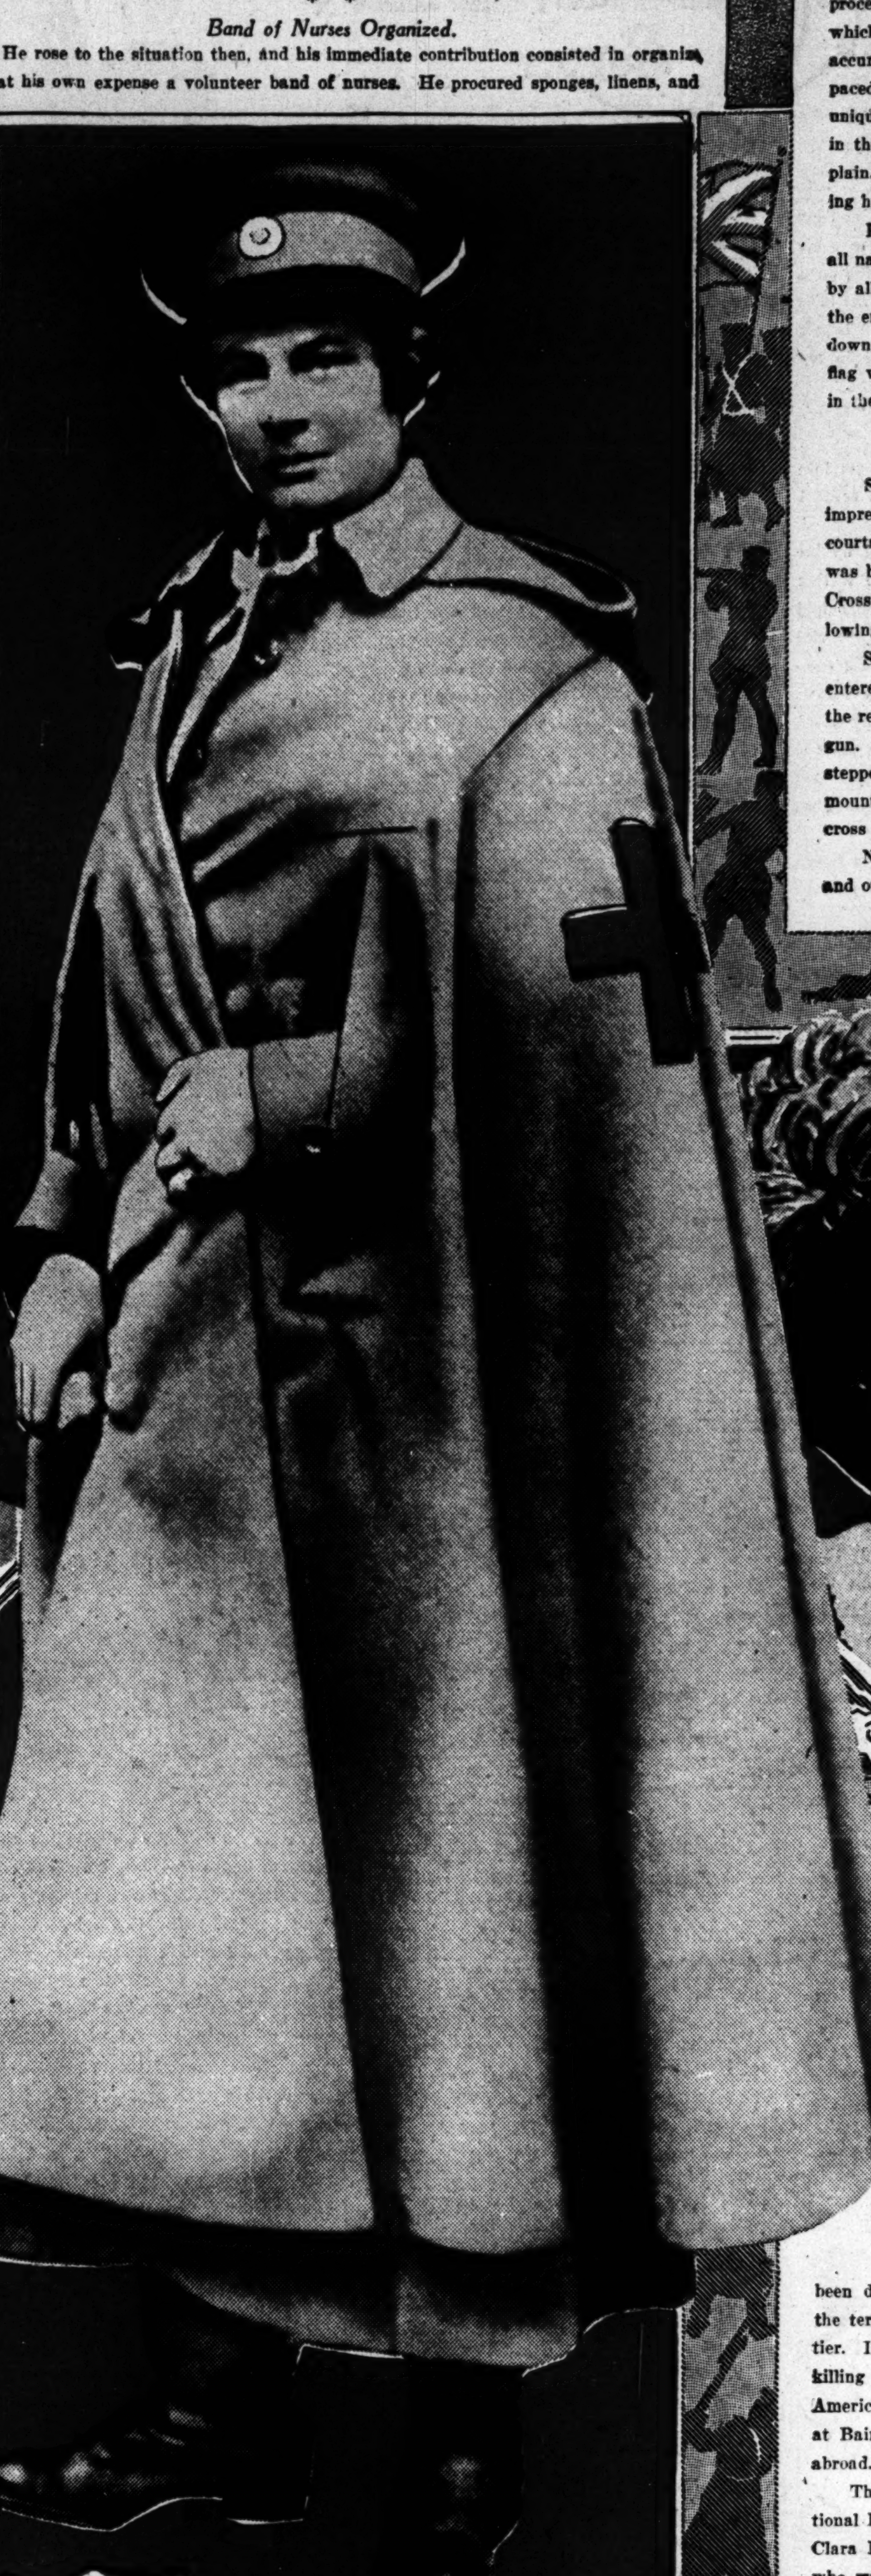
More than a dozen nations are at war. They are fighting with a fierceness primeval. The result is that the efficiency of the Red Cross organization is being put to an unprecedented test. Nor is it being found wanting. It has been called a movement the most idealistic in inspiration and the most practical in performance the world has ever known. Every day it is winning for itself a new right to this claim. Every day greater numbers of women from all classes of society, from all countries of the world, are giving themselves to its service.



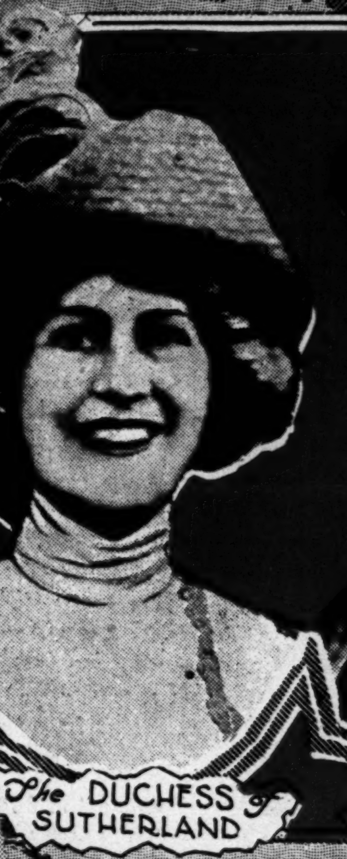
CROWN PRINCESS CECELIE of GERMANY



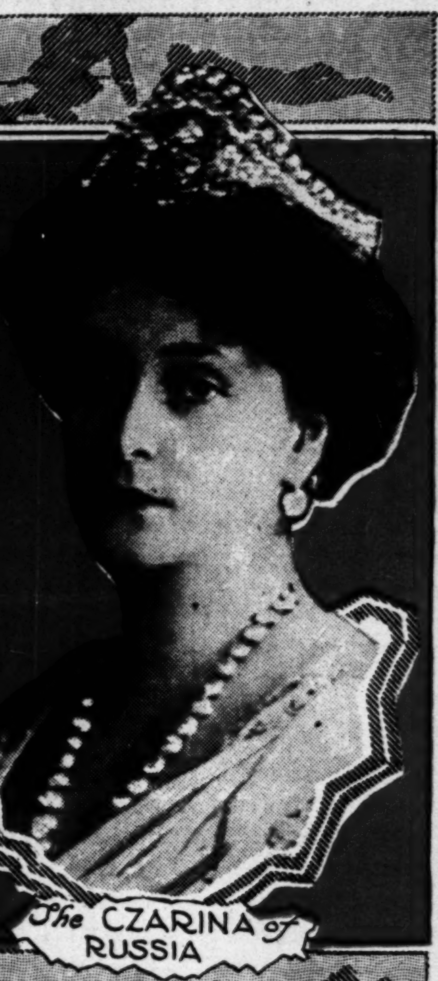
Mme SLAVKO GRONITCH



ARCHDUCHESS AUGUSTA of AUSTRIA



The DUCHESS of SUTHERLAND



The CZARINA of RUSSIA

There is the Austrian Archduchess Augusta, who has gone to the front of the firing line. Archduchess Augusta was born a princess of Bavaria. The picture taken of her in her Red Cross outfit was taken just before her departure for the battlefield. England's beautiful Duchess of Sutherland has entered active service in the English army as a nurse. The czarina of Russia, who commands five regiments, four of them Muscovite and one Prussian, is in closest touch with the Red Cross of her own country and gives much time and energy to its practical and efficient organization. Then there is the Crown Princess Cecile of Germany, who is also most keenly concerned in the intricate and intimate workings of the German Red Cross.

And while mentioning the work of these women one should not omit the name of Mme. Slavko Grouitch, the American wife of the prominent Servian government official and connected remotely with the royal Servian Obrenovitch family. She it was who played such a heroic part in the Servian war a few years ago and who is again figuring on the present battlefields with the same passionate enthusiasm and loyalty.

Although hardly half a century has passed since its beginnings, a larger army is now marshaled under its white flag with the blood red cross than under the banner of any one nation. Actuated, too, by the noblest impulses, it moves silently and steadily amidst the fiercest roar and din of battle, its marvelous effectiveness the result of the businesslike systematizing it has undergone with the years. A part of all governments, it is accordingly free from the weaknesses that too often hamper private endeavor, and yet it is directed and moved by those who work primarily for the relief of humanity, and escapes, therefore, the soullessness that frequently characterizes purely governmental institutions.

Takes Practical Form in 1859.

While the Red Cross owes its inspiration primarily to Florence Nightingale, who braved the horrors of the Crimean war in 1854 to bring relief to the stricken soldiers and brought upon herself a permanent invalidism through the terrible ordeals, its real organization was conceived and became a powerful concrete thing through the lifelong efforts of a civilian, Henri Dumant.

Henri Dumant was a native of Geneva and an eyewitness of the particularly deadly and disastrous battle of Solferino in 1859. There it was that the Italians and the French clinched in a struggle with the Austrians, and with the setting of the Italian sun some 40,000 dead and wounded lay stretched upon the field. For fifteen hours the cannon had roared and the muskets had cracked, and over the maimed bodies of the dead and the living the infantry and cavalry alike had charged, the retreating armies driven in mad confusion across the country.

Henri Dumant was there, too, when the roar of the cannon finally ceased and when the shrieks of the wounded and the groans of the dying flooded the softness of the Alpine night. He was there when there were no doctors about to give relief, no nurses to proffer help to men who lay gasping in agony. All night long, it is said, he walked among them, obsessed by the sheer horror of the sights he saw, half mad for the time being at his own utter helplessness. Then when morning broke, the clear, warm brightness over all, he saw the roads that led to Solferino and to Castiglione covered with the crawling bodies of the wounded men. He saw the streets of the towns flooded with the dragging soldiers who had been able somehow to escape from the field of battle and who were begging piteously for food and water.

Band of Nurses Organized.

He rose to the situation then, and his immediate contribution consisted in organizing at his own expense a volunteer band of nurses. He procured sponges, linens, and other necessities and installed temporary hospitals, soliciting individual families for space in their attics and spare rooms that the men in the streets might be given relief.

Then, after the first exigencies of the situation had been dealt with, Henri Dumant proceeded to write a book which he called "Recollections of Solferino." This book, which was later translated into almost every known language, contained minute and accurate descriptions of what took place on that never to be forgotten night when he paced the battlefield in silent horror. He did not claim for these descriptions any uniqueness; he did not say that in any way they differed from what had gone before in the thousands of years that men had butchered each other on mountainside and plain. But he did claim that he had found a means of alleviation of the dreadful suffering he had witnessed.

His idea was that all armies should have a permanent ambulance corps, a corps of all nations, which should be adequate for the emergency and which should be respected by all contesting countries. Before that no army ambulance was given consideration by the enemy. A doctor amputating the limb of a soldier was quite as likely to be struck down as the patient he was tending had been. Henri Dumant suggested that a white flag with a red cross should be the emblem and all who carried it should be inviolate in the common interests of humanity.

Nations Enter Compact.

Spurred on to action by the force of his conception as well as by the still vivid impression made on his brain by that one night at Solferino, he visited the different courts of Europe, interviewed sovereigns and the representatives of sovereigns. He was backed up by wealthy countrymen of Geneva, and it was there that the first Red Cross commission met in 1863. Fourteen governments were represented, and the following year the famous Geneva convention was drawn up.

Since then all civilized countries, with the exception of Morocco and Brazil, have entered into the compact. Nor since that treaty has there been a single battle where the red cross of Geneva has not been glimpsed above all the gray smoke of cannon and gun. Nations have been abundantly generous in contributions of money, and on the steppes of Russia and among the mosques and minarets of Turkey, as well as on the mountains of San Salvador and by the fiords of Norway, the white flag with the red cross stands always ready for action.

Nor is its scope in the United States limited to war needs alone. Other disasters and other emergencies receive its capable assistance. The sailors braving the dangers of the sea, the miners delving deep in the bowels of the earth, the engineers scalded by the wrecking of trains, whole cities devastated by fire, and communities laid low by cyclone, all are entitled to its efficient organized aid.

American Red Cross Abroad.

When the bubonic plague broke out in Manchuria it was the American Red Cross which came to its relief. During the frightful riots at Barcelona, when the hand of the anarchist was directed against all society and every long regarded principle of war tossed to the winds, the white flag with its red cross was regarded. Again, in the war between Russia and Japan, when all diplomatic intercourse was suspended and the press had been driven from the field of action, it was the Red Cross that carried news to the terror filled hearts of mothers, wives, and sweethearts who waited on the frontier. In 1907 when the Mohammedans went mad with religious fury and ran amuck, killing some 25,000 Christian Armenians and leaving thousands homeless, it was the American Red Cross that furnished relief. The organization established headquarters at Baireuth, Germany, and it is now the only chapter of the American Red Cross abroad.

The woman who was responsible for the American connection with the International Red Cross of Geneva and who secured this country's adoption of the treaty was Clara Barton. She it was who organized the first American Red Cross society and who was also its first president, from the years 1881 to 1904. She it was who also inaugurated the amendment, which is almost exclusively American, to the effect that the Red Cross society shall provide relief for other catastrophes. She took part personally in distributing relief at the Ohio and Mississippi floods, at the Johnstown, Pa., flood, in the Russian famine, and carried relief to Cuba in the Spanish war.

Worked on the Battle Field.

It was perhaps during the Franco-Prussian war that she distinguished herself most highly, following the example of Florence Nightingale in the Crimea and plunging into the thick of the battles. If hers was not the original inspiration, as was Miss Nightingale's, and if she did not inaugurate and put in motion the tremendous movement, as did Henri Dumant, she was nevertheless its American propagandist, imbibing its essential spirit of universal mercy and wholesome practicality. What was in Miss Nightingale's early experience an organization built supremely on that most humanizing emotion, pity, became in the course of a few years an organization with its roots buried deep in most efficient and systematic management.

It is the last fact which accounts, perhaps, for the enormous strength of the Red Cross crusaders. For that which appeals at one and the same time to the emotions and the reason is bound surely, in the course of all human endeavor, to reach supremest heights.

ZUDORA In the Twenty Million Dollar Mystery

Novelized by Harold MacGrath

SYNOPSIS.

Zudora, heiress to $20,000,000, is placed in the guardianship of her uncle, Hassam Ali, a mystic. Hassam Ali is determined to secure the girl's fortune for himself, and when she becomes of age he makes every effort to bring about her death. Zudora is in love with a young lawyer, John Storm, and she seeks permission of her miserly uncle to marry him. Hassam Ali promises to grant her wish provided she shall solve twenty of his cases. Zudora solves nine of the cases when her uncle dies, and she is released of her pledge.

At the death of her uncle, Zudora has another suitor for her hand—Jim Baird, a man who has been playing as double to Hassam Ali, but who, through sincere love of the girl, gives up the false life and goes back to his work as a newspaper reporter.

No longer obliged to solve Hassam Ali's cases Zudora now confronts the greatest mystery of all, which is the mystery of her own life and the ambition to secure the vast fortune of $20,000,000 left her. On looking through her uncle's papers she also finds that her father left her an interest in a diamond mine, and Storm and Baird both lend assistance in trying to regain for her possession of this estate, which is being appropriated by rogues.

CHAPTER XV.

THE ROBBERY OF THE RUBY CORONET.

HUNT and Baird had at least found out where the Zudora mine was, but the rightful ownership still hung in the air. Hunt also declared that the false claimants had been cognizant of their trip to Montana and had tried to push them off the board. The best thing they now could do would be to wait for some fresh move against Zudora. Sooner or later they would make another attempt against her life or liberty. Hunt warned both Zudora and Storm that if anything turned up of a suspicious character to notify him at once.

About this time Copeland, the banker and broker who had handled various deposits from Zudora and at whose bank she had her safety deposit box, concluded to make his wife a fine birthday gift. This gift was a handsome coronet of rubies. Mrs. Copeland possessed many splendid jewels, but this latest addition surpassed them all. Womanlike, she wanted to show her friends how generous her husband was; so she decided to give a dance. Among those who received invitations were Mme. Du Val, Capt. Radcliffe, and Bruce. Mrs. Copeland knew Mme. Du Val, but not the other two. They were business friends of her husband, and as such she accepted them.

Zudora and Storm were invited because Mrs. Copeland looked upon these two as friends. It had been some time since Zudora and Storm had gone to any social function, and naturally she was excited. She was in nowise in mourning for her uncle, the late Hassam Ali; but she had gone nowhere for weeks. The color and music would be a great relief to her. She had been through so much that she had begun to crave a little pleasurable excitement.

On the night of the dance Mrs. Copeland decided to put on the new coronet, together with her collarette and bracelet of diamonds. She scintillated, as the saying goes.

She kept her jewels in a small wall safe. She was giving her hair a few finishing pats when the maid entered to announce that guests were arriving. Hastily the mistress replaced in the safe those trinkets she could not use and shut the door. But in her hurry she left on the dresser a little book which contained the combination numbers.

The moment she was gone the maid pounced upon the book and thumbed it hurriedly. She had seen this little book many times, but until now she had never been able to get her hands upon it. She knew that it contained the combination to the wall safe. She turned her apron over and jotted down the numerals on the linen. She replaced the book in the identical spot she had found it and left the room.

Baird was glad to see Zudora and Storm. He chatted with them until the dancing began, then he wandered out among the smokers.

Capt. Radcliffe and Bruce presently drew together.

"Did you see that fellow Baird?" asked Bruce.

"Yes, and he has his eye on me. But I don't think he connects me with the man he met on the road to the Zudora mines."

"Well, I want to keep out of his sight. I've an idea that he has placed me," said the diamond smuggler.

"What if he has placed you? He hasn't anything like proof."

"He saw me go into Dr. Mann's front door and out the rear. I'm certain of that."

"If he had been certain you'd have heard from him long before this. Take my word for it. Now, come along. I'm going to take a quiet stroll upstairs. This house looks like good hunting one of these days."

"You would not rob Copeland?" whispered Bruce.

"I would take the pennies off a dead man's eye if I needed them. Come on."

The two worthies mounted the stairs casually; but once in the upper hall they became alert.

"I'll try this room here," said Radcliffe. "It looks as if it might be Mrs. Copeland's boudoir. Cough if any one comes in sight."

Radcliffe slipped into Mrs. Copeland's boudoir and glanced about with the skilled eye of a man who finds it necessary to observe all things. He saw the safe in the wall and examined it. That magnificent coronet and that collarette of diamonds would repose in yonder safe. But it would be a hard nut to crack.

His glance swept over the top of the dresser and rested upon the little book. Such things were generally valuable. In a moment he was thumbing it. When he came across the combination he was delighted. He quickly transferred it to a slip of paper, stowed it away, and started for the door just as Bruce coughed his warning. He was safely in the hall by the time the maid came along.

"The gentlemen's coat room?" he asked.

"The door opposite, sir."

"Thanks," said Radcliffe.

He and Bruce entered the coat room as a matter of precaution, then went downstairs again. Radcliffe would have been greatly astonished could he have glanced into Mrs. Copeland's boudoir ten minutes later. The butler, having ideas of his own, was at that moment copying down the combination of the wall safe from the little book the mistress had forgotten in her hurry.

Zudora and Storm, however, enjoyed themselves thoroughly. What with the music and the dancing and the pleasure they found in each other's company the rest of the world seemed very well lost. On the way home, however, Zudora expressed her dislike for Capt. Radcliffe. She was quite positive that she had seen him before, under unfavorable circumstances. She wondered if Copeland knew anything about the man.

"Where do you think you have seen him?" asked Storm, curiously.

"That's the baffling part of it. I know I've seen him, but beyond that things are hazy. I don't like him. I'm certain of that much."

"I wish you'd marry me straight off and let me take you away where you'd forget all these unhappy affairs."

"Ah, John, my father was a sportsman. He never gave up a fight, and neither shall I. It isn't the money, though, that's always handy; it's the thought of dishonest people getting the benefit of what is mine. Until I've won or lost, I prefer to remain as I am. I've caused you enough trouble, John, as it is. No one has any enmity toward you. It is I."

"Well, I guess I'll hang around," said John, pleasantly, though he did not experience any particular pleasure at that moment. "You might change your mind, you know; and when you do I want to be at hand."

"You're very good to me, John."

"Millions and millions of money!" he murmured. "I'm beginning to hate money."

"So am I. So let's say no more about it."

The following day, at Mme. Du Val's, plans were completed for the robbing of the Copeland wall safe. Bruce and Radcliffe agreed that the attempt should be made that night, as the Copelands had spoken of going into the city for a night at the opera. They sent two lesser crooks to watch the premises.

And while they watched they saw shadows against the curtains of Mrs. Copeland's room. At first they believed that the Copelands had not gone into town, but a minute or two later one of the shades rolled up, revealing the butler and the maid.

Mr. Hook had been butler in the Copeland house for about six weeks. He had been highly recommended by Marie, the maid, who had served her mistress with apparent loyalty for two years. All for the purpose that was now being enacted. Hook was merely her partner in crime, and both were wanted by the police in other cities.

The butler went directly to the safe in the wall, turned the knob the specific number of times, and swung open the door.

"There they are, Marie. This is the last job. We'll hike across the pond and live in comfort for the rest of our days. I never could find out where the missis kept that little book, and we both fell on it last night. Some luck, eh? Thirty thousand dollars; as easy as turning over your hand. Give me the handbag."

He dumped the jewels into the bag, but the ruby coronet was too large for the receptacle.

"I'll have to carry that under my coat. Now, then, give me a kiss and I'll be off to Riodon's saloon to hide the stuff. We'll have to split the swag three ways; but we'll pull down a clear $20,000, or I don't know our Uncle Isadore."

"Hurry! I'll follow just as soon as I can."

"Right-o! Now, to make it look real and lifelike, I'll drop out of the window here. I've a pair of the master's shoes on, and that'll bunk the bulls until we can make a getaway."

He dropped, almost into the hands of the two men watching him. But he was too agile and quick for them. He was off like a deer. They gave chase heartily enough, rather certain that Capt. Radcliffe would miss his haul if they did not catch this shrewd butler. Hook, by dodging and doubling, succeeded in eluding them. He had in mind to hide the jewels and return some other night for them. He wasn't anxious to have them fall into the hands of absolute strangers. That they were in the same deal as himself he had no doubts.

He drew out his handkerchief to wrap around the receptacle, and in doing so the memorandum book and a card fell from his pocket. Mr. Hook was not wholly fortunate in his adventure this night. As he scaled the wall and dropped down the other side of it he dropped into Bruce's arms. Bruce had heard the trampling of feet and was ready. In the struggle the coronet fell to the ground. With a mighty jerk Hook managed to free himself, and he took to his heels, glad enough to have some of the booty.

Bruce had a keen ear, and during the struggle he heard something fall. Immediately he began searching, and finally came upon the coronet. On the other side of the wall, somewhere, lurked his amiable confederate, Capt. Radcliffe. Should he hail him and make known his find? Indeed no. There was honor among thieves in books, but rarely in life. Bruce stole off the scene, perfectly satisfied with his share of the loot.

But Capt. Radcliffe found something. It was the card the crooked butler had dropped during his struggle with Bruce. Did Capt. Radcliffe call aloud for his friend, Bruce? No. He was stirred by the same sense. This saloon in Ramona avenue was doubtless some kind of a fence, and he at once decided to investigate.

On second thought the maid concluded not to fly at present, but to announce the robbery the moment the Copelands returned. For a while at least they would not suspect her of complicity. Nor did they. The maid wept. The butler was evidently guilty. And she had trusted him! She had even promised to marry him. He was a thief. It was all so very well done that the Copelands believed her implicitly.

Meantime Bruce wended his way quickly to a house he knew of. It was a rendezvous of his own, not known by his confederates. In the library over the mantel hung a fine pair of antlers. These covered a hole in the brick chimney, and into this hole Bruce deposited the ruby coronet. He could wait now until the whole affair had blown over. On one of his European trips he could dispose of it for far more than he could safely get in America. He was well satisfied with himself.

The next day Detective Hunt learned of the robbery, but as he had not yet been approached in regard to it, merely made note of the salient features of the case. He busied himself with several photographs and selected one of them. Later he would use this likeness as a disguise.

Baird came in breezily.

"They've put me on the Copeland robbery," he announced. "What do you think about it?"

"I guess the butler is the boy."

"If I can land a scoop on this story my little old pay envelope will get a boost."

"You're a queer card, Baird. You've got the stuff in you. You once lived like a prince, and yet you're willing to work hard for an honest living. Well, if the Copelands come to me I'll take you in on it."

"Any news on the other business?"

"Nothing you can put your hand on. I have a lot of suspicions, but I'm not going to tell you what they are. I wish I'd been at the Copelands' the other night. There might have been a face there I could have placed."

The clerk came in. "Lady and gentleman to see you, sir."

"Name?"

"Copeland."

"Send them in," said Hunt, smiling. "I've an idea our friend Storm sent them here. Don't do any talking."

"All right," laughed Baird.

The upshot of the visit resulted in Hunt accepting the case. He went up to the house at once and went over the ground thoroughly. He quizzed the maid narrowly, but she was letter perfect in her part. She fooled and disarmed him apparently; but he took careful notice of her features and her height and color. There were tracks all over the lawn, so many, in fact, that he could learn nothing in this direction.

That afternoon Mr. Hook entered the grogshop of Mr. Riodon, greeted the barkeeper cordially, and proceeded upstairs to a room he had previously engaged. There he met the maid Marie and they laughed over the successful manner in which the detective had been fooled.

Downstairs Capt. Radcliffe entered the bar, sat down by a window, and ordered a drink, pretending to be interested in that morning's paper. Sooner or later he expected to encounter Mr. Hook. The captain had a good deal of patience when necessity required it.

Now, one thing Detective Hunt did find, and that was Hook's memorandum book. In that book he learned that the butler's "hangout" was Riodon's saloon in Ramona avenue, Bronx. So at the same time that Radcliffe read his stale newspaper and Hook flirted with the maid upstairs, Hunt and Baird stopped on the opposite side of the street and eyed the name on the saloon windows.

"This is the shop, sure enough," declared Hunt. "Suppose we stroll over and see what's inside."

Radcliffe chanced to look out of a clear spot in the window and saw them. He was in a quandary for a moment. But he had his worry for nothing. The detective and the reporter immediately sought the stairs; and Capt. Radcliffe, as he went out the rear door, cursed himself for not going up the stairs himself.

There's always a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip. If Marie hadn't wanted a certain brooch which she admired among the Copeland collection and if Hook hadn't strenuously refused to surrender it, they would not have quarreled, their voices would not have risen. The sound of their argument was music to Hunt's ears. Quickly he selected a key from his bunch of skeletons, whipped it into the lock, gave a twist, and shouldered into the room, followed by Baird.

Hook, without waiting to inquire his visitors' names and business, plunged toward a window and leaped. Baird followed him fearlessly.

Hunt turned upon the maid sardonically.

"I thought I'd find you here." He scooped up the stolen jewels. "Where is the ruby coronet?"

"I don't know," whimpered Marie. "He lost it in jumping the wall the night of the robbery."

Hunt did not doubt this. The tracks at the Copeland place had given evidence of a struggle.

"Where is his hangout?" he demanded.

"I don't know."

"All right." Hunt took out a pair of handcuffs. "Want to ride back to town with these on instead of diamonds?"

Marie reluctantly told him where he would doubtless find her lover. After all, if Hook hadn't made such a row over giving her what she wanted of the loot neither would have been in their predicament.

"It's the old Blaisdell house at Highwood."

"Go back to your mistress and stay there. I can't find your phiz anywhere, so I'm going to give you a chance. But if you've lied to me I'll put you over."

When Hunt reached the Blaisdell place he was met by Baird, more or less out of wind.

"Did you get them all?"

"All but the ruby piece. I've an idea that it's in this joint. Where's Hook?"

"He got by me somehow. I shouldn't wonder if that old house had a dozen or more secret passages; but I couldn't find any. Let's get back to town with the stuff. We can come back here later."

To this Hunt readily agreed.

When they did come back they encountered many thrilling things, as surprising as they were thrilling. Zudora and John had gone out for a spin and the machine had broken down near the Blaisdell place. Bruce, who had witnessed the accident, made up for the occasion and offered the hospitality of his home. This courtesy was readily accepted, with the result that the two young people found themselves prisoners. Zudora was tied to a chair in the library, while Storm was dragged down into the cellar.

Bruce was in high feather. He had not only the rubies but the girl they had been after ever since she got away from Dr. Mann's private insane asylum. But eggs have to be hatched befor you can count your chickens.

Hunt and Baird returned at once after they had given the bag of jewels to Mrs. Copeland. They found Zudora, to their amazement, struggling in the Morris chair.

"The ruby coronet is behind those antlers," she cried. "They took John downstairs. Go to him quickly!"

So all the jewels—and perhaps the most precious, Zudora—were returned. But Hunt was distinctly dissatisfied with the adventure. The crooks had slipped through his fingers.

SINBAD ESCAPES

FROM THE UNDERGROUND RIVER.

FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

BY DONAHEY

SYNOPSIS OF SINBAD SAILS INTO THE UNDERGROUND RIVER.

Sinbad the Sailor, with a party of sailors and merchants, is shipwrecked upon an island. They find the island to be rich in pearls, of which they gather a great lot. The other men die one by one till Sinbad is left alone. He has seen a strange stream of water that runs underground, and feeling that it might have some outlet, he builds a raft, and loading it with pearls, he sails into the stream. Filled with a great fear of the dark place, he soon loses his senses.

AFTER a time I recovered my senses and found I was still sailing along in the dark. The raft was not moving as rapidly as before, and the roar of the water was not so great. Presently something brushed against my head. I threw up my hand and discovered that the cave was getting narrower, for I had struck the roof.

"This filled me with alarm, for I feared the channel might become so small my raft would be unable to get through.

"With this new horror in my mind I again lost my senses and fell upon the raft like one dead. When I again opened my eyes I found myself in the light. I was still upon the raft, and to my surprise I found it had been carefully tied to the bank of a river. I rubbed my eyes and looked around again to be sure I was not in a dream. The land was flat for quite a distance on both sides and a number of men were working in the fields near me. When they saw I was awake they came and gathered round me. They were fine looking men with dark skins. One of them tried to talk to me, but I could not understand a single word he said.

"They talked among themselves for a time, and finally a man not so dark as the others came up to me and spoke in my own language.

"'Peace be with you, brother,' he said. 'We came here to work in the fields and saw your raft floating in the river. We caught it, made it fast to the shore, and tried to awaken you, but without success. We then left you to awaken at your leisure.'

"I asked them for food and water, which they brought and placed before me. After I had refreshed myself I told them of my experience on the island, how I had built the raft and sailed into the underground river. They thought my adventure a most wonderful tale and insisted that I should go with them and tell my story to their king. They helped me carry the goods and jewels I had brought with me, and after a short journey we came to the palace of the king of Serendib.

"I was presented to the king and told him all the details of my adventure. He was much interested in my story. He also asked many questions about my own king and country. I made several fine presents of rich goods and jewels to the king. He was greatly pleased with my gifts and invited me to live in his palace while I remained in the country. I was presented at court and met the best and greatest people in the kingdom.

"I found the island of Serendib to be a rich and beautiful place. I visited a great mountain on the island, where a kind of stone called emery is found. This emery is very hard and is used in cutting diamonds and other precious stones. The island had many wonderful trees, on which spices grew. Diamonds, rubies, and other precious jewels are found in great abundance. After several pleasant months upon the island I finally made up my mind to return to my own country.

"I went before the king and asked permission to return to my home. The king begged me not to leave. He offered to make me a great officer in his government if I would remain. I thanked him for the great honor, but told him I longed to return to my family.

"He gave me permission to leave, though I could see it was much against his will. The king told me that he wished to send a letter and present to my king and asked me to carry them. I told him it would be a great honor to do so, and several days later when I saw the gifts he meant to send I was filled with astonishment at their richness and beauty.

"The letter the king gave me to carry was written on the skin of a very rare animal. The color of the skin was a wonderful cream yellow and the ink the king used was the most beautiful shade of blue I have ever seen. This ink was made from precious jewels, which were ground into a fine powder and then mixed with some strange liquid.

"The letter read like this:

"'Peace be on thee: From the king of Serendib, before whom walk a thousand elephants and whose palace is set with millions of jewels.

"'Brother: We have sent you a trifling present. Accept it from us. You are to us a brother and true friend, and the love in our hearts for you is great. The presents are not suited to your greatness, but we beg of you, brother, to accept this trifling present, with our love. We hope you will favor us with a reply.

"'Peace be on you.

"'KING OF SERENDIB.'

"The presents the king intended to send were most wonderful and beautiful. There was a drinking cup about seven and a half inches high, made from a solid ruby. Around the outside edge of the cup ran a beautifully carved design, and the inside was set with perfect pearls. This cup was a wonderful piece of workmanship and must have been worth a fortune.

"There was a skin of a huge serpent. This serpent was said to have been big enough to have easily swallowed an elephant. The skin had been made into a rug, and the king told me that those who sat upon it would be forever free of sickness. It had great spots of gold upon it and was wonderfully rich in color.

"There were great piles of precious goods and spices, rich candies, and many baskets of preserved fruits.

"One of the presents that filled me with admiration was a handsome slave girl. She was the most beautiful woman I had ever seen, and it was said she was the loveliest woman in the country and one of the most beautiful in the world. She wore rich clothes, set with precious jewels, and I all but lost my heart to her.

"Many farewell parties and dinners were given in my honor, and I had only feelings of real regret at leaving these kindly people as the day of departure drew near. The king had a ship made ready for me, and on the day I set sail I was escorted to the dock by the king and his court. I found it hard to leave these good people, for they had treated me royally during my stay in their country. I waved good-by as long as I could see my friends, and tears gathered in my eyes as the island disappeared from view.

"We had nice weather and sailed along pleasantly, and I would have enjoyed the trip more if I had not had the rich presents the king had intrusted to my care. For we were in a part of the world where pirates are often seen. Several days after our departure I was filled with alarm as I noticed a powerful ship sailing rapidly towards us.

(To be continued next Sunday.)

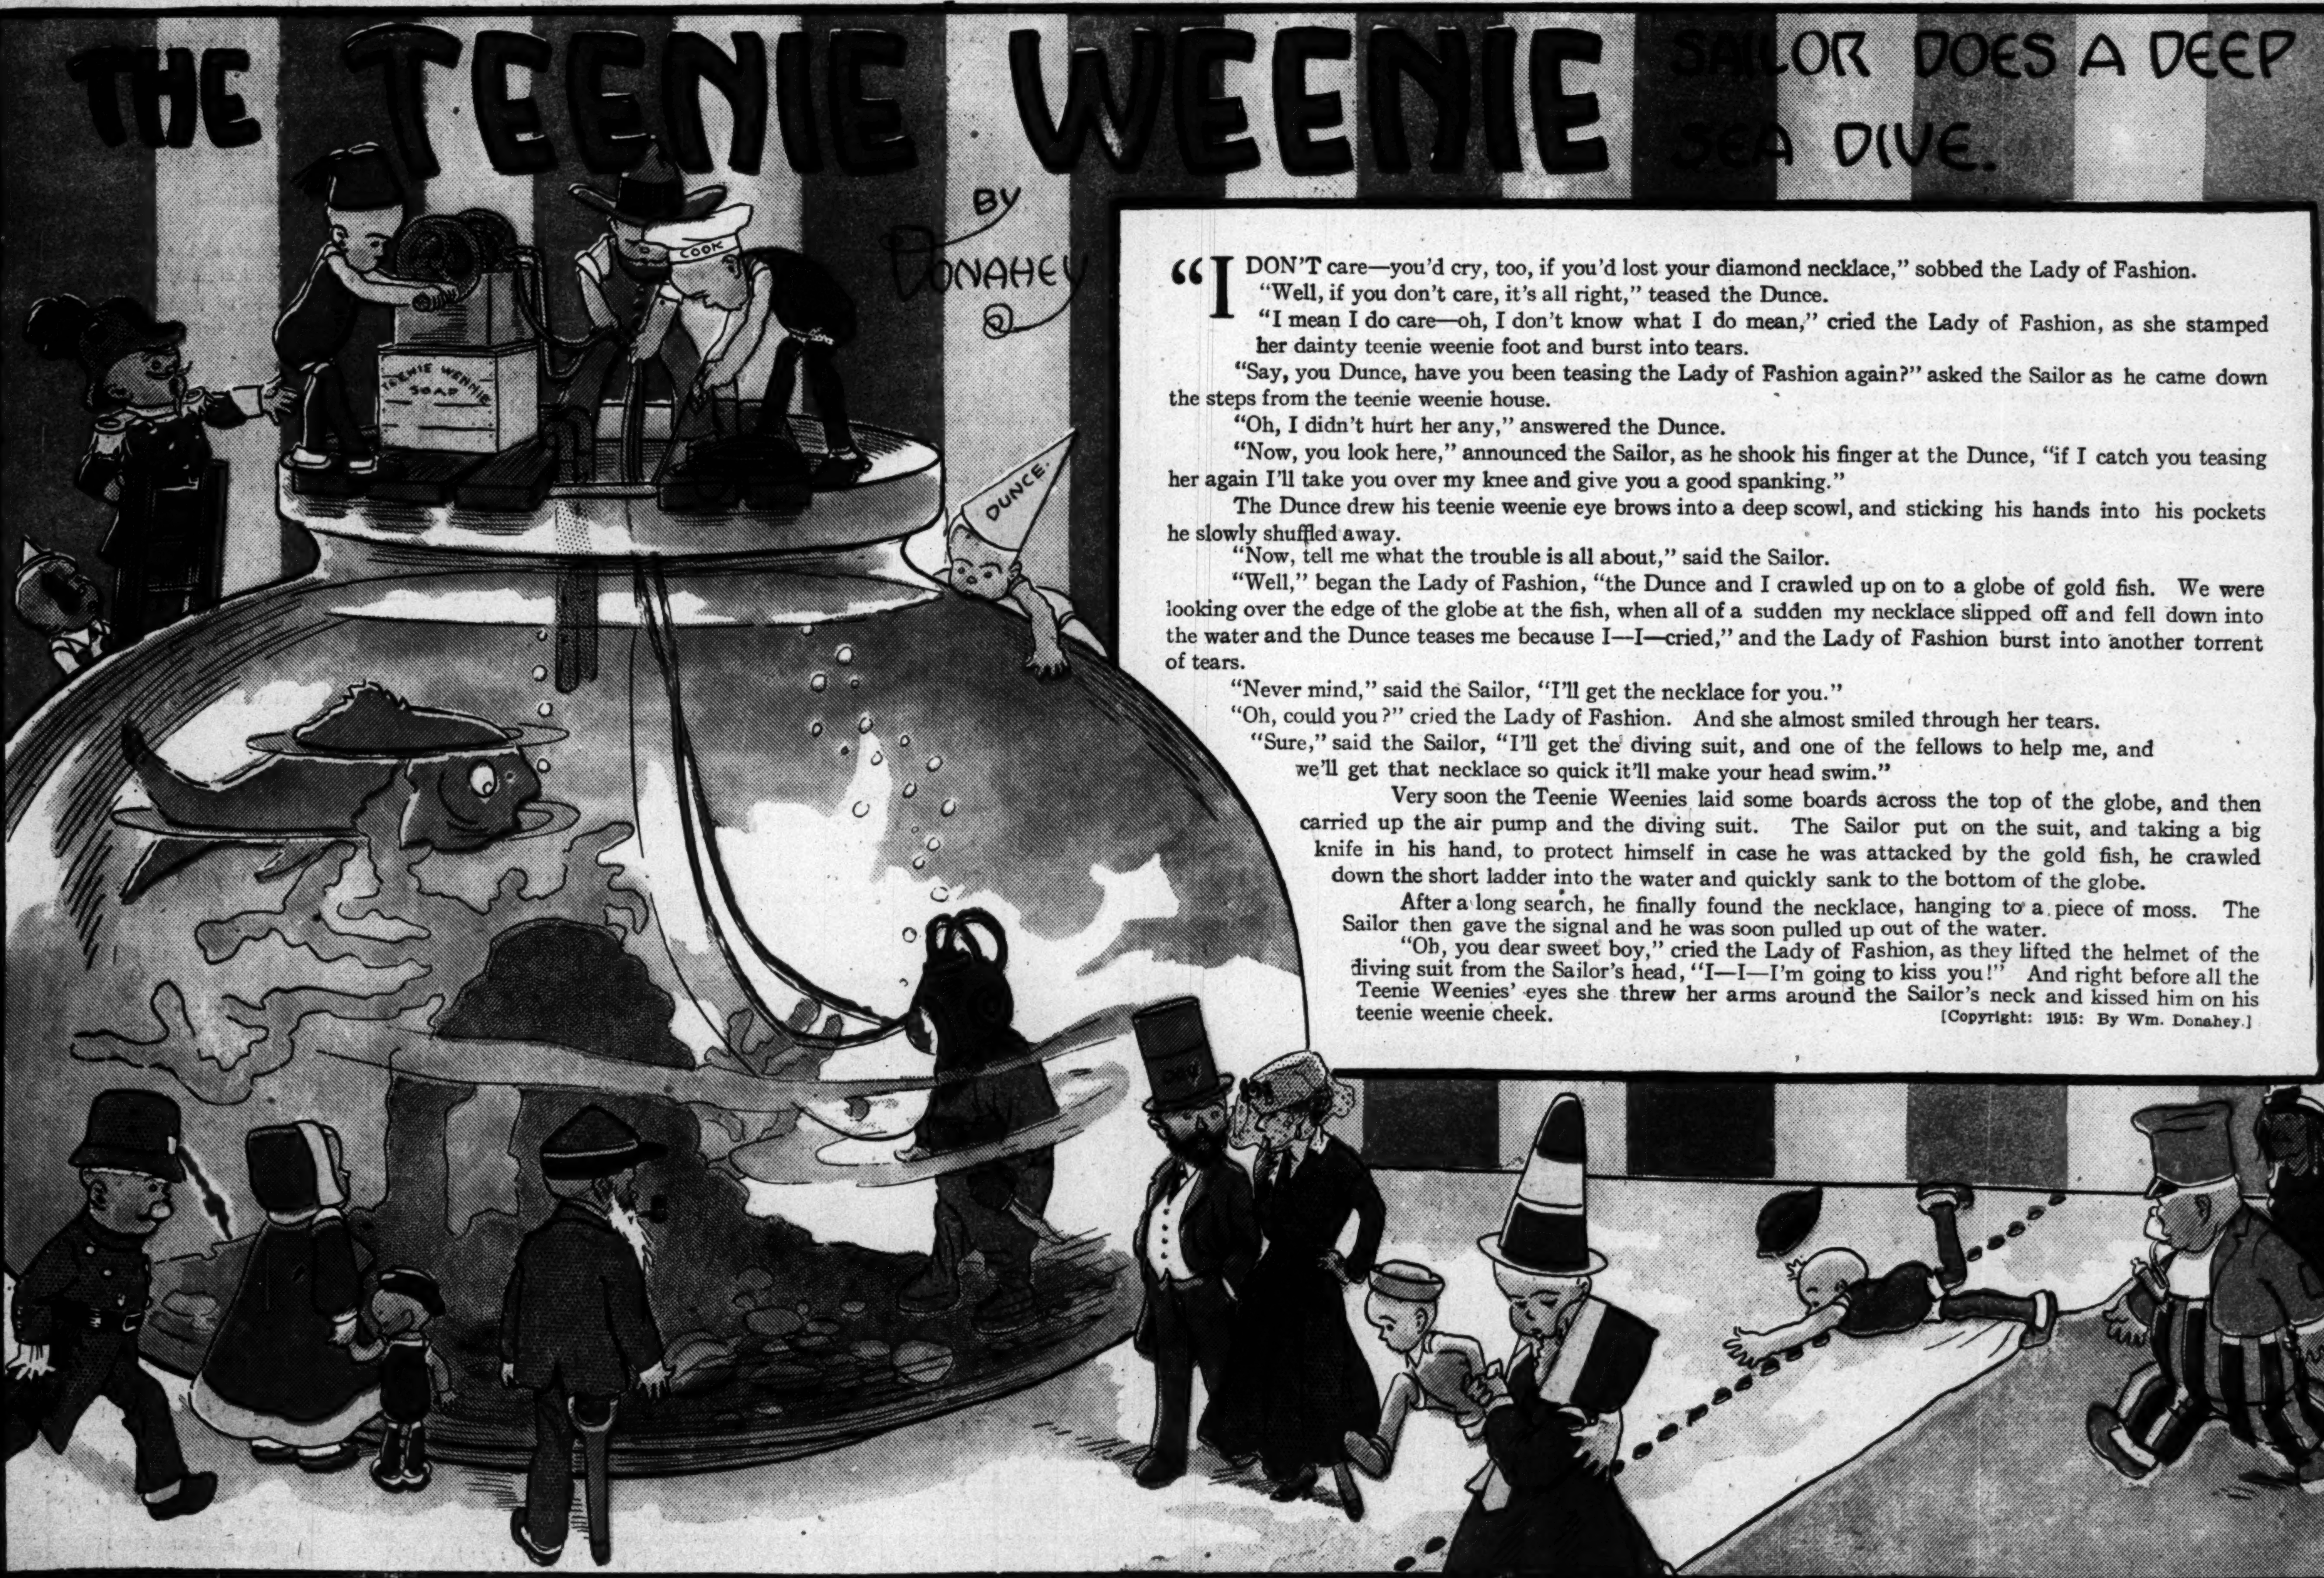
"I was presented to the king."

THE TEENIE WEENIE SAILOR DOES A DEEP SEA DIVE.

BY DONAHEY



"I DON'T care—you'd cry, too, if you'd lost your diamond necklace," sobbed the Lady of Fashion.

"Well, if you don't care, it's all right," teased the Dunce.

"I mean I do care—oh, I don't know what I do mean," cried the Lady of Fashion, as she stamped her dainty teenie weenie foot and burst into tears.

"Say, you Dunce, have you been teasing the Lady of Fashion again?" asked the Sailor as he came down the steps from the teenie weenie house.

"Oh, I didn't hurt her any," answered the Dunce.

"Now, you look here," announced the Sailor, as he shook his finger at the Dunce, "if I catch you teasing her again I'll take you over my knee and give you a good spanking."

The Dunce drew his teenie weenie eye brows into a deep scowl, and sticking his hands into his pockets he slowly shuffled away.

"Now, tell me what the trouble is all about," said the Sailor.

"Well," began the Lady of Fashion, "the Dunce and I crawled up on to a globe of gold fish. We were looking over the edge of the globe at the fish, when all of a sudden my necklace slipped off and fell down into the water and the Dunce teases me because I—I—cried," and the Lady of Fashion burst into another torrent of tears.

"Never mind," said the Sailor, "I'll get the necklace for you."

"Oh, could you?" cried the Lady of Fashion. And she almost smiled through her tears.

"Sure," said the Sailor, "I'll get the diving suit, and one of the fellows to help me, and we'll get that necklace so quick it'll make your head swim."

Very soon the Teenie Weenies laid some boards across the top of the globe, and then carried up the air pump and the diving suit. The Sailor put on the suit, and taking a big knife in his hand, to protect himself in case he was attacked by the gold fish, he crawled down the short ladder into the water and quickly sank to the bottom of the globe.

After a long search, he finally found the necklace, hanging to a piece of moss. The Sailor then gave the signal and he was soon pulled up out of the water.

"Oh, you dear sweet boy," cried the Lady of Fashion, as they lifted the helmet of the diving suit from the Sailor's head, "I—I—I'm going to kiss you!" And right before all the Teenie Weenies' eyes she threw her arms around the Sailor's neck and kissed him on his teenie weenie cheek.

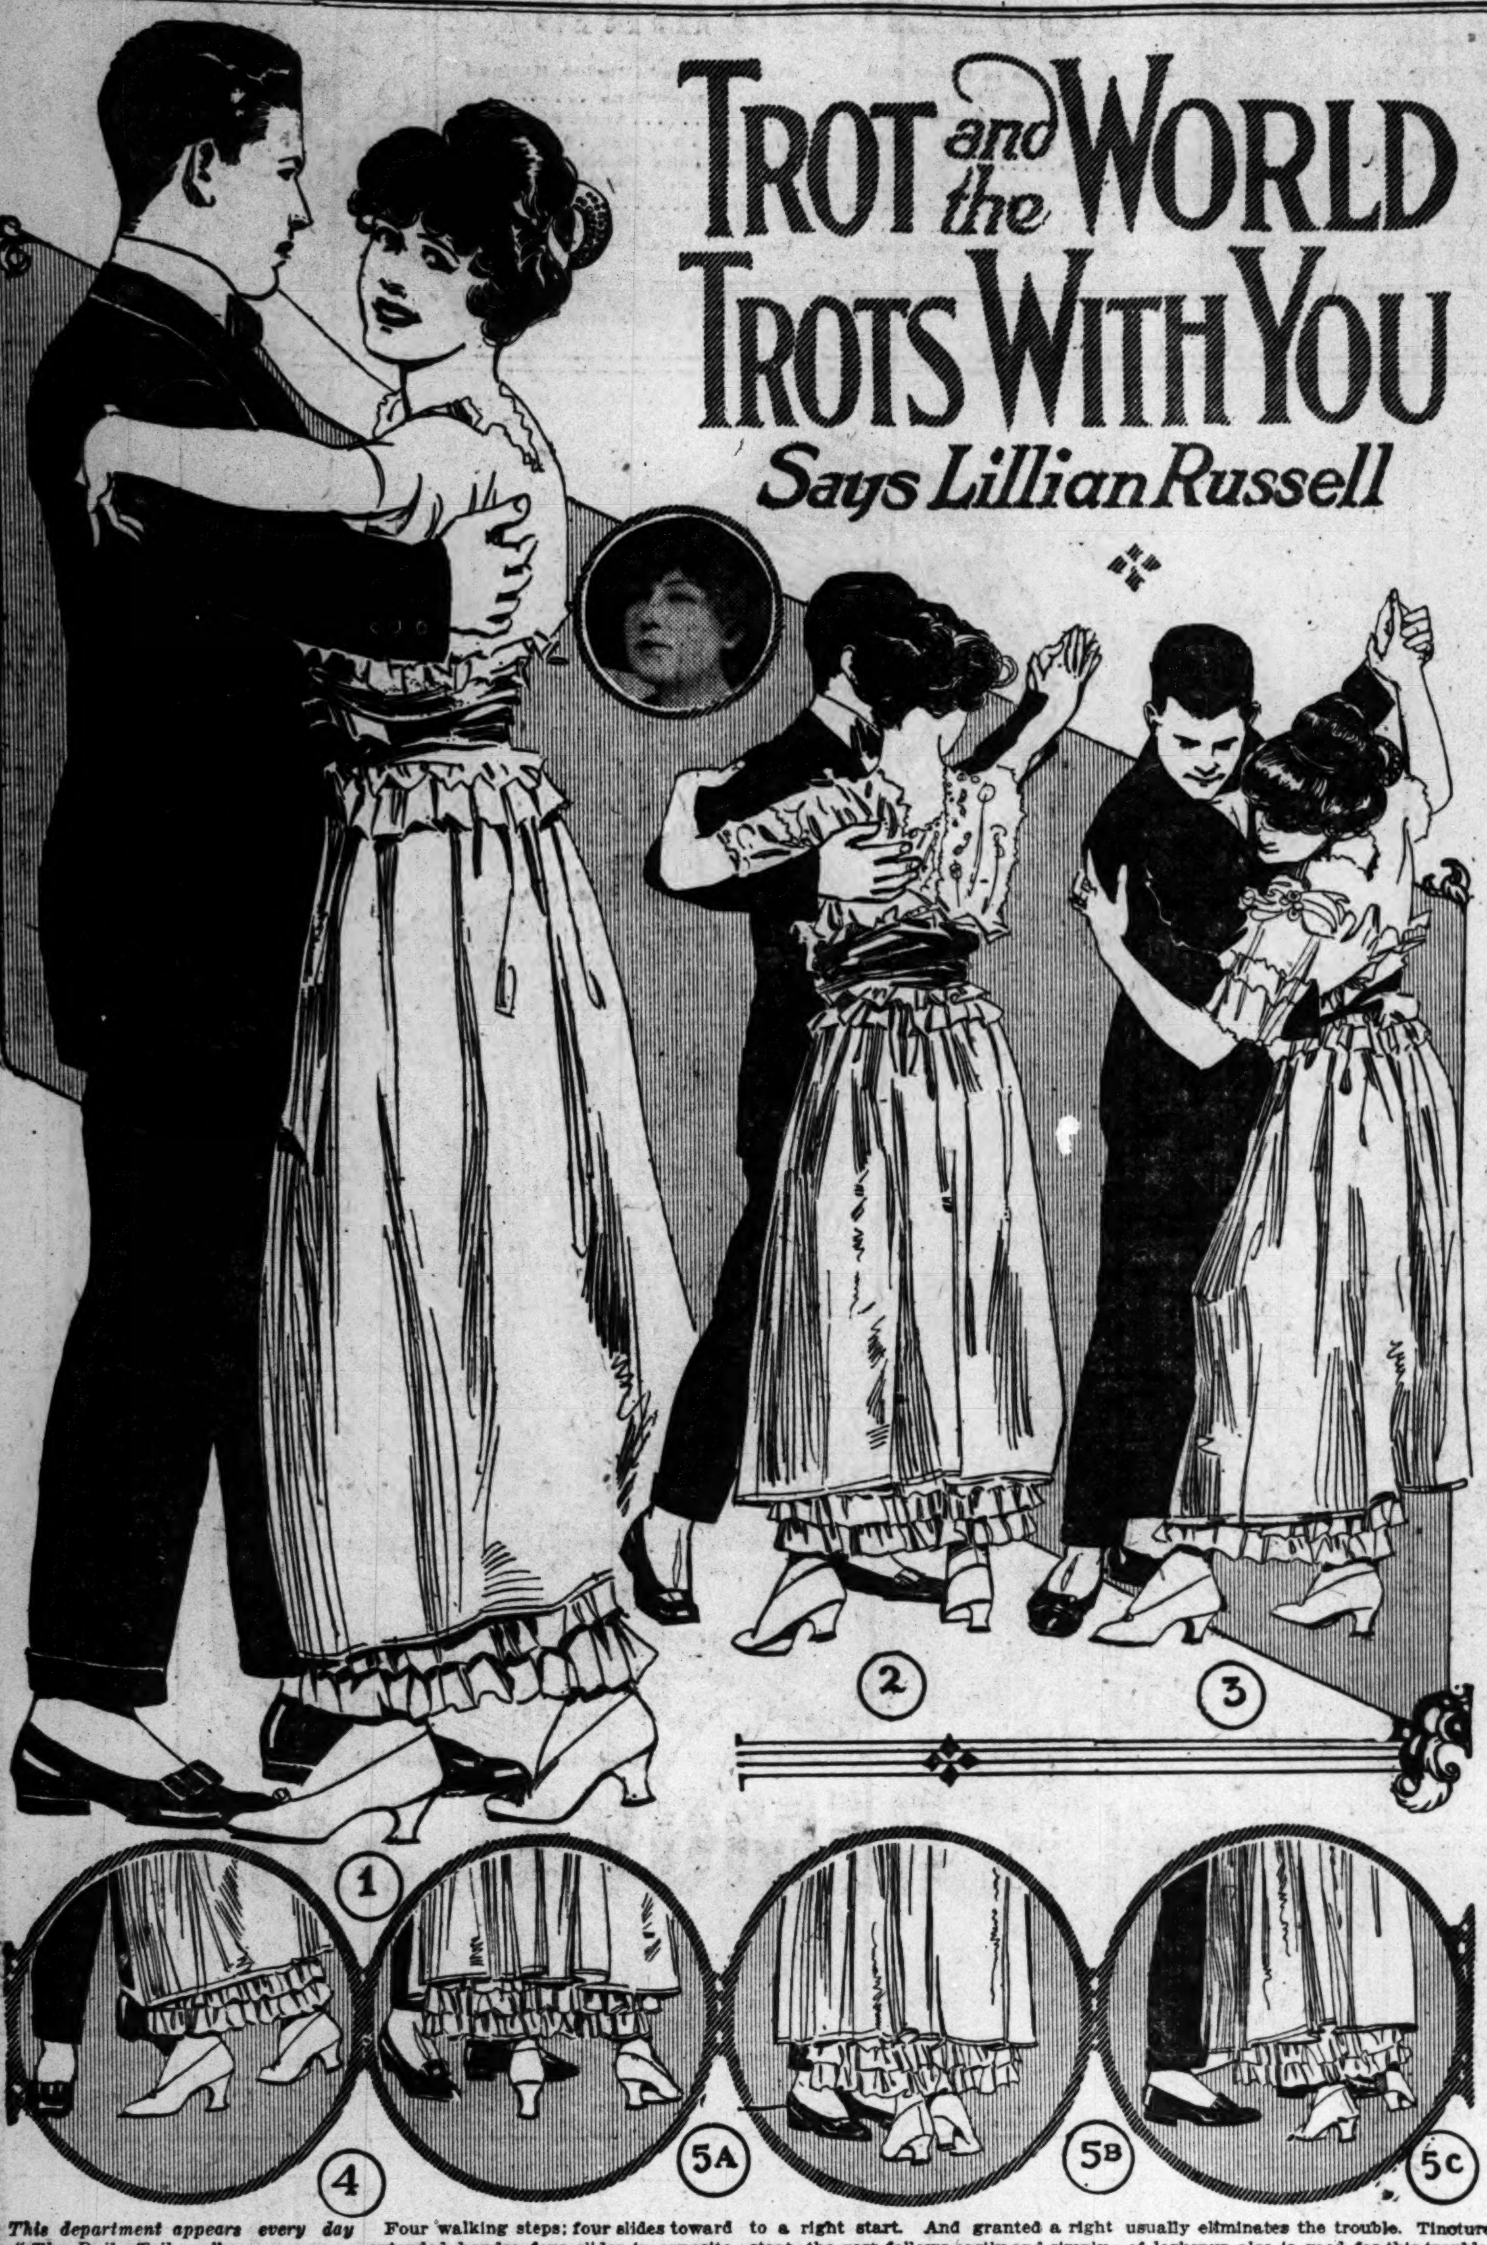
TROT and the WORLD TROTS WITH YOU

Says Lillian Russell



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

[Copyright: 1915: By Lillian Russell.]

IF you want life to be "just one good time after another"—trot! It's easy, and it's heaps of fun! It's fun for everybody. It isn't strenuous, nor is it tame. Sweet Sixteen and her best beau have no monopoly on the trot. No, indeed! Nor have Sweet Sixteen's mother and her best beau (Sweet Sixteen's father) any right to claim the trot for their very own. For Sweet Sixteen's grandmother and her best beau can do it quite as well and get quite as much fun out of it and add quite as much fun to life by fox-trotting as their grandchild does.

It isn't half as hectic as it sounds! At least as it is being danced by the best dancers today. But it has enough "zip" to revive hope and youth in the most faded cheek and heart! The fox trot music is so exhilarating it would put the trot into wooden legs!

Come on and try it now! Put a fox trot record on your talking machine and with your best beau repeat this simple little formula until you have it tucked tightly in your memory box; then you can give your entire attention to your feet:

Four walking steps; four slides toward extended hands; four slides in opposite direction; four walking steps again; then four maxixe turns. Don't let the maxixe turns frighten you a bit! Because they are nothing more nor less than our good old fashioned two-step turns. So, you see, this is about as easy a muscle developing and joy giving dance as can be invented!

A little don't or two fits right in here in this dancing lesson. The first is based on the fact that exaggerated waves of the shoulders and hips are taboo—strictly taboo—in this year's dancing. The second don't applies to the manner of grabbing your girl partner as if some dark and blood thirsty pirate were ready to spring out from a dark corner of the ballroom and wrest her from you and carry her off to a prison to languish and await a fabulous ransom! At quite a nice, danceable arm's length is the correct way to hold your partner, so that freedom of body and feet allows for a happy indulgence in the rhythm of the music.

Now, then, attention! Get into position for the first step of the four walking steps, as in figure 1. The lady starts back with her right foot, the man forward with his left. This is the "combination" to a right start. And granted a right start, the rest follows easily and simply. Walk four steps in time with the music and then you're ready to do the second figure of the fox trot.

This second movement is simply four slides toward the extended hands, as in figure 2. To do this slide the woman starts sidewise with her right foot, and the man with his left, each dragging the other foot along to catch up with the foot that started the "slide." This is done four times toward the extended hand. Then, as in figure 3, the same step is done four times in the opposite direction. Then you take four more walking steps, as in figure 4. This is exactly the same step as you started out with in figure 1 with the woman back on her right foot and the man forward on his left.

Now for the two-step turn! We'll call it that instead of calling it the maxixe turn. For maxixe has a frightening sort of effect. And the step itself is so easy it wouldn't be fair to label it with any disconcerting name. You probably know how to do the old fashioned two-step. That's really what this figure is, as you can see in A B C of figure 5. The woman starts out with her right foot again and the man with his left. Then, as in B of figure 5, both feet are brought together, and as in C of figure 5, the girl's right and man's left are shot forward on the third beat of the two-step glide. Four of these two-step glides are taken, in which a complete turn is made, and you are brought back in position to start your walking step again.

Do you think that complicated or hard? Of course it isn't! And doesn't it make you feel "snappy"? Doesn't it make you chuckle to yourself when you think you had just about admitted you were "getting on" and you'd better settle down and be old and serious and dignified? Doesn't it make you ask "What's the use of not keeping young" when it is so easily done and you realize that the young things of life make living worth the while?

Answers to Inquiries.

L. E. R.: You must remember that worry is a question of nerves and that a low state of nerves has its root more often than not in a poor state of health. It is an excellent thing to keep busily employed and then you will have no time for brooding. On the other hand, it is equally necessary that you should have a corresponding amount of rest and recreation. Plenty of fresh air is absolutely essential and you will be doing your duty more truly if you insist upon taking an hour's walk each day instead of devoting so much time to household duties, however necessary they may seem.

SCHOOL TEACHER: I don't see why you should hesitate to write me. It is nothing to be ashamed of. I am really surprised that you have not been afflicted long ere this when you have so many little heads close to you all the time. Hot vinegar is a simple remedy for removing vermin from the head. Immerse the head in vinegar just as hot as you can stand for about five or ten minutes, then shampoo the hair thoroughly with a good shampoo. One treatment usually eliminates the trouble. Tincture of larkspur also is good for this trouble. You can obtain this article at any drug store, with directions for using.

* *

E. S. S.: I think it is much better for you to use kid curlers for waving the hair than the curling iron, as the iron in time is likely to make the hair split and become coarse.

SYLVIA: You will have to correct your round shoulders, my dear, if you want to wear the modish dresses. This will help you if you will practice daily: Stand erect, weight on the ball of the foot, with hands on your chest, fingers pointing horizontally toward each other, elbows on a level with the shoulders. With the eyes raised toward the ceiling, slowly bend the body forward at the hips, keeping the eyes fixed on the point that you have chosen. Do not let the elbows sag. Practice deep breathing constantly. If you will send me a stamped addressed envelope I shall be happy to send you instructions for deep breathing.

GERTRUDE: A great deal of injury is done the teeth by the natural acid in the mouth. The acid acts quickly upon the enamel, causing cavities and ofttimes making the teeth yellow. To prevent any tendency to acidity a mouthful of milk of magnesia should be taken every night before retiring, allowing it to penetrate into every nook and cranny of the mouth. It is necessary for some persons to use powder or paste for the teeth, while others, again, cannot use it at all. This is an excellent formula for a tooth paste: Calcium carbonate precipitate, thirty parts; magnesium carbonate, ten parts; orris root, fifteen parts, and oil of peppermint, two-fifths of a part.

RUTH: Liver spots come from an inactive liver. A teaspoonful of the best olive oil taken every morning half an hour before breakfast and the same quantity half an hour after the latest meal of the day will be found effective. In a few months this will excite your liver to proper action, clear your skin, and otherwise improve your health. The unsweetened juice of a lemon in a glass of water every morning before breakfast is also beneficial for this purpose. Drink plenty of water between meals. Avoid hot bread, rich pastries, and sauces. Eat plenty of fruits and vegetables that do not contain much starch. Walk at least three miles a day and take deep breathing exercises night and morning.

* *

H. B.: The little scars left from the pimples will go away in time if you will carefully massage the face each night with a good skin food. Why don't you try the old fashioned remedy of sulphur and molasses to purify your blood? It is probably the impurities in your blood that cause your face to break out. Take a tablespoonful of sulphur and molasses in the morning before breakfast and the same amount after the latest meal. Take for three days, then omit for three days, and repeat. Get plenty of exercise in the fresh air and be careful of your diet. Do not eat rich and spicy foods, avoid pastries and sweets. Drink plenty of water between meals.

How I Reduced My Flesh.

This department appears every other day in "The Daily Tribune."

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Reduced My Flesh." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Lillian Russell, "Sunday Tribune."

Played the National Game.

For several months I gained weight rapidly, so rapidly, in fact, that I started to worry about it. My husband is fond of baseball, and last summer he induced two other girls and myself to try our hand at the game. We liked it so much that we played every evening until dark. During the three months that the national game served as my recreation I lost twelve pounds. MRS. H. T.

Lighter from High Kicking.

I discarded my cumbersome clothes for a bathing suit a while each day, and set the graphophone going. I didn't fox trot or tango, neither was there any hesitation about it. I would kick as high and as many times in succession as my strength would permit, and by the time I had to change a needle or wind up the machine I was well nigh exhausted. When I began to breathe like a horse with heaves I'd let up. I feel a great deal better now than I did when I began. It produced the result for which I was striving. I weighed 182 pounds then; I now weigh 168; however, I am still doing the terpsichorean act. A. H. J.

Worked Both Ways.

Like most young housewives, I was anxious to be a success in my many new duties, and as my husband had boarded for years, I put extra thought and time on the culinary department, with the result that I lost twenty pounds, while my husband gained sixty-five. F. M. Z.

What Happened to Brother?

I reduced my weight by dancing. Each day after dinner, instead of sitting down and reading a magazine (my usual custom), I danced with my brother a few of the modern steps, mostly the twirl and the lame duck. I did this for nearly two months, devoting a half hour a day to "lame ducking," etc. As a consequence I reduced my weight from 156 to 125 pounds. AGNES.

With Feet Pawing the Air.

I reduced from 200 to 180 simply by exercise—no dieting. Every night before retiring I would lie flat on my back and raise first one leg and then the other straight up. After doing this about fifteen times I would raise both legs and pedal as a bicyclist or as acrobats do in a show to keep a ball spinning on their feet. C. W. R.

Bright Sayings of the Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The stories may be sent in either by children or their parents. The only condition is the story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

Little Genevieve gets up earlier than her parents want her to. On this particular morning, doll in arms, she tiptoed into her grandmother's room. Grandmother feigned sleep. The little one tried to waken her and, failing, she struck her with her doll. Grandmother put her hands over her face and pretended to cry. Genevieve looked pained for a moment, then looked down at dolly and said: "Dolly, I'se sorry I hit you wif granmuvver." MRS. GLENN H. DAILY, Route 4, Bristol, Ind.

The children's grandmother was visiting us, and was much concerned to see what a hard cold 11 year old Edward had. "Why don't you rub your chest with cold water, dear, every morning?" asked grandmother, "it would help to harden you." Edward looked puzzled. "Yes," he said "but wouldn't it be funny, grandma "to have only one spot clean all the time?"

Catherine was playing in the hall with Edward, an older brother, when Catherine was accidentally hurt. She started crying, and Edward told her if she would stop he would buy her a china Easter egg. A while later her papa said, "What were you crying for, Catherine?" She thought a minute, jumped down from his lap, and said, "Wait till I go see Edward." E. E. W.

Winifred was crying rather loudly while her mother was brushing a mass of unusually tangled brown curls. When suddenly she stopped crying and said in a pleasant and natural tone of voice: "Mamma, will you please give me a drink? It makes me so thirsty to cry." E. M.

It was raining and Mildred was feeling badly because she could not go out of doors to play. She looked out of the window and saw the dog sitting out in the rain. She said: "I wish I had been born a dog."

A little girl had a nickle to ride home on the street car. Her fare should have been 3 cents and the conductor did not give her the 2 cents change. Looking up at him she said: "Am I a nickle's worth."

My little nephew was watching me slice apples one day, and kept asking for pieces and eating them as fast as he could. So I said, "Bobbie, you can't have another piece for five minutes, so eat that slowly." When I gave him the next piece I told him again he could have no more for another five minutes. When he finished eating the second piece he said, "Say, five minute lady, when can I have another piece?" L. W. E.

My young nephew, when asked what a "miracle" was, replied: "It is something that happens that couldn't!"

Louis had been spending the day with Uncle Ed and Aunt Edith. Uncle Ed is a great tease and Louis had spent a rather strenuous day. When at last in the carriage and well on the way toward home Louis gave a deep sigh and voiced his relief in this wise: "O, mamma, I'm so tired to get home where Uncle Ed ain't." M. E. W.

Bernard was 5 years old. He had sorely tried his mother one day, who, perhaps, permitted some petulant expressions to escape her. Little Bernard caught hold of his mother's dress, and in his most sympathizing tones asked: "Mother is oo sorry that the angels brought me?" MRS. J. S. GILHAM, Red Cloud, Neb.

Sarah was requested by her mother to go through a dark hall and objected because she was afraid of the dark. Her mother, to encourage her, said: "O, Sarah, I wouldn't be afraid of dark." Sarah replied: "Well, I wouldn't either if I knew what was in it." M. G. W.

Dorothy had lived in the city but a short while when the woman next door came to call on her mother. The neighbor wore English walking shoes, and after eyeing her feet critically for some time Dorothy finally mustered up courage to ask sympathetically: "Does you have to wear your papa's shoes?" E. L. K. M.

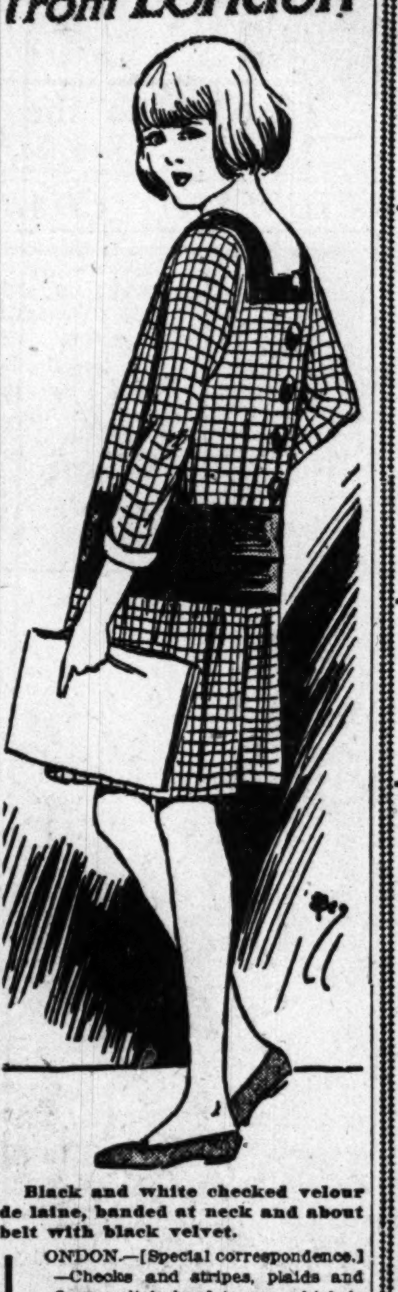
One day last summer our neighbor's little boy was visiting us, and while standing at the open window he saw a little girl out in front. He said hello to her, but she evidently was too embarrassed to reply. He said hello again; still no answer. This kept up for some time, his voice becoming a little louder each time. He finally gave it up as hopeless, and, turning to me, said, "She don't hear me." F. M.

Fashions from London



Black and white checked velour de laine, banded at neck and about belt with black velvet.

LONDON.—[Special correspondence.]—Checks and stripes, plaids and figures, it is hard to say which is the most popular. They are all making a big appeal, and in the realm of the child's dress they are unusually well liked and sure of approval.

The frock in the illustration shown today embodies one of the newest fashion tendencies for the grownups, and that is the rather high line of the neck in the front and the dip down in the back. The back buttoning, too, is indicative of the recent style trend in that direction, though the protest made against it is so vigorous on the part of the majority of women that there is some doubt whether or not it establishes itself to any extent in the fashion field this spring and summer.

The wide velvet girdle on this plaid velour de laine dress is caught in the front with velvet covered buttons the same as fasten it in the back.

Ginghams in stripes and plaids are to be much worn by the younger set this coming season, and the low dropped belt line continues in favor for the youthful person. Short waists, of course, are much newer, but they have yet to drive the moyen age effects out of the running as far as children are concerned.

Doris Blake Says:

"The birthstone for March is the Bloodstone or Jasper; the flower for March the Violet."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

> Have you a perplexing love affair? Do you need the advice of a sympathetic, capable woman? Write to Doris Blake, care "Chicago Tribune." Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

PERSONS born between Feb. 20 and March 21 come under the sign of Pisces. They are naturally inclined to question everything and always want to know the reason for things. They are always on the alert in a mild and quiet way to learn whatever they can of interest. They are naturally thoughtful, industrious, sensible, and persevering. They are logical and positive in their opinions, and while they are kind hearted, affable, and apparently submissive and yielding, they are really determined in the accomplishment of their plans, which are always the result of long and careful deliberation.

In the fulfillment of a duty or a promise they are equally determined and faithful. Being logical, they always exact a reason for everything, and can always give reasons for their own actions in any matter. On account of this trait they are skeptical in accepting religious beliefs, and have many materialistic tendencies to overcome. They are eager to acquire knowledge, generally following the newspaper and magazines of the day closely. If they are possessed of intellectual ability they frequently become experts on those subjects to which they turn their attention. If, however, circumstances have cast their lot in a low channel they are apt to be gross and materialistic in their thoughts and habits, and lack intellectual aspirations. They have strong ideas of justice. They are conscientious, anxious to earn what they possess, and they dread to be dependent upon others. They are liable to self-censure and despondency.

The men of this sign have good manufacturing ability and belong to the manufacturing sphere of life. They like to study out little problems in mechanics and engineering and have an inventive turn of mind.

The women are sympathetic and philanthropic, anxious about providing for the future, and at times even penurious. They are nervous and exacting in all things, and rather inclined to be severe and faultfinding in business and domestic life. They are usually distinguished by their pale complexions fine and sensitive skin, and full round forehead. They are sensitive to surroundings and to changes in tthe weather.

Sympathetic friends are those born between June 22 and July 22, and between Oct. 24 and Nov. 22.

Persons born between March 22 and 31 come under the sign of Aries. They are earnest and sincere in all things, have active brains, are full of life and activity, and are extremely fond of music and dancing. They are intensely individual and usually impress their personality on all those with whom they come in contact. Since they have active and piercing intellects and are original and aggressive thinkers, they are instructive conversationalists. They are interested in literature and art, have strong and original ideas of right and wrong, and, being independent, are not easily deterred by the opposition of others. They are apparently stubborn, as they can be influenced through their reasoning faculties only. They love order and harmony and are much annoyed by inharmonious surroundings; they cannot work well under others. They must thoroughly understand the result to be attained and left to accomplish things according to their own methods. They are executive and aspiring.

Sympathetic friends are those born between July 23 and Aug. 23, and between Nov. 23 and Dec. 22.

Should They Have Dates?

"Dear Miss Blake: Should an engaged boy and girl have dates with other friends? If not, why not? We are young, but want to do the right and best thing. Our ages are 20 and 17. Well, I guess this is one of those disgusting letters finished on the last line. CHARLES.

Charles, your letter is anything but disgusting. How silly of you to say such a thing! Your problem is one that frequently arises with engaged couples. And it is serious in that, often, broken engagements result from being ill advised on this question. The best way to arrive at a decision in this matter is to put yourself in the other's place and decide how you would feel if the one to whom you are engaged would bestow, or accept, attentions from a third person. Of course, if it is mutually agreeable to accept attentions from others, it is perhaps all right to do so, although a feeling of indifference to each other oftentimes grows from this. In the long run it is a matter for the engaged couple to decide themselves. Left to themselves to decide, the average engaged couple will not approve of dates with other friends.

Ask Her to Let You Call.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going to entertainments and lectures with a girl acquaintance for about two months. We often get back to where she lives by 8 or 8:30 p. m., but she has never asked me in to spend the evening. She always seems glad to be with me and I enjoy her company, but it seems as if we have very little opportunity for conversation just going to and from entertainments. I am sure this young lady could extend the privilege of a call. So far as I know she has never kept company with any one before, and I think perhaps she feels a little backward about suggesting it. Can you suggest how I might in any way make the task easier? NOAH B."

If you think it is bashfulness that causes the girl to dismiss you at the door, which in all probability it is, why don't you ask her next time if you may not come in and spend the evening with her? I don't believe she will object, since she finds your company agreeable enough for every other occasion. She probably has an idea that it may not be the proper thing to do. But so long as you arrive home before 9 there is no reason why you could not spend an hour or so more with her.

Would You Stick to Your Husband if He Were Sent to Prison?

This letter was written by a woman whose husband was in prison at the time. It is submitted by him with a note in which he says: "I call it a cry of a starved soul. I have been married to this noble little woman nine years, six of which I have spent in prison. I am not worthy of such love, but I pray God daily that he may help me to live an honest life that I may make her happy the rest of her days."

"My Dearest Husband: You can never realize, dear, how I felt this afternoon when you told me of the great chance you have now to get out. Ah, man, how I will make you forget all you have suffered down there. Yes, my love—for I do love you, Bunny—I know it now. I have often in former years wondered if there was such a thing as love, and, if there was, what it was like. I know now there is, and sometimes I feel it so intensely it seems as if my whole body and soul were afire. I dream at night that your arms are around me and your lips on mine. I awake trembling with the great delight of it all, then when I realize it is only a dream I call to you again and again with my mind, even my lips, yes, with my very soul, begging you to come back to me.

"I wonder, my darling, if your heart ever answers those frantic calls? If I should die tonight, dear, I would go happy, thanking God for that most glorious gift I had on earth—the love which soothes and comforts me and yet continually drives me to greater efforts. If only there was some way I could show you, prove to you how passionately I love you, my man, my husband, for in the sight of heaven, Bunny, you are my husband, very true and only husband. Ours was the marriage of hearts and souls, the most beautiful wedding in the eternal kingdom. The minister was the god of love and the flutter of angel wings of joy was our wedding.

"I would willingly give my life for you, and sometimes when I go out there and see the cruel bars which separate us I feel that I could tear you from those men by main force, crying that you are mine, all mine, and they shall not keep us apart.

"There, Bunny, it is over. The great, passionate wave of glory has passed on, leaving me weak, trembling, and sobbing. I do not seem to know what I have written; I cannot read it. I only do know I want you, my husband, and you must be good to me, dear, when you come to me again, for I will not stay long. The immense power of my love is too strong for my weak body. It is eating my heart out, burning me up with a glorious torture. It is torture and yet it is grand. It overpowers me. I am afraid of it and yet it is my blessing.

"I shall go insane, dear, if you do not come to me soon. My body and soul cannot stand the strain much longer. I cannot come to see you often again, for each time it becomes harder to force myself to sit still and talk quietly when I am longing to throw myself in your arms, to caress you and have those caresses returned; to scream aloud to the whole world, 'I love you, I love you, I love you!'

"Bunny, my darling Bunny, don't laugh at this time, please. It is the cry from a tortured soul and it would not be stilled. Perhaps I am silly to write so, but I want you to know. If the end should come to me sooner than to you and suddenly you will understand how I love you, won't you, Bunny? You won't think me foolish when I long for you night and day, will you? When I was sitting there today beside you, with your arm around me, I wanted, O, I longed so, to put my arms around your neck and kiss you again and again. I was intoxicated with your presence and could have screamed with the awful torture of self-denial.

"I am closing now, my dearest one, and I can only say again, O, how intensely, how wildly I love you. May God forgive me if I do wrong and may he bless you in life and death.

"Your babe, your girl, your own wife."

How Must This Woman Have Felt Had This Letter Ever Reached Her?

The following letter was written by a deserted husband living in the house which had once been their happy home. He wrote many letters to her, posting them in an old hollow log in care of the woodland fairies. A great trouble fell upon him and he met his death by prussic acid. This letter was submitted by E. S., Morris, Ill.:

"Dearest Anne: Anne, the sun is sinking slowly behind old Top Notch and the gorgeous sunset lights up the flowers which have so long pined for your touch and care. Since you left me, darling, I have never dared go near it. Every upturned flower's face is stamped with the image of that loved face that looked up at me so confidently long ago.

"Do you remember it, Annie? As now, the sun was sinking behind old Top Notch, and we stood laughing among the flowers. We were happy, darling, until a snake crept to our hearth for warmth. Do you remember how we took him in and nursed and cared for him during his long illness. Then came the day when the sun went out at noonday, when the birds stopped singing and the flowers ceased to bloom.

"O, Annie, how could you do it? Have you never sat before the fire and thought of me? Have you never longed to return? O, Anne, are you happy? I hope and pray to God that you are, for something terrible has happened, Anne. Never again will the woodland fairies be intrusted with messages of love from a lover's pen. Anne, have I ever given you cause to distrust me? Have I ever, to your knowledge, been guilty of a low down, unmanly act? O, God, if I could only receive from your sweet lips the assurance of love and trust I would give myself up willingly. But it is too late now, darling, I hear them coming, they have already reached the bridge. O, God, forgive me if I have done wrong, but I tried to protect you, Anne.

"Good-by, sweetheart. Think of me and believe me innocent always. They are at the door, darling. Can you not hear their knocking? They will soon be here, dear, but they will find nothing. My soul is with God and my heart is with you. Can you not feel its warm throbbing in your palm? I am feeling sick and faint. It will all be over in a few minutes. Good-by, darling, good-by."

Novelties in Bedroom Arrangement

SO much that is freakish in furniture and the decorating of rooms has been displayed by some decorators of late that it is refreshing to find a room that depends for its charm on nothing outré. Such a room is the bedroom shown in the accompanying sketch. Its unpretentiousness, however, is not carried to the point of making it ordinary. Close analysis reveals a few interesting novelties of arrangement.

One noticeable feature is that above the mantel, instead of a mirror, a painting is inset under a molding corresponding with the molding at the wall top. The ceiling is a soft, clean white without center lights. At the side walls are electric candle lights in sconces. Electric candles in candlesticks are on the mantelpiece and the dressing table. Supplementing lights are supplied in table and bedside lamps.

The whole color scheme of the room is based upon the colors used in the inset painting. These are in delicate pastel shades. The flowers are peonies, bluebells, and daisies, and the chintz in the curtains and the big chair cover duplicate all of these colors, together slightly intensified. Other articles in the room repeat each color singly. The taffeta bed covers on the little white Louis XVI. beds are of light peony pink. The chair near the mantel is upholstered in pinkish corduroy. The smallest chair is done in bluebell blue, with a floral pattern delicately embroidered on it, while the carpet is a dull, warm tinted mauve, toned to the atmospheric background of the painting.

The arrangement of the bedside rug, which matches the large center rug in color, is noticeable. It is a long strip and extends under both beds, with the ends well protruding. This mode is later and more highly approved than the fashion of having several small bedside rugs.

The walls are plainly tinted a pearl gray, relieving the white enamel of the woodwork and the furniture frames. The beds are an excellent example of what modern manufacturers can do in copying old models.

As a general rule, bedrooms with side walls plainly tinted or papered with unfigured paper and then furnished with figured draperies, are more satisfying than rooms done in flowered or figured paper and hung with plain curtains. No matter how realistic plain fabrics may be, when hung they fall in folds. The fact of their falling in folds breaks up their realism and saves them from their own ugliness.

Instead of the same design maddeningly repeated, what is presented to the eye is a good spotting of color, variable and pleasing, stripped of unpleasant precision.

The fad at present is to have combination color rooms. Instead of a pink room or a blue room, for example, a jade and mauve room, an ivory and turquoise room, a pearl and old rose, a black and white, deep cream and violet gray, etc. The masses of color, in carpet, paint, draperies and paper are carried out in one or other of the two shades.

The style, material and size of bedroom furniture may be infinitely varied, but the essentials for all well furnished bedrooms remain the same. A comfortable bed, or twin beds, a pier glass, a long chair, couch or other day bed for daytime lounging, a glass topped dressing table, well lighted by night and day, with a bench or backless chair (not to interfere with the dressing of the hair) before it, a bedside stand for night light and telephone, and a desk for writing table neatly supplied. These are the necessary articles.

Little or no bric-à-bras is used, and few, if any, pictures. Framed photographs are being placed on mantel, writing desk, or dresser, but not hung on the walls. If pictures you will and must have hanging, adjust them flat against the wall. Let them not swing forward to accumulate an unhygienic coat of dust upon their backs.

Answers to Inquiries.

M, H. M.: As I understand it, you are to have four rooms for yourself, your husband, and girl of 9, and 7 months' old baby. The only arrangement that I can see for you to make is to use your dining room as a combination living room and dining room. If you do this, try to give the room more the appearance of a living room than a dining room. Keep the silver and table service in the kitchen pantry and during the day have a decorative cover for your dining room table. If the room is large enough to allow it, have a day bed in the dining room which your husband can use in case the baby is restless at night and you and the baby want to have the room to yourselves. The little girl must, of course, have her bedroom, which she will probably share with the baby most of the time. I suppose you will have twin beds in both rooms. Let these be of plain white enamel, which is less expensive and in much better taste than brass.

W. L. K.: It is difficult to form an idea of the arrangement of your rooms without a plan of some sort to go by. I do not understand where the library comes in. Could you not throw these rooms all into one big living room, instead of having reception hall, front parlor, back parlor, and library? I should prefer that to having French doors between the parlors. Furniture, of course, should conform to some sort of scale. If the rooms are large you could have several upholstered pieces. Chintz, in deep rich colorings would do for draperies, and the walls might be tinted a light warm ecru. All of this furniture, draping, etc., goes to make up the most comfortable type of informal living room. At the foot of your stairs on the little platform you speak of place a good oriental rug.

M. F. M.: I strongly advise your not having the plate rack in your dining room. Use the simple molding instead. Protect your plates and ornaments from dust and relieve your maid of extra work in their care by keeping them in a cabinet. In the plan that you send me there is no door between the dining room and the kitchen. It would be well worth while to cut one in. Yes, it would be advisable to make the dining in your plan into a kitchen and the kitchen into a dining room. Your idea of converting the parlor and small alcove room into one big living room is splendid. About the paneling, this work may be done by running narrow ribbon strips of paper—a few shades lighter or darker than the ground wall—in lines indicating panels. This is the way to make a measuring line to go by, in marking off your panels: Put a pin nail at all corners of the panels that you wish to indicate, and connect these with a string. Let this string be chalked and tied rather taut. Now pull the string towards you and let it snap back again towards the wall. You may then remove the string and you will have a perfectly straight chalked pasting line for your paper strips.

R. C.: It is hard to get away from that blue and white art glass window in your dining room. This must be considered in any color scheme that you may plan. Tan and blue harmonize well if both are slightly grayed. The tan of your side wall and the blue in the room will harmonize well. Blue you must have during the day time on account of the window, but you will find a pleasing contrast in the change of color scheme which will result at night, if you use a blue silk shade for your lamp. This will remain blue during the daytime and match the window, but at night, if you have it lined with yellow and the yellow light shining through it, it will be distinctly green. With this, use a table cover repeating the whole color scheme. Why curtain the leaded glass window at all? However, if it is necessary to curtain it, use soft white scrim, shirring it on a rod at top and bottom.

* *

A. J. S.: The decoration on the headboard of your bed would certainly have more of a chance to speak for itself if not outdone by the decorative motifs of a chintz cover. It would be better to use a simple white spread. Bedspreads have to be washed so much oftener than the chintz draperies in the room that the chintz spread soon looks faded and the white is always clean and pleasing, especially so on a white enameled bed. A large white linen cover, with just a strip of the chintz around it, would be attractive for a bed covering. This must be made wide enough to fall over the sideboards almost to the ground, and long enough to lay loosely up over the pillows. Bolsters are not as popular as they have been. The pillows are allowed to be indicated underneath the spread. If the pattern of the chintz adapts itself to the idea, cut out a motif of the chintz and appliqué it in the center of the spread. Your enthusiasm over your new home, it seems to me, is well warranted. Many magazines use photographs of home interiors, but I cannot say by what arrangement.

Before and After Marriage.

Treed for an Hour.

I was caught in the top of a large cherry tree. My husband-to-be quickly helped me down, saying he was so afraid I would fall before he reached me. The summer after our marriage I was caught in the same tree. I then received the loving words: "You may stay there till you know enough not to go so high." I stayed nearly an hour. M. D. S.

He Fell from a Pedestal.

I was certain that I was married to the only absolutely perfect mannered man in the world until one day about three months after our wedding I received a jolt. I had come home with what I thought was a swell and becoming new spring hat. That evening my husband took me out, and I was deeply hurt that he apparently took no notice of the new hat.

On the car as we were returning home he suddenly said, "Now, when you get a hat why don't you get one like that one?" I was astounded to see him pointing at an atrocious looking red velvet hat trimmed in several different colored plumes and a variety of flowers, besides being several years "behind the times."

I said sharply, "Why, I wouldn't be caught dead with that thing on."

He said more sharply, "Well, that thing looks like —— that you've got on."

My idol was broken. I laid the hat away, and can't look at it even now without a sigh, because it was to blame for my discovering that my Lord Chesterfield was just an ordinary man. G. D.

Must Have Changed His Mind.

My realization that my husband was not a follower of Lord Chesterfield was not accompanied by any one tragic incident, but was rather the cumulative effect of many weary years of commonplace acts of selfishness. Before my marriage I was a stenographer and had white, pretty hands. One day, when leaving a friend's where we had dined, my prospective husband was buttoning my gloves and some remark was made about my hands: He said with ardor: "And I want her always to keep them like they are—so little and smooth and white."

In the fifteen years of married life that followed I often thought of that remark, but one thing in particular always made me think of it—when I used to carry a ton or so of coal ashes out of the basement in the spring—the accumulations of the winter, in back breaking loads heaped in an old rusty wash boiler. During those fifteen years I washed, ironed, scrubbed, took down screens, put up doors, mowed the lawn, painted the fence, split kindling, shoveled coal, took care of children, and kept boarders.

I have a keen sense of humor and sometimes when I thought of the tender words regarding my hands I laughed. The times when I didn't laugh were, as I said before, those beautiful sunny days in spring when I used to be a participant in the annual moving picture; me, the wash boiler, and the long months' accumulation of coal ashes—just because my husband was too indolent to carry them out day by day as they were made. D. C. D.

He's Over the "Soft Stuff."

My lover was much given to loving and soft words. Now we are married and when I ask him for a kiss he says, "Aw, go on. Haven't you got over that soft stuff yet?" M. L.

Out in the Rain.

Before our marriage I would have banked my life on the fact my husband was the most considerate and best man alive. Not now.

We had been married in June. Three weeks after we were visiting some friends in the afternoon and stayed for supper. We started home about 9:30 and came down a street where all the stores were closed. It began to rain and we stopped in a doorway.

"Never mind," I said, "we can get a car, it won't last long."

"Sure," he said, then feeling in his pockets he said: "Say, all the money I have is a nickel."

I was going to say I would return with an umbrella for him after I reached home, when he spoke up: "I have a bad throat, so I will take the car and come back for you."

He left me standing in a deserted street in an empty doorway at 10 o'clock at night and took the car. I waited an hour. He did not return, nor the rain let up. Then I started to walk home. When I reached home I found him sitting in an easy chair reading a book.

No, my husband is no Lord Chesterfield. H. C. C.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

> Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the page only.

ETIQUETTE differs in its outward manifestations in different countries and among people of different walks of life. In Europe the stranger makes the first call. In England and this country the resident makes the first call. In Europe the man lifts his hat to the woman before she bows to him. In this country and in England the woman bows first. The habit of using the knife as we use the fork is not utterly unknown among foreigners, while with us it is considered bad form. But it was not always so regarded here. You still see in out of the way places the old fashioned knife with the curiously enlarged and rounded end, so made to facilitate the eating of peas.

Some continentals do not consider it out of the way to use toothpicks at the table. They sometimes have chic little jeweled weapons to use in this way. Even a diamond trimmed toothpick would hardly make the custom acceptable in this country. But then some of our customs and manners probably shock foreigners quite as much.

But though it has many different rules and forms, the underlying motive of etiquette is pretty much the same everywhere. Its effort is to embellish, dignify, and make attractive human social intercourse. Also to simplify it and make it easy without removing those restrictions which make the difference between civilization and savagery. Therefore do not put too much weight on the small signs of etiquette, but never let go the large ideal of it. And of one thing be careful: Take your good manners home with you. You cannot afford to be negligent of or rude to the people with whom you live every day. Unfailing courtesy in the family circle is the best possible investment to secure peace and harmony.

L. A. G.: Yes, leave your knife and fork on your plate when you return it for a second helping. Place them neatly side by side, with the prongs of the fork turned down.

MAY: No, dear May, never offer to help a caller of the sterner sex on or off with his coat, unless he is quite old or quite feeble.

C. I.: In responding to such an invitation as you mention, it is more courteous to respond by a formal acceptance or regret rather than by a card with the word acceptance or regret written on it. Such a response should be worded in some such wise as the following: "Mrs. —— accepts with pleasure Mrs. ——'s very kind invitation for," etc, or "Mrs. —— regrets that, owing to a previous engagement, she is unable to accept Mrs. ——'s kind invitation for," etc. As to your second question, it is the gentleman who should ask to have the overlooked introduction carried out.

C. R.: If strangers, coming to town, bring you letters of introduction from a mutual friend you should first call on them and then show them some courtesy. If it is impossible for you, as you say, to entertain them at your own home and you can't afford to entertain them at a restaurant, then send some flowers or offer to show them some of the local sights or take them for a drive. The laws of hospitality demand some sacrifice of time, attention—and money, too, it must be confessed.

* *

K. E. W.: If you use the double card with Mr. and Mrs. engraved on it when calling on a married woman, leave just one and no single card of your husband. In making a first call on a married couple, however, leave your own card and two of your husband's, keeping your combination card for use in subsequent calls. Yes, an engagement announcement should be acknowledged. Send your card with or without a polite acknowledgment and greeting in a few words, such as "Congratulations and good wishes." In making an evening call a man waits until the maid tells him he will be received, when he removes his hat, coat and gloves in the hall before being ushered into the reception room. If the practice which you refer to—that of raising the playing cards to the mouth when coughing or clearing the throat at a card table, exists, your point is well taken. I trust that all those who read this department will be aroused to protest against such an insanitary habit. As to your postscript, you are also justified in your strictures on the thoughtless, selfish smoker who insists upon smoking at all times, on the street and even on the car, where he has to leave his wife alone in the car while he has his smoke on the platform. A man may smoke when taking a country walk with his wife or other member of his family, but in the city it is not courteous and does not look well.

ANXIOUS: When a man and woman have luncheon or dinner together in a hotel or restaurant, the customary course is for the man to ask what she would like or if she has any preferences. If she has any suggestions to make it is generally helpful to her escort, but he should do the ordering. If it is a matter of indifference to her what she has to eat she can say, "I leave it all to you to decide." Many men like this, as a man used to restaurants generally has decided opinions as to what he prefers to eat. If there are French names of dishes on the bill of fare, or names you don't understand, ask your friend or the waiter what they mean. Don't hesitate to do this, as it adds to your education in matters of the world. As far as selection goes, however, you are safer in choosing those dishes with familiar names, although it is a good plan to ask the waiter what are the specialties of the establishment.

MRS. J. F.: It sounds informal and cozy for the man of the house to wear a smoking jacket when there are invited guests present, but it isn't good form to do so. A dinner coat or tuxedo is just as comfortable and looks smarter. If a husband is introducing a man to his wife he should say to his friend, "I want to present you to my wife," and then, turning to her, say, "Mary," or "My dear, I want to introduce Mr. ——" or some such phrase. If he is introducing a woman to his wife he should say to the former, "May I present my wife?" A married woman should introduce her husband to either another woman or to a man. She can say, "I want you to know my husband." In the matter of introduction the supposedly less distinguished individual is always presented to the more distinguished person—the question of distinction being a matter of sex, age, and whether one is a resident or a visitor.

BETTY: If the bride wears a street costume she should also wear a hat and coat to complete it. Some fashionable and smart brides dress this way for their weddings—especially if either the bride or bridegroom has been married before or if neither is in the first youth. As to colors, light gray or tan is preferable to darker colors for a wedding suit. No attendant is customary at such a wedding, which is supposed to be a quiet, simple affair.

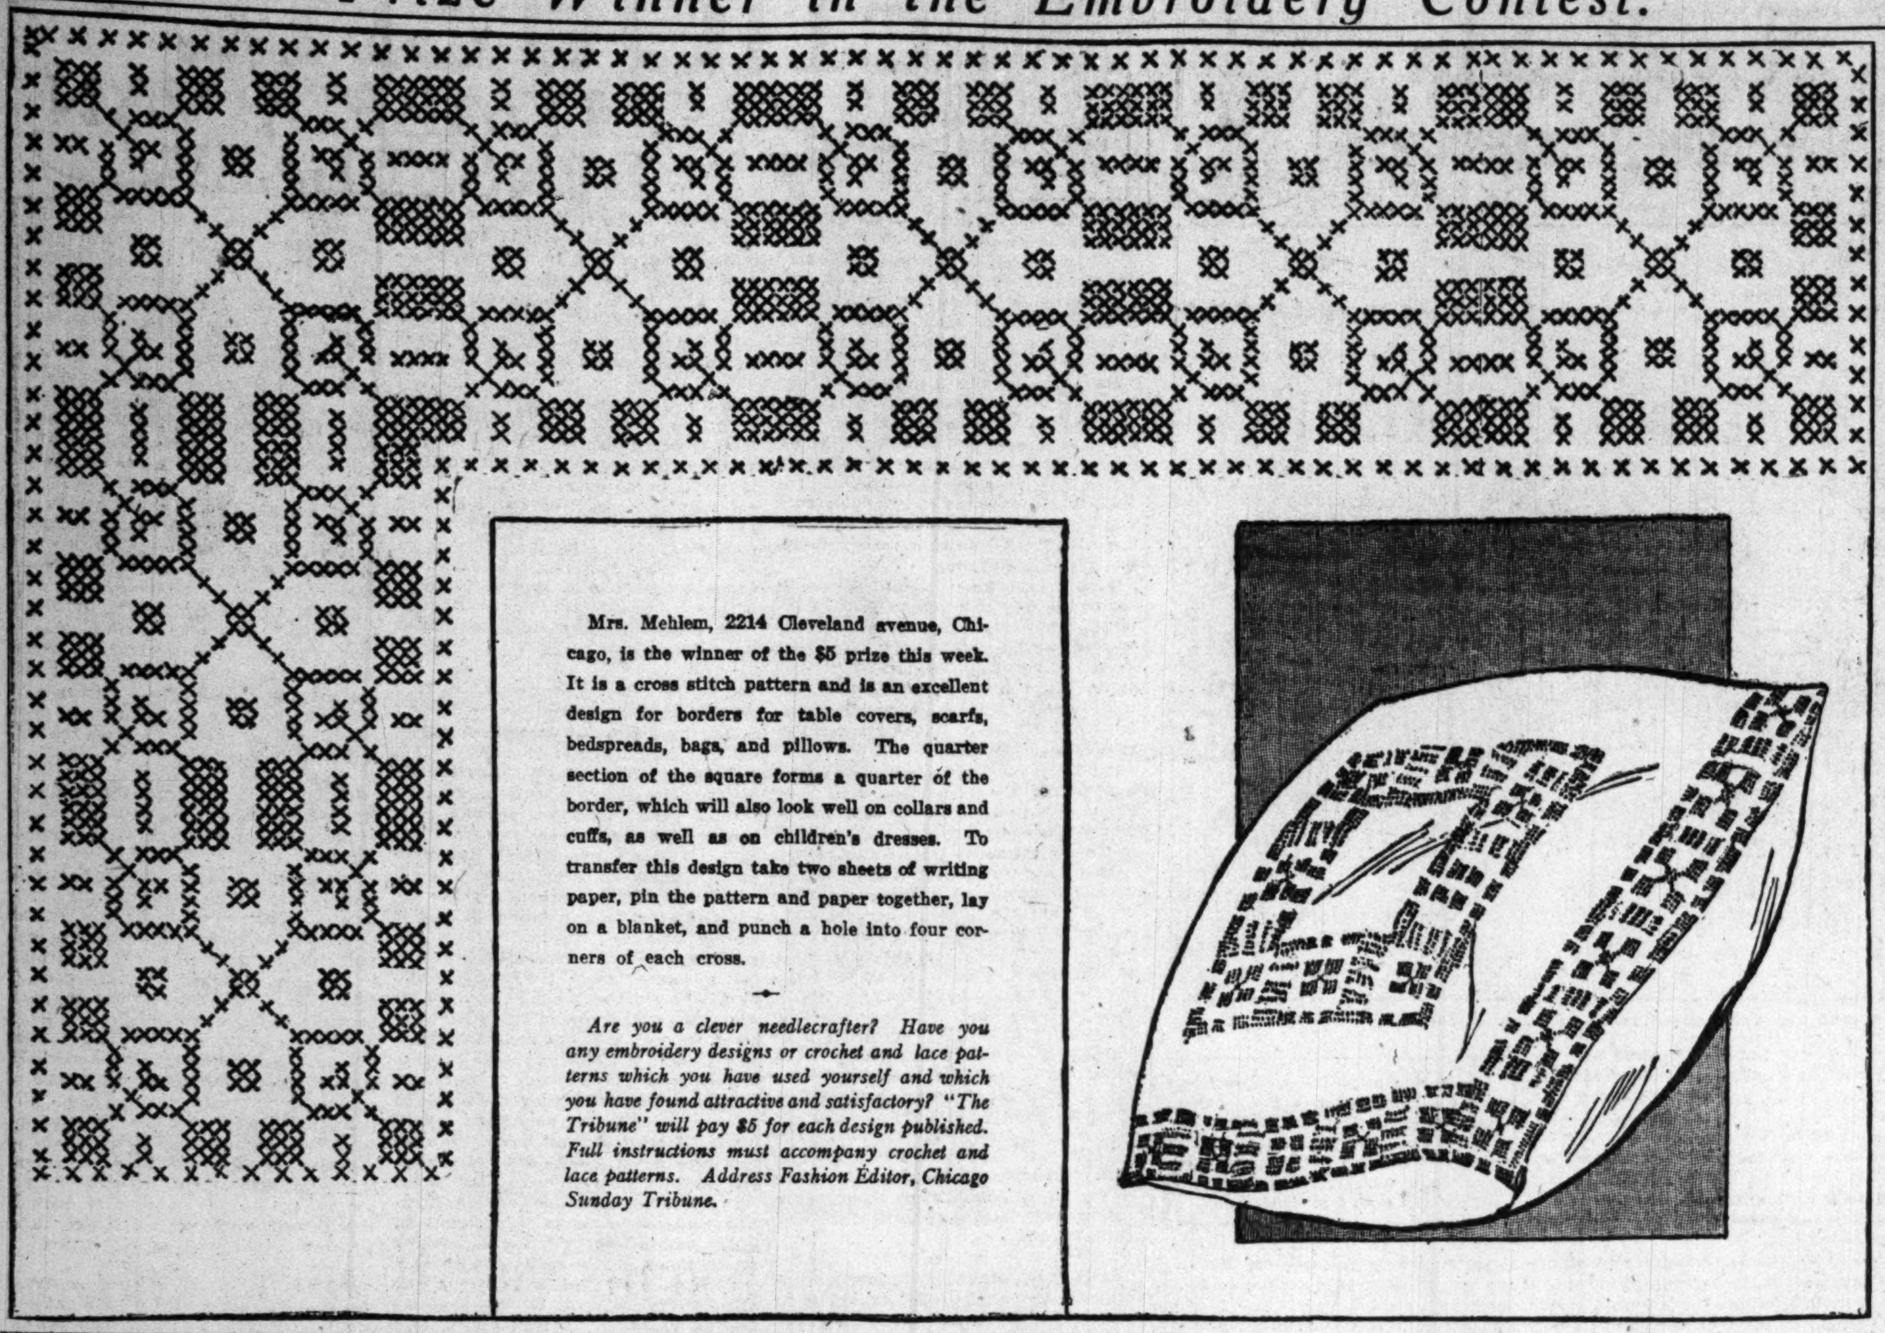
A Prize Winner in the Embroidery Contest.



Mrs. Mehlem, 2214 Cleveland avenue, Chicago, is the winner of the $5 prize this week. It is a cross stitch pattern and is an excellent design for borders for table covers, scarfs, bedspreads, bags, and pillows. The quarter section of the square forms a quarter of the border, which will also look well on collars and cuffs, as well as on children's dresses. To transfer this design take two sheets of writing paper, pin the pattern and paper together, lay on a blanket, and punch a hole into four corners of each cross.

Are you a clever needlecrafter? Have you any embroidery designs or crochet and lace patterns which you have used yourself and which you have found attractive and satisfactory? In and About the House.

Castoff silk garments, silk stocking tops, etc., can all be utilized by anybody making silk rag carpets or curtains.

Nothing so good for a sprain as bathing with hot water, to which turpentine has been added, an ounce to a quart.

Apple jelly can be made at any time through the winter, and is particularly good in the children's school sandwiches.

To relieve the soreness of a painful soft corn, try binding it up each night with baking soda moistened with a little water.

Wood ashes are an excellent thing to clean kitchen utensils. Dampen a cloth, dip it in the ashes, and scour the pans and kettles.

In the dining room good, strong furniture is cheapest in the end, since the chairs and the table must always expect to put up with a certain amount of wear and tear.

When baking the scissors are useful; a snip and the biscuit dough is quickly apportioned; a quick cut and the drop cooky falls into place on the baking tin.

Make the little mid-morning bite—the sandwich or other lunch—for a child before leaving the breakfast table, then roll it in waxed paper and much time is saved.

The celery and cheese sandwiches are delicious. A little mayonnaise is mixed in with the cheese, which is finely grated, the celery being put through the mincing machine.

To clean brass that has been exposed to the weather, make a paste of salt and common vinegar; rub the brass with the mixture and leave for ten minutes. Then clean in the usual way.

Sew snap fasteners on each pair of stockings at the top and have the wearers snap them together when taking them off. They can be laundered this way and save all the bother of trying to match stockings.

Old table linen is almost priceless in illness. The thin serviettes are so soft for cold pads and compresses. The worn table cloths make excellent bandages, and if cut up into pieces as required, are invaluable for dressing burns. In infectious diseases they can be cut up for tray cloths and covers for table and chest of drawers, while the serviettes can be used for trays, and when soiled can be burned.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I WANT to organize a Shut-in Sunshine circle, and if I succeed it will be through your kind suggestions and help. I am a shut-in, having been confined to my bed for many long years, so that I know how a little bit of sunshine, a magazine, pictures, or pieces, or some other little diversion to help pass the lonely hours, is appreciated, especially by those who are poor. Although poor and sick myself, I will be happy to return all favors or suggestions to help my circle. I can do needlework part of the time and would prefer to repay others in that way. A letter printed in the Corner a while ago said to write to the congressman of your district for a supply of flower seeds. I thought the plan would be lovely for some shut-ins. May I ask where I should write and who is the congressman of our district? MRS. M. W."

The idea of such a Shut-in Sunshine circle as that of which you speak sounds lovely to me. In a way we have something of the kind already, since many of our shut-in Cornerites correspond and send one another not only cheering letters but magazines and other little remembrances. None the less, the work cannot be too widely extended, and I am delighted with any method for bringing brightness into the lives of our invalids. I hope to have many applications for the name and address of Mrs. M. W. and that she may soon get her circle into working order. So far as the flower seeds are concerned, I approve of her suggestion there also. I cannot tell who is the congressman for her especial district. You can easily find this out and write to him at the house of representatives, Washington, D. C., stating your wish for the flower seeds. I am informed there is no difficulty at all in getting them.

Violet Plants for Country Place.

"Will some one of the Helping Hand send me some violet plants for a new place in the country? I am fond of flowers and my place needs something to make it look homelike. I will gladly pay postage if the friend intending to send me the plants will be so kind as to let me have her address. MRS. H."

This correspondent will make the violet plants grow and blossom. I hope she may receive them soon.

Asks Aid for Deafness.

"I am deaf and growing constantly worse. My husband is out of work and during the last year we have been much reduced in circumstances through his idleness and one death in the little family; besides this I have been sick most of the time. If B. L. M. would give me one of her ear trumpets, or if any one else will let me have one, I should be most grateful and maybe it might enable me to enjoy conversation with my friends once more. M. F. H."

Unfortunately the kind friend who offered the ear trumpet had given it away before this application came to hand. I am printing the request in the sure hope that some other Cornerite may have a similar appliance to bestow.

Books for Children.

"I saw an offer recently of children's books. If they have not been given away I would appreciate receiving them. My children are girls, 10 and 12 years old, who are fond of reading, but owing to reduced circumstances in the last year we have not been able to get any new books. "MRS. E. A. T."

Again I must repeat my regret that the books offered have been given away and my hope that some one else will send some books to the children who desire them. I will gladly supply the name and address of their mother.

Materials for Pillows.

"I have made several pillow tops from cigaret pictures, but I haven't the backs for them or materials to make the ruffles. I will gladly give one of the pillow covers to any one kind enough to supply me with the material for backs and ruffles, and will finish it up complete and also put a pillow in it. I noticed where some one asked about the black streak in the wall paper caused by rain. My husband is a paper hanger and has been for about twenty years, so I asked him about it. He said to do it all over again was the only remedy, as nothing would take the dark circle out. MRS. J. H. F."

I am glad to print the offer of a pillow in return for the material for back and ruffles, and I regret that I cannot, by the rules of the paper, use the other request she makes for exchange. We are not permitted to offer or ask for clothing in such a manner.

Wants Silk Pieces.

"I see that some one is offering silk pieces. I would be glad to have some of them. MRS. E. K."

The mistake so frequently committed has been made again here—the name of the friend who offered the pieces is not given. Perhaps some one else will make a similar offer to Mrs. E. K. I have her name on file and will send it on application.

Better than Toys.

"Why not tell little Argenta to go or have some one take her to a free orthopedic dispensary where she can be treated and cured free of all cost? I think that is better than sending her toys. "R. T. C."

I am most grateful to the correspondent who has sent this letter and thus done her part toward lightening the load of human woe. Do what we may, it is always heavy enough.

Words and Music of a Lullaby.

"So many readers of the Corner have been helped to find songs that I venture to ask if any one has the words and music of a lullaby which was printed in a magazine now out of print. The first lines were:

Sleepy little, creepy little brownies gone a-roaming,
With their airy little, fairy little faces all aglow.

"The chorus started:

Creep, creep, creep, time to go to sleep;
Baby playing 'possum with his big brown eyes.

"In return for this, I wish to say that I have a large number of back numbers of women's magazines which I will gladly send to any one who will pay the express on them. I can't bear to destroy good reading matter, and I find few persons in this section who care for it who are not well supplied. I thought some one who would appreciate these magazines might see my offer in the Corner. I have been keeping house for ten years, but nevertheless I am always on the lookout for new ideas and better ways of doing things, so find the exchange of ideas in the Corner very helpful. L. T. B."

There is little doubt that some one among our readers will be able to put L. T. B. on the track of the song she wants, either by sending her words and music or by telling her where to procure them. Her offer of magazines is generous, and should be promptly accepted. I am glad to learn that the Corner is such a help to her with new suggestions.

Magazines and Crochet Materials.

"I have a few magazines to offer to the Cornerites. Also, I would like to know if there is not some one who would crochet in exchange for crochet materials. L. M."

Offered magazines are almost always welcome. L. M. does not say what kind of crochet materials she has to offer in exchange for the crochet work, but I shall be happy to give her address to any one writing for it with a view to communicating with her on the subject.

Pretty Names for a Girl.

"Will you please tell me through the Corner which of these names you think will be pretty for a girl? Ethelyn, Alberta, Dorothy, Cecilia, Elsie, Ruth. What do you think of my handwriting? "A. B. A."

My own preference is for either the first one or the last on the list you give, but in all such matters it is the individual taste which decides and what one likes might not please another. Your handwriting is fair and will improve with practice.

Do You Know a Tightwad?

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject of "The Greatest Tightwad I Ever Knew." Address your letters to the Editor of the Tightwad Contest, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Write on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts will be returned.

Didn't Swat 'Em.

The greatest tightwad I ever knew was an old man who was worth a half million. He would go around the house with a pair of tweezers picking the flies off the flypaper in order to save the expense of buying new paper. C. F. P.

Opened a Charge Account.

He was about 25 years old, and it was his wedding day. After the ceremony, when the time came to fee the minister, he calmly said, "Charge it." The minister never saw or heard of him after that. J. K. F.

When the Price Fell.

The biggest tightwad I have ever known one morning purchased a dozen eggs, the price being 16 cents. In the afternoon, having occasion to visit the grocery again, he found that the egg market had declined one point. He at once raised a hue and cry to recover the cent which he claimed was due him, and he would not give in until the one cent had been refunded. MRS. W. N. K.

Fell Into the Trap.

The greatest tightwad I have ever known was a retail clothing merchant in a western town. His method of getting the best of those with whom he did business was to make claims for shortage and for damages on the shipments of goods which he received. A wholesale firm "got on" to his methods and to trap him they sent him a bill for goods he had bought from them, but they withheld the shipment. Just the same, his claim for shortage came as promptly as usual. C. M. T.

Calls It Best There Is.

I think I have the best flesh reducing process there is. It is as follows: Every morning I went to a room where we had a brass bed. Here I would lie on the floor at the foot of the bed, grasp the lowest bar, and raise my feet in the air, trying sixteen times to touch the bed with the tips of my toes. At first I could not come within a foot of it, but in a month I not only had become an adept at it but I had reduced my flesh several pounds and become much stronger. J. F. R.

To Pay the Fiddler.

The meanest man I ever knew was entertaining his son and daughter-in-law from a distant state over Christmas. He invited in all the neighbors to an oyster supper on New Year's eve, and after the supper had dancing, music and games. At midnight he announced that they had all had a good time and as he had been to considerable expense he would pass the hat and for each one to put in 50 cents to help defray expenses. MRS. F. W. N.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

THE new potato is still expensive, but it is so weet and refreshing in its qualities as to justify its use. There are only a few ways of preparing it in vogue, and there is no doubt but that its immersion in white sauce is highly justifiable, no matter what our prejudices in general may be against that too universal mixture. If the white sauce has an excuse for being, it is because new potatoes in it may be so delicious.

When to the scant food value of the potato is added that of the milk and butter and flour we have a sum that represents considerable prospective nourishment, and if a yolk of egg is added to each cup of white sauce the sum is considerably augmented, as well as the flavor of the whole dish enhanced.

The truly new potato of this seaon is the pink "Early Rose," a charming vegetable. The new potato of a month or two back, while still counted new, is more like the potato of early fall, even in size, and is far from being as sweet as the "Early Rose."

The old potato may still be acceptable when mashed, but the older of the newer potatoes may take its place if steamed instead of boiled. Yet old potatoes of fine quality are not to be despised in mixtures well seasoned. One way to season is to boil them in meat stock. Potatoes so prepared are usually blanched from ten to fifteen minutes in water and the cooking finished in the stock. They are called bouillon potatoes.

An old potato which will stand the grocer's test ought to be reliable as food. This test is as follows:

"Choose a sound potato at random from the lot, paying no attention to its outward appearance; cut it in two pieces and examine its exposed surface. If it shows so much water or juice that a comparatively slight pressure causes it to fall off in drops, you may be sure it will be soggy after it is boiled. There must be a considerable amount of water, but not an excess. Then note the color. It should be yellowish white. If a deeper yellow, the potato is not likely to cook well. Next rub the pieces together. A white froth, caused by the starch content, will appear around the edges and upon the two surfaces. The more starch, and consequently the more froth, the better the potato; the less there is, the poorer it will cook. The strength of the starchy element can further be tested by loosing the hold upon one piece. If it still clings to the other it is a good sign."

These are the experiments usually made by experts, and they are generally willing to buy potatoes which successfully stand the tests, although they are by no means infallible. An exception to the color test is necessary in the case of some imported potatoes, which may be yellow, yet of high quality.

Creamed New Potatoes.

Steam new potatoes in their jackets. Only when they are of the newest can the skin be rubbed off and the gain in mineral matter by leaving it on is as ten to one. When done strip off thin skin without breaking flesh of potatoes and drop into white sauce made as follows: Melt a tablespoon of butter in double boiler and stir into it one scant tablespoon of flour. Stir until well blended and somewhat cooked, then add one cup of cold milk and stir constantly after the first minute or two until it is thickened. A generous allowance is one cup of sauce to each six potatoes. The sauce may be made directly over the fire, and in the butter some slices of new onion may be simmered but not fried. But this onion may be added with the milk. Other flavors are also used, to taste, with the seasoning. One egg yolk slightly beaten and added to each cup enriches it. Chopped parsley of the dainty sort, generously added to the potatoes when they are served, adds to the flavor and especially enhances the appearance of what may be a main luncheon dish.

Potato Muffin.

Potato muffins are excellent with any meat gravy or even with a white sauce. Pare and steam old potatoes. They will be done in twenty-five minutes if a cloth is put over them when they are put over the boiling water. Mash and season with butter, cream, and salt and pepper to taste. Butter small sized muffin rings, fill them with the potato, and bake for twenty minutes. These may be varied to suit the taste. If to each two or three muffins is added one beaten egg white the resulting muffin will suggest angel cake and is particularly good with a white sauce. If the egg yolk is used instead the muffins will resemble the much more expensive unsweetened custards which are used for garnishing. Both kinds may be cooked in one muffin tin and used alternately as a garnish. Another way to vary any of these is to put a tablespoon of grated cheese in the muffin ring before adding the potato.

Cut two slices of bacon, or even three, in tiny pieces and fry until crisp, being careful not to have fire enough to burn it thereafter. Pour over this two medium boiled potatoes cut in dice and season to taste. Beat the whites and yolks of two eggs separately, the yolks but slightly, and mix them. Pour this over the bacon and potatoes, prick, and when cooked fold like any omelet. This is a hearty and quite universally acceptable dish for one large eater or two daintier ones.

If new potatoes are boiled it is much the best to put them in a basket, since they can be handled so much more expeditiously and since when small a fork is almost sure to break them. An excellent way to dry them off if they were cooked without their skins is to put them under the broiler, turning them on all sides. If they are not to be served with gravy, butter them at once after they are taken away from the fire. Old potatoes may be treated in the same way.

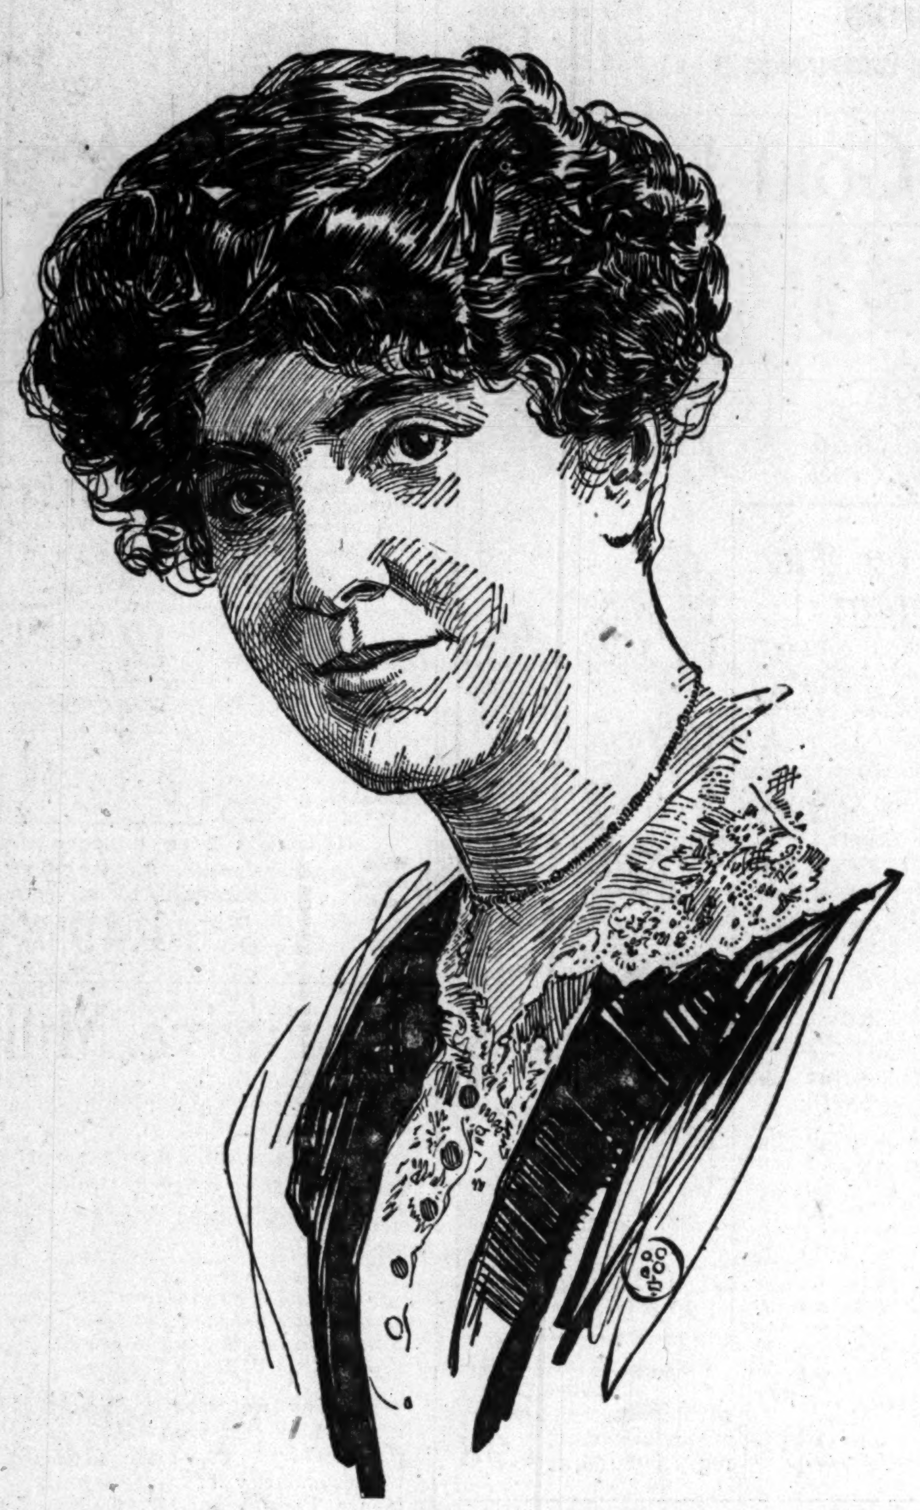
Advertising for Happiness —and Getting It

The $150 Prize Story



MRS. MAYME M. READ, 4830 Calumet Avenue
Winner of the first prize offered by The Tribune for the best true story of success from Tribune "Room Renting" advertising.

Mrs. Read's story is vitally interesting to every woman in Chicago. It is a great tribute to the ability of her sex. Yet what she accomplished, as she herself has said, was simply the result of an idea and a suggestion from some one who had previously succeeded. Mrs. Read has put her experience and her success in writing, so that the hundreds and even thousands of women in Chicago who are confronted with the serious problem of "making both ends meet" for themselves and their families may find hope in the thought of a similar success.

What Mrs. Read did, you can do also. Her success required mainly the ambition to try. She has given you in her story practically all the advice you need—she has told you the things she tried that failed her and the things she tried that succeeded. All this she had to learn in time and by experience. In her story reproduced on this page, you have information which will help you to start a success of your own immediately. Your success can be through one rented room or many rented rooms, as you choose to make it.

The Tribune "Room Renting" columns bring big results to advertisers. If you want The Tribune's help in the preparation of an ad, telephone Central 100 and ask for a representative to be sent to your address. Or if you can do so, call at the Woman's Advertising Department on the main floor of the Tribune Building, Madison and Dearborn Streets, and you may have the assistance of a competent woman to advise you at no other cost except the nominal charge for the space your advertisement will occupy in the paper.

From Possible Poverty to Comfort and Plenty With Tribune Ads as a Medium

A little over seven years ago I found myself confronted with a very serious problem. My husband having been afflicted with rheumatism for over two years and therefore incapacitated and unable to work, the doctors having pronounced his case hopeless, and having spent practically all of our savings for doctors' bills and baths, change of climate, etc., it was now a serious question as to what I should do or could do to make a living for my husband and myself.

While my husband was unable to care for himself in any way, still he was a great help to me at this time when so much discouragement faced us. He always had encouraging words and a happy smile to greet me—never finding fault or complaining. His absolute confidence in my ability to make a success kept me encouraged and always hopeful.

Going out into the business world or going back to teaching was out of the question as he needed my constant care.

Then I decided that the only thing to do was to keep roomers. I started out on a search for a suitable place. I tramped up one street and down the other, inquiring of real estate agents and consulting papers. I kept this up for about two weeks. In the meantime, I was advised to buy out a place already furnished. This necessitated a lot more running and looking. Finally I decided to rent an eight-room house on Berkeley Avenue, which I furnished very nicely and, as I thought, very comfortably, for roomers.

That was seven years ago the first of May. I then listed my rooms with two renting agencies through which, we were told, we could rent our rooms without any trouble, and that they would keep all vacancies filled. Everything was in readiness the first week in May, so, expectantly, we sat back to await the rush of applicants for the rooms in our house. One day, two days, finally a week passed without even one inquiry, and in despair, I applied to a widow who lived around the corner, and who conducted what seemed to be a successful rooming house. The first thing she said, after I told her of my failure to rent the rooms, was "Advertise in The Tribune." She will perhaps never realize the immense amount of good that little bit of advice has done, for on that very day, which happened to be Saturday, I placed in The Sunday Tribune a 5-line ad, dictated by my husband. That was the second Sunday in May, 1908. It seemed the papers could hardly have been cold off the presses when the first man came, carrying a clipping of our ad in The Tribune. By noon every room in the house was rented.

For three years, we lived on Berkeley Avenue, and succeeded in covering our living expenses. Feeling encouraged by our success, I felt that I had experience enough to branch out on a larger scale. Being still young, we had to look out for the future. That we were successful is indicated by the fact that we decided to rent two flats of seven rooms each on Calumet Avenue, and those we always kept filled by "room renting" advertising in The Tribune.

In 1913, I took a third flat, which I furnished in three suites for light housekeeping, this being a new venture. Those we advertised in The Tribune. By ten o'clock of the day we advertised we had rented all three suites. During that day we had from fifteen to twenty calls. During that year we found that light housekeeping suites were more in demand than furnished rooms. In the meantime, in consequence of our efforts and successful results our bank balance had been steadily growing, so that last April, encouraged by our success, we had an opportunity to lease a six-flat building at 4830-2 Calumet Avenue, which we now occupy.

These six flats we remodeled into eighteen light housekeeping suites. Each suite has its own private kitchen with sink, running hot and cold water, gas range, pantry and ice box—in fact, a little flat in itself. Everything modern and up-to-date.

It was a big investment, but my husband and I found it to be a wise one as we have practically no trouble in keeping each suite rented to first-class people, and all who live with us seem perfectly satisfied. We have made our entire living during the past seven years through renting rooms.

Since being in the business we have tried every paper in Chicago, room renting bureaus and signs, and there is absolutely no doubt in our minds that our success is due to Tribune ads, which we rely upon entirely for results.

It is not unusual now for my husband and I to have some of those who are perhaps not very successful, or who maybe are just starting out, come to us and inquire how we manage to do so well, and my memory goes back to that day when I was given that bit of golden advice seven years ago, and with utmost confidence I reply, "ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE."

If you find that people do not take your rooms when they come to your home after having read the ad in The Tribune, look into your rooms and you will find the cause. The Tribune reaches the right people and it is up to you to do your part.

JANE BARTON The Home Dressmaker

How to Run a Sewing Machine.

WITH the revival of tucks, many gored skirts, ruffles, and puffed trimmings the sewing machine is being more used than for several years past. For summer clothes especially it is an important adjunct, especially where there are children.

Many women who sew admirably by hand fail to get the full efficiency from a machine, chiefly because they do not take the trouble to understand its mechanism. Properly managed, a good machine not only is a tremendous time saver but it does work that is almost as dainty and far more durable than hand work.

Life has so many things worth while that it always seems to me a waste of time to do hand work where a machine will answer. Of course, I like exquisite hand run tucks, rolled lace, fine stitchery of every kind—what woman does not?—but they should be classed with the luxuries of life and treated accordingly. For one's best blouse or the child's party frock, for the camisole or nightgown that is to go to a friend's trousseau, or for the little gift garments for a prospective mother, and usually for neckwear, hand work is advisable; otherwise do most of your sewing by machine.

Why does the machine fail to give satisfaction? Here are a few reasons: First and foremost because the average worker does not take pains to learn how to run it. The mechanism of a modern sewing machine is delicate. It has adjustments to do all kinds of work—ruffling, tucking, hemming, gathering, shirring, quilting, even stocking darning. How many of these adjustments have you ever used? Can you do more with your machine than run a seam and not always run that straight?

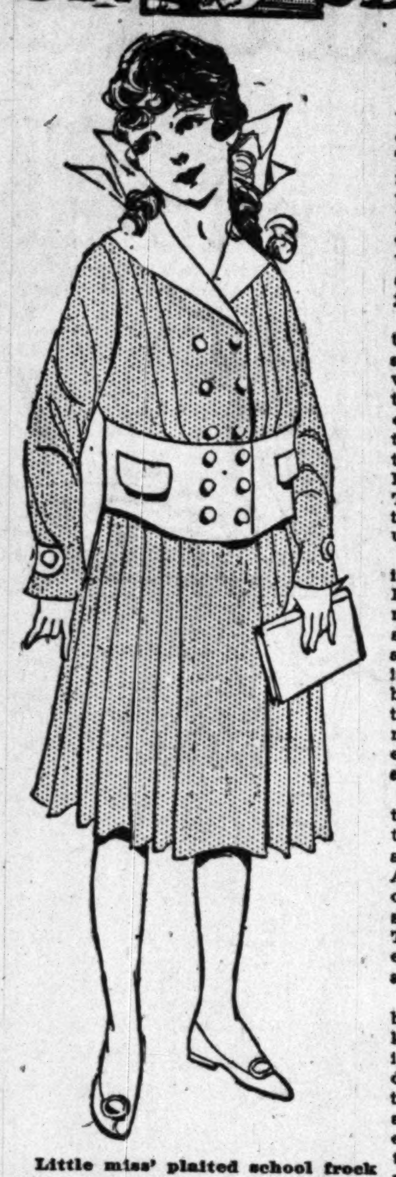
Perhaps you have no machine and are debating whether one is a good investment. Yes, if you get a good make, care for it properly, and make a study of its use.

Buy a machine of recognized make. As a good machine with care will last a lifetime for the average home sewer, buying a cheap, untested make is poor economy. There are various types of machines—the double thread, the single thread, the automatic, the machine worked by a treadle and by hand power.

As each make has its devotees, before buying it is well to make a careful study of various types. Know the uses for which you intend it and go into the subject as intelligently as if about to buy an automobile.

The cost of a machine varies, but for about $50 one can get one of the new types with all attachments and the drop table top. A hand power machine is less expensive and there are small hand machines, originally intended as toys for children, which are useful for light work and running up seams.

For the average household the treadle machine is the wiser choice. It can have hand attachments of various kinds at the cost of a few dollars or may be run by water power or an electric motor.



Little miss' plaited school frock with extremely wide belt ornamented with two pockets. The waist is double breasted and the sleeves ample, giving to the whole a decided Russian blouse effect.

While the double thread machine may seem to do more secure stitching, there is much in favor of the chain stitch type, as it is light running and the sewing is easily ripped—always an advantage for the novice or for the woman who makes over her clothes The chain stitch can be securely fastened at the end of a seam by tying threads or by running one or two stitches beyond the material, then drawing the thread tightly.

An automatic machine has an automatic tension which regulates itself to the stitch and to the material being used.

Whatever your choice of machine, it will pay you to go to the agency and become thoroughly conversant with its use. This is a quicker and clearer method for most women than to follow the instruction books, which, however, are practical. Be certain that if you have bought a machine of standard make and it does not work well the fault is with the worker and not with the machine—though adjustment is sometimes necessary.

Much bad machine work is due to poor treadle management. Every machine has a certain speed limit and it is folly to work oneself out trying to run it overtime. A jerky movement is hard on operator and machine; also breaks the thread. Practice slow, even running with the needle out, then with a straight seam. Increase of speed comes with practice. The hands managing the work go faster than the feet. They cannot be used in unison and get good results.

Be sure that the strap or belt connecting the two wheels is properly adjusted. If too tight the machine runs heavily; if not tight enough the wheels will not respond readily or evenly. They should always run in unison. When the strap is only slightly loose it may be tightened by running the wheel in the opposite direction. It is also easily tightened by removing the strap, cutting off a small end, then joining carefully with the prong as before.

Another source of machine trouble is the use of poor oil, cheap needles and thread; also of not using the right thread and needle for the material being sewed. A cheap oil will gum and corrode the parts of the machine, making the movements stiffer and stiffer with its continued use. The sediment clogs the oil holes and eventually wears out the delicate mechanism of the machinery.

Where a machine has become clogged by bad oil it may be helped by a bath of kerosene or gasoline. Run machine rapidly—without the needle—wiping away all dirt and sediment as it appears. After this bath oil carefully with an oil such as you would use on a typewriter. In extreme cases of clogging it is necessary to take the machine apart and soak the parts in kerosene.

When a machine is in constant use it should be dusted every day, oiled sparingly every other day, and thoroughly cleaned once a week. Always wipe off any superfluous oil or your delicate fabrics may be ruined. When the machine is only used periodically clean and oil well before each time of using. When there is squeaking or stiffness it is a signal for overhauling.

A linen or silk rag is better for cleaning, as there is no lint to clog. After oiling test the stitching on a white remnant to see if any oil is oozing. One woman I know has a small bag attached to the back of her machine to catch the work as it is sewed and prevent it from getting soiled on the lower wheel or dragging on the floor.

Jane Barton's Answers to Sewing Queries.

S. H. C. W.: For summer mourning choose black Simpson print for your work dresses. It does not turn rusty and washes a good black. Most black cotton goods are unsatisfactory. Some dotted swisses keep their color fairly well. There is a sheer French swiss that makes cool looking dresses for evening. A thin china silk and an unlined crêpe de chine are probably the most useful gowns you could select. For your best dress which you wish made low neck, choose chiffon cloth lined with thin china silk or made without lining and worn over a china silk slip. As white corset covers are impractical under sheer materials, you should have at least three made of thin china silk. These may have a cap under the arm to which are pinned black shields.

MRS. D. M. D.: For an eight yard skirt you will need deeper haircloth for the stiffening than just the hem facing. A cord around the bottom of the skirt makes a ripple.

MARGARET M. M.: Why not make for a gift for your friend's baby a mosquito netting to be thrown over the baby carriage? Get a nice quality of netting and bind with three inch white messaline ribbon. For a more elaborate gift, a pique cover for the carriage is always acceptable. Scallop the edges all around. Turn down the upper part six inches, scalloping across the ends, and the width of this turn on the wrong side. This makes the work right when the turn is made. In the center of the turnover embroider the baby's initials in well padded satin stitch.

WEARY MOTHER: Since buttonholing is such a burden, why not economize on something else and have it done for you? Inquire among your friends. Some of them may be glad to make a little extra money by this work. From 3 to 5 cents a buttonhole is the usual price. If you keep the children's dresses ready in a basket on your porch you can often do them as pickup work when friends drop in. The strain is less when sewing in the open air. Also buy the buttonhole strips wherever practical, as on morning dresses and most underwear. I always overcast a buttonhole even when the material is not easily frayed. Cut your thread long enough to do the entire work, as it is hard to make a fresh start neat.

MOURNING: As black is so unbecoming to you, you must be careful in your treatment of it. You will find net, chiffon cloth, marquisette, and other sheer fabrics less trying than the heavy failles and other mourning silk. Have white near your face. White crêpe collars and cuffs re worn in the deepest black. Sheer organdie or Quaker net should be used for the collar sets of your day dresses. The low cut evening frocks which are now permissible will help out, as many women can wear décolleté black who find other modes trying. For hot weather you may wear all white, voile or mull being the favorite materials. These must be made without trimming, save tucks or machine hemstitching. If a frilling is desired, choose footing—the plain, not the dotted variety.

M. C.: In joining a sailor collar to your boy's blouse turn a seam around the outer edge and sew all the trimming before the collar is lined. Turn a seam on the collar lining and baste to the wrong side of the collar with the edge about an eighth of an inch within the edge of the collar. Keep the corners straight and do not pull or stretch out of shape. Baste the lining to the back and side of the collar, stitch or hem by hand, and press. Baste the cloth neck edge of the collar to the neck of the blouse with the seam toward the under or out side of the blouse. Stitch by machine, turn under the collar lining, and hem by hand. Be extremely careful in joining the collar not to stretch the neck, or it will pull away from the back in an ugly fashion when worn.

ESTELLE: Silk binding can be had in almost every shade. It costs from 10 to 20 cents, according to the quality, and looks almost like narrow ribbon. There is also ready turned and folded cotton or linen binding for wash materials. This seam binding is often used to make a neat finish to a hem. The hem is turned up evenly and the edge trimmed off an even depth all around. The binding is stitched on the upper edge of the hem through the one thickness of the material and a good quarter of an inch below the raw edge not to ravel. Sew the upper edge of the binding with slip stitches to the skirt, taking care that the stitches show as little as possible on the wrong side.

What Fascinated Me Most.—

What one thing more than any other fascinated you most about the man or woman who fascinated you most? Was it a wayward curl, a roguish eye, a dimple, a mole, or a smile? A tantalizing quirk of the mouth or a mellow voice, or the color of the hair? The pies she made or the flowers he brought? His dominating force or some appealing weakness? Some characteristic word or expression of his or hers? Or what? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

He Could Drive.

It was his driving. If it hadn't been for the reckless, daredevil way he held the ribbons over a pair of well fed horses I wouldn't have looked at him twice; but to see him dashing past with a gay smile for the girl in the window made him seem to the foolish maiden the embodiment of all that was manly. He surely could drive. He could also drink, as the fascinated maid later found to her sorrow.

The Eyes Never Told.

What fascinated me most about the one girl who fascinated me most was her enigmatical personality as expressed by her eyes. Cold, slate gray, set in a face of unusual pallor, they swept one from head to toe tirelessly, continuously—yet never gave a hint of what was going on behind them. It might have been love, hate, disgust, contempt, sorrow—but the eyes never told. Neither did words, for she was absolutely silent except for casual greetings. But the baffling eyes—they fascinate me still, and I know as little of what is behind them as I did three years ago.

Here's a Tip for Him.

He was much like other men in everything except in the way that he helped me on with my coat. I always felt as though he were taking me into his arms without any one else's knowing it when he gave a little pat to my shoulders as he adjusted my coat. We were "just friends" then, and are now, and I have never been held in his arms in my life, but—well, I think I'd not object.

Won by Her Pluck.

The pluck a girl in our camping party displayed when I nearly cut my hand off, tearing her white petticoat into strips for bandages, and keeping cool when two of her companions fainted at the sight of blood, fascinated me. I offered her the hand she helped to save and a heart full of love with it.

E. C.

Attraction of Opposites.

Force, just plain brute force. I am a small, slight, feminine woman and I think force always does fascinate a woman of my type. Unfortunately for us, we do not always like it after we get it. But the same force that can attract can also subdue, so most of us gasp a little, brace up, and go on living. Only I am always so sorry for a little girl who feels and responds to the age old attraction of opposites.

Had a Tantalizing Mouth.

What fascinated me most about the "only woman in the world" was her tantalizing little red mouth, which had a most alluring trick of becoming heart shaped whenever she dimpled into a smile, which was often, and I could rest neither night or day until I made her my wife. She is a beautiful woman in other respects, but I shall go to my grave idolizing her, because on my heart is stamped an indelible imprint of that red, red heart over a tiny pointed chin.

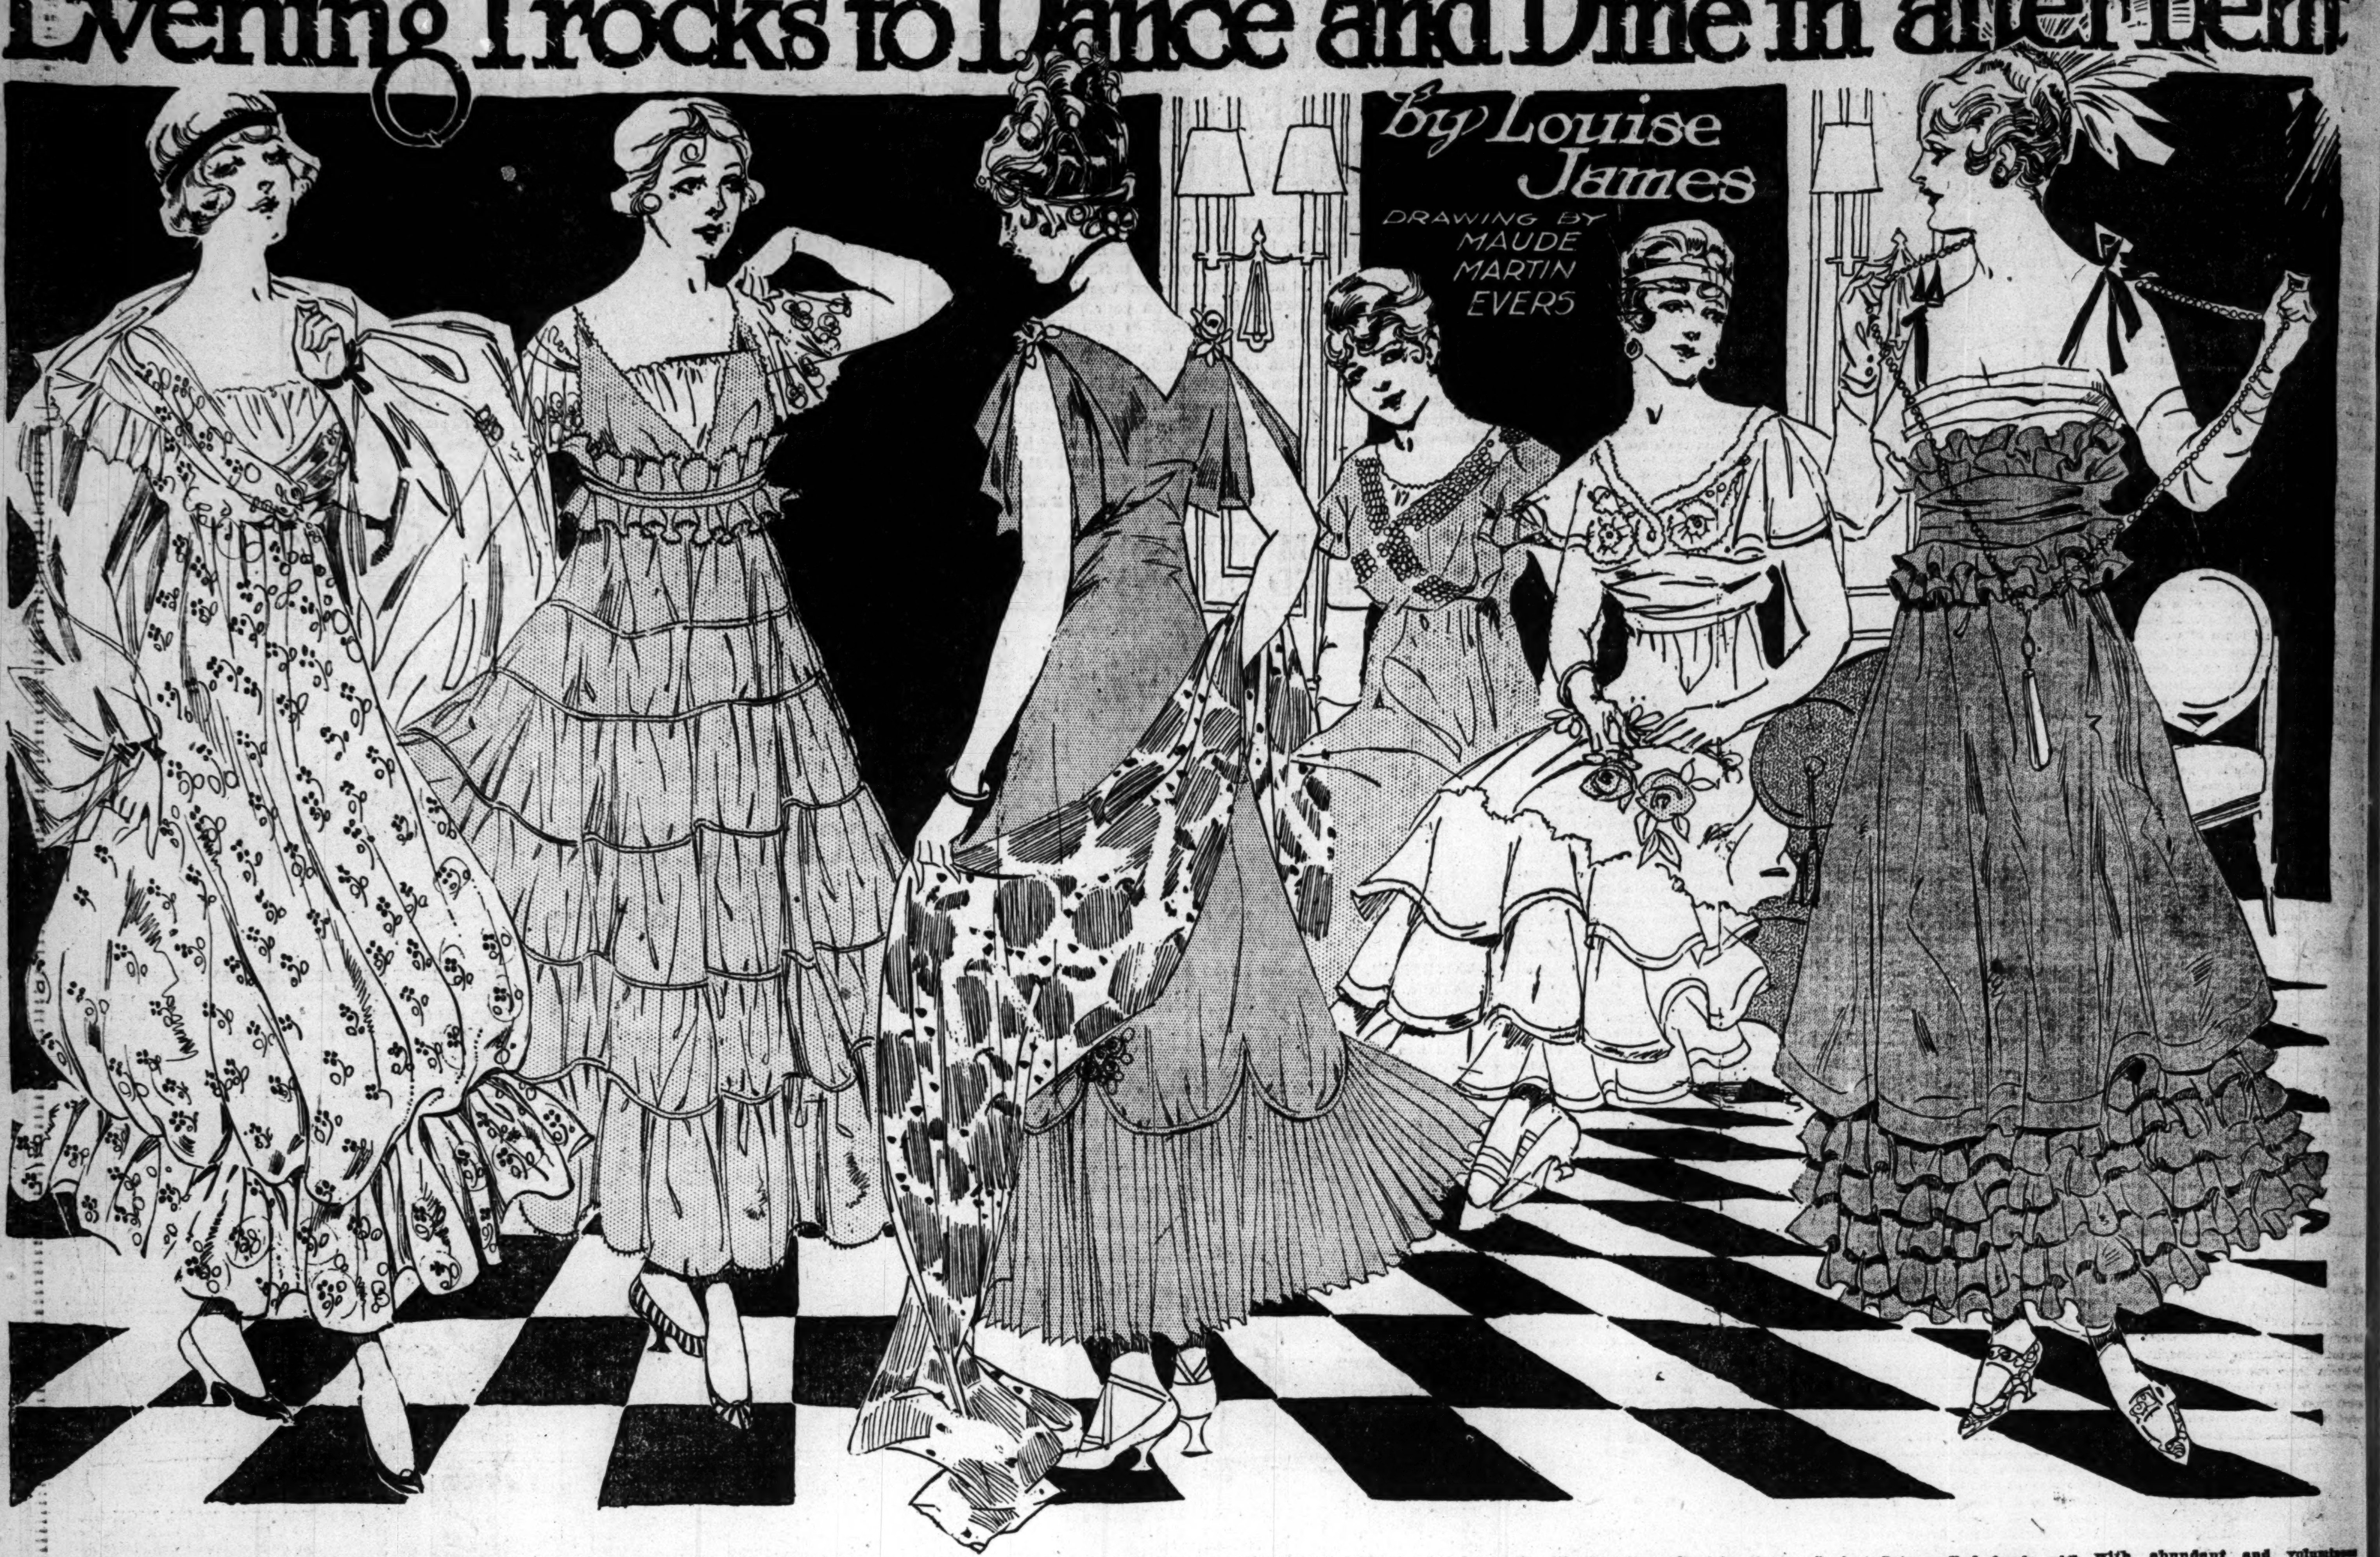
Evening Frocks to Dance and Dine in after Lent



by Louise James

DRAWING BY MAUDE MARTIN EVERS

1. One of the newest Victorian frocks of April sky blue and silver broche silk. A peachbloom tulle scarf drapes the shoulders, caught at the wrists with black velvet bands.

2. A corded white taffeta frock with a shirred belt and with exquisitely fine lace and tulle sleeves.

3. Plaiting forms the flounce below this plainly flaring skirt with the petaled finish to the main part of the skirt. The sleeves also are petal shaped and diminutive.

4. A simple evening frock of satin d'ivoire, its only trimming consisting of the beaded cross-over effect in the front.

5. A taffeta ruffled frock with style and simplicity combined.

6. A charming tulle creation with abundant and voluminous ruffles at the hem and jaunty black velvet straps over the shoulders.

"My Most Embarrassing Moment Was When—"

Rubber Lit on Neck.

It was a rainy day and I had worn my sister's rubbers. They were too large. Imagine my agony on going down the stairs at high school to have one of them kick off and hit my algebra teacher, who was standing in the hall below, on the back of the head. There was a terrible, terrible silence, and then came the tittering laugh from the other pupils. And the look of amazement from the teacher was almost more than I could endure.

Almost Got "the Hook."

While appearing on the stage of a local theater one night as an amateur performer I experienced the most embarrassing moment of my life. I came out on to the stage when it was my turn, wearing a false mustache. The audience being mostly boys began to applaud vigorously. The idea, I think, was to make the performer excited. To show them that it did not bother me in the least I bowed several times. In doing this my false mustache fell to the floor. I picked it up and tried to stick it on again, but it would not remain in its place. The boys in the audience by now were clapping and whistling, while some one yelled, "Take him out!" I became excited and ran off the stage in great confusion.

Pulled Out Napkin.

The most embarrassing moment of my life I experienced one evening at a reception. I arrived late, and had hurried all the way. It being rather warm in the parlor, I reached into my pocket and took out what I supposed to be a clean handkerchief, neatly folded. Imagine my feelings when, after shaking it out, I found that I had a napkin, and, worse yet, one with the name of a cheap restaurant written in big letters across one whole corner.

She Was Discovered.

Two other young and frivolous girls and myself used to write each other ardent and somewhat mushy letters, and sign the names of different fellows we knew to them. Of course, we always knew the real sender, but did it just for fun. Besides, sometimes we had other masculine company when these letters arrived and we of course seemed very popular in their eyes. I made a habit of reading my letters aloud to any young man who happened to be present, as it made him jealous. This mischievous deceit proved my undoing. I was sitting out on the front porch, and upon hailing the mail man and getting a letter, my caller and I read it together. What was the young man's surprise to see his name at the end of it. Believe me, this was the most embarrassing moment of my life.

Holdup Victim Has no Arms.

My most embarrassing moment was when I was clerking in a trunk and suitcase department of a large department store.

A gentleman without any arms came in and asked to see a suitcase. The moment he spoke to me, I wondered if he would pay for it or have it charged, and if he would pay, how was he to get his money.

When finally he decided on one, he said: "Now you will have to play holdup man and go in my trouser pocket and get my money." And I did.

Five Cents Ahead Anyway.

I am a girl of 16. One morning as I was entering the "L" station I stopped to draw a nickel from my glove, when I heard it fall and saw it roll under the fence.

A good looking man stooped to get it. He had a hard time and it took so long that I felt sorry for him and was about to say, "Let it go," when he found it.

I held my hand out and said, "Thank you," very graciously.

He seemed surprised, but after hesitating a second handed me the nickel.

Upon reaching the "L" platform what was my horror to discover my own nickel still in my glove!

Wet September Morn.

One day I was walking down the street reading a paper. It had been raining and thawing, the street was full of water. Not seeing this I walked into a large pool of water, a street car was coming, and I was obliged to stand in the water until it had passed. Fancy my embarrassment when I turned around and saw a crowd of spectators grinning at me, and one of them called at me: "What do you think you are, September Morn?"

She Hurled Wrong Shoe.

I was just married and was careful not to let any one know about it, so when I received a shower of rice and old shoes I was much surprised. During our honeymoon journey I saw an old shoe in the aisle of the car, and thinking it was one that was thrown at me I threw it out the window. As we neared the next town the man in front of me started moving and looking around. When I asked him what the trouble was he said that he had taken off his shoe and misplaced it. I had to tell him that I had thrown it out the window. The poor fellow sat in the station with one shoe off and one shoe on until I came back with a new pair.

Feet That Lincoln Freed.

When my son was 6 years old I took him to visit the Art institute.

His father called his attention to a plaster cast of Abraham Lincoln's hands and said: "Just see how natural they look, Edward. You can see all the veins and wrinkles in the hands."

Edward looked, and then he said: "Yes, the hands are all right, but look under the case and see his feet." Of course we immediately stooped down, and imagine our embarrassment when we discovered a pair of very large feet belonging to a colored gentleman standing on the opposite side of the case. He looked down at his feet and then at us, and as we knew any explanation would only make the matter worse, we moved along.

Carried Away with Speech.

The most embarrassing moment of my life was when I became engaged in a political debate on a street corner of this city.

A large crowd kept gathering, and in order to be heard I mounted a truck which was standing a short distance from the corner. I had half finished my speech when the driver of the truck returned and started to drive away.

I continued my speech, while half of the audience followed the truck. The driver, seeing the humor of the situation, whipped the horses into a gallop, and the laughing crowd quit following.

Was Innocent, Too.

Two maiden ladies who were very proper in their speech and conduct called at our home one afternoon. In the course of the visit my mother asked them for supper, which invitation the two graciously accepted. When they were preparing to go one of them remarked, "Well, now, when we came we didn't think we would stay for supper."

"No," I innocently replied, "we didn't think you would either."

Of course, when I saw the expression on my mother's face I discovered my mistake and tried to give my interpretation of my reply.

ELMA C. E.

Paris is agog just now. The openings are beginning to open and all those models for which the fashion world has been waiting so eagerly are ready for display. And the expected is happening. Snug, even diminutive, at the top, the silhouette flares wide and full at the bottom and if there is any sleeve at all it is a wisp of an affair, more a suggestion than a reality.

All that we dreaded and all that we hoped for seems to have been materialized, and we are face to face with the best and the worst of spring fashions to be.

Starting with the neck line of the modish evening dress to dance and dine in with the close of Lent, it may be almost any shape, though the square or the oblong is the newest. Beneath it is the bodice, snug for the most part, and short waisted, too, though it is quite possible to possess a normal waisted evening frock, and even here and there one sees a Moyen age frock still making its appeal for favor.

Muslin and lace are to be much worn and military effects are not in the running the way they were a few months ago. They are being employed sparingly and by some of the leading couturieres not at all.

The empire frock and the princess dress seem to be making pretty even bids for popularity. One exquisite tulle frock I saw lately reached high to the line of the neck in front and then dropped to the waist line in the back in the conventional V shaped opening. It seemed, indeed, a reversal of things as they are, but it was effective, nevertheless, and its high belted sash gave it an air of added jauntiness.

One of the most effective of the spring combinations is taffeta and crêpe de chine. Taffeta is particularly adaptable to this season's full skirts. It is crisp and excellent for the main skirt, while the crêpe de chine may be used as an overskirt, draped at the sides and the back.

It is interesting to note that the newest spring taffetas have an added finish which makes them doubly serviceable at present. Not only may they be obtained in all the fashionable plain tones but in many of the old fashioned prints and colorings. In pale yellow, blue, and all the wide variety of rose shades they are offered for evening wear, while the navy blues, soft greens, grays, and lavenders are excellent for general wear.

Then, too, there are a number of the sheerer silks in the new novelty weaves, silks so light that their weight is supported by the use of cords. On evening dresses made of this material sequins, spangles, jetted bands, and ornaments are fashionable. Laces and nets are also used in combination with all the infinite silks and chiffons. Then, too, black and white, with a suggestion of the Japanese note, is often used in combination with gold and the characteristic blues of the oriental workers.

EFFICIENCY HELPERS IN THE HOME.

Household assistants, mothers' helpers, emergency women, caretakers, whatever they choose to call themselves, they're in demand, if efficient. The experiences of some who have obtained work along these lines through our department may interest you. Within the past week, one of these indispensably handy women received five calls from her advertisement and had already worked twice for the same woman. Not long ago, "For all around household services, including sewing, mending, etc., phone ...." brought four regular places and innumerable "fill-ins." A concientious, trustworthy woman who advertised to care for apartments by the week filled her spare hours from a three-time advertisement and incidentally solved the problem of supporting her two boys. A capable homeworker who advertised similarly about a year ago had over thirty calls and finally had to turn away inquiries. Her time, even to Sundays and evenings, was filled and she secured enough regular places to keep her busy ever since.

The many people who are "watching the corners" closely now, the many others busily employed during the day, the housewives who get the annual spring cleanup fever are some of the eager patrons of these home workers whose services can be bought by the hour. Have you some to sell? If so, write or call Room 534, Tribune Bldg., the Home Workers' Blue List, care of The Chicago Tribune.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

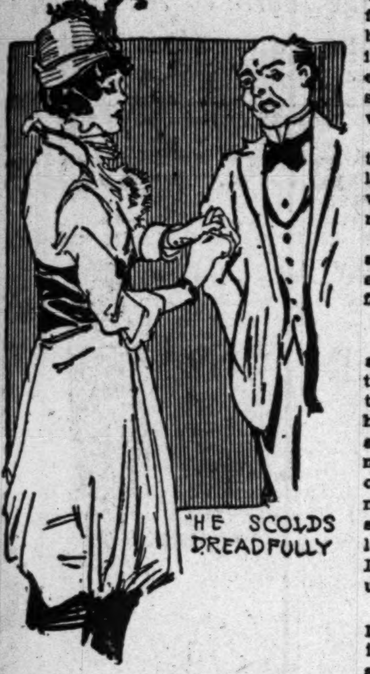
Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Lack of Consideration.

If all employers would treat their employés with ordinary courtesy and consideration many of the trials some business girls have to endure would cease to exist.

A girl I know had to give up a position simply because the peculiarity and lack of consideration of her employer made it intolerable for her. He had no system about his work, consequently she could have none about hers. He spent the greater part of the day out of the office, although his business did not require it, and at 5 o'clock or after he came back to the office in a rush to dictate his letters to Miss Dale, who had nothing to do during the day but wait until her employer made up his mind to attend to his business.



Occasionally he returned early in the afternoon, but never to work. He always brought some friend with him to entertain in the office, and sometimes asked Miss Dale to go out and buy cigars for him, as though she were an office boy.

Miss Dale's protests against having to stay late at night had no effect, as her employer simply told her he could not see why she should not be willing to work an extra hour or two, since she had so little to do during the day. The fact that she was not busy during the day did not make up for the long hours she put in at the office. In fact, she found it very dull with nothing to do for hours at a time and the prospect of reaching her home long after dinner time was anything but pleasant.

Another man, who has just one girl in his office, goes to lunch every day before she does and tells her to wait until he comes back and not leave the office alone. He usually stays out for two hours, sometimes longer, and there are days when she does not get out until late in the afternoon. She is a timid little thing and will not say anything to her employer, for fear of losing her position. She tried bringing her lunch from home and eating it while he was out, but when he discovered it he requested her not to do it again, saying that he did not think it looked well.

The fact that she was timid and afraid to protest probably accounted for his lack of consideration. An older girl who would refuse to submit to such treatment might have cured him of his selfish habit.

I do not doubt that some employers take advantage of the fact that a girl will usually submit to a great deal from them before giving up a position.

Here is a letter along this line:

"Dear Miss King: I am employed by a man who is very inconsiderate. He thinks nothing of making me work overtime an hour each night, and then if I happen to be five minutes late about once a month he scolds dreadfully. Furthermore, if he makes me work until 9 or 10 o'clock at night he never offers me supper money or even time to go out and get supper. He also makes me work on all legal holidays, such as Memorial day and Labor day. Would you advise me to give up the position? A. R."

I would not advise you to give up your position now if you have not another one in view unless the situation is intolerable and you cannot stand it any longer. However, you ought to be on the lookout for a position all the time. Answer advertisements and you may before long be able to land a good position and can leave your present employer, who is worse than inconsiderate. Of course, he is not compelled to give you a holiday on Memorial day and Labor day, but most employers do, and he probably could just as well without interfering with his business.

The Queerest Boss I Ever Worked For.

"The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on the subject of "The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For." Address letters to Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Good for the Complexion.

He was a venerable man, tall and slim, and wore side whiskers. The first morning I worked for him he came in singing "Yo, ho, and a bottle of rum," walked to the back of the store, took off his hat and coat, and, still humming his tune, he took the broom from the corner, grasped it firmly by the ends, and jumped over it several times. He then took a short run toward the wall, threw himself on his hands, and brought his feet up against the wall with a bang. He balanced there for a second or two, with me dumfounded on the side lines, shook first one foot, then the other, lowered himself slowly to the floor, and walked over to the sink and washed his face. He later told me that he did it for his complexion. S. W. B.

An Original Office File.

My queerest boss insisted upon sitting on his check book and other papers of like value that were used during the day. After having used anything that he sat on I would immediately have to return it to him so that he could resume his sitting on it. This same man was fond of eating chocolate candy, of which he always kept a box of the best on his desk, munching it all day long, and once in a while offering me some of it. A. L. B.

Fiddling His Hobby.

My boss had as a hobby violin playing. While dictating to me he would go all through the contortions of fiddling. If he wanted a pen he would ask me to hand him the bow. Sometimes, directing me to the book shelf, he would say, "Not there —a half a tone lower," or maybe, "Look an octave higher." Once when I asked if he wanted to add anything to a letter he replied absently, "Just a couple of measures more." But we got on together fine. I am not musical. K. G. R.

Liked a Variety.

The queerest one I ever worked for had a hobby for loud and fancy neckties. He would change his tie to suit the occasion. He kept a rack of neckties in the office, and I have known him to change six times in a single day. He was a lawyer, and often when told that a woman client was waiting to see him he would go to the rack, select the fanciest tie there, and change before he presented himself. He was never too busy to change his tie a number of times each day. H. O.

Under the Bed for a Long Nap.

The queerest man I ever worked for happened to be a woman. I acted as nurse and governess for her children for about a year and a half, and every day during that time she would wrap herself in a red blanket and roll under her bed for a long nap. In every other way she seemed as other women were. M. S. T.

Afraid of Powder.

The "queerest man" owned a department store and employed six girls and four boys. He was strongly opposed to the use of face powder, and told every girl he hired that she could not use powder and work for him. Five or six times every day he would stand us in a row in front of the window and wipe our faces with a black cloth and fire any girl he found that had any powder on. The boys seemed greatly amused whenever he called us girls into the office. W. M.

Little Drill on the Side.

He always had his force march in and out of the building in the morning, at noon, and at night, while he sang and kept time with his hands. If any of the force happened to get out of step that one was sent back to march in again, making it amusing for the rest. E. G. B.

Arithmetic Lesson Every Morning.

Every morning when the force gets to the office the employer has each one of us take turns in saying the multiplication tables both forward and backward. Arriving there the first morning, he called upon me to say the multiplication tables, and after I had finished he explained that it was his custom to have each employé go through this "singsong" every morning. N. B. R.

Filed His Love Letters.

The queerest man I ever worked for used to have his love letters filed with the regular business letters, much to the secret amusement and edification of his clerks, needless to say. It never seemed to occur to him that the filing clerk might be interested in more than the mere heading of any letter much less that she would divulge any of the contents. But the love letters were too much. Everybody in the place knew when a fresh letter was placed in the file. G. L. K.

He Surely Couldn't Solve It?

When my employer had a hard problem to think out he would get a book of puzzles and spend several minutes trying to solve one, then he would go on with his work, which apparently puzzled him no longer. One day while I was taking his dictation he suddenly stopped, doubtful how to proceed, then taking a Chinese laundry slip from his pocket he studied it a moment and the dictation proceeded rapidly. WHAT BOOZE DID TO ME

Married to Reform Him.

My home was ruined by drink. I made the foolish mistake of marrying a man to reform him. In two years he not only spent all he made but had sold nearly all the furniture, my clothes, and his—even sold the baby's go-cart for drink. I suffered the tortures of hell. My child was worse than fatherless.

At last I had him arrested after every thing else failed. Before the judge, he promised to do better, pleaded for another chance, and got it, but it was the same thing all over again. Finally, I left him, telling him that when he proved himself to be a man and could keep his promises then we would talk about living together.

That was four years ago, and he has not done any better yet.

If poor, silly girls like myself would only look into things more before marriage, how soon they would learn that there is no such thing as reforming a man who drinks, unless he, himself, wants to reform, and that "give me another chance" is only the final plea of the coward, the weakling, who would not refuse to take the first drink "just to be sociable." HELEN H.

Disfigured Baby for Life.

Booze got hold of me and caused me to be expelled from college twice. After this my father refused me further help and I went into business and when I was 20 I married. As the years went by I succeeded in business, but went on periodical sprees. My wife censured me, but as there were several children she stayed with me. Later I began drinking steadily and one day on my return home from a "booze celebration" my wife made a remark which angered me and I threw a glass at her. The glass hit my baby and cut a long gash just below the eye. My wife left me and sued for a divorce. I then gave up drink absolutely, but that did not bring back my wife and children, neither has time effaced the scar on my baby's face. He has grown almost to manhood and I often wonder what he thinks of a father who disfigured him for life. During the years of my loneliness I have plenty of time for introspection, and I would give all I have of this world's goods if I could only "blot out the past." I have one consolation and that is my children have profited by my mistakes. D. M. T.

Reform Came in Wilderness.

Booze put me "on the bum."

I studied for holy orders, sampled all the highwines there were to be had in an old distillery nearby, flunked in my studies, and went home in disgrace. My mother had decided that I should be a D. D., so after some months of rest and penance she returned me to the seminary, but I was not cut out for the cloth, so I took a junior professorship in a western university and taught young ideas "ooligies" and "isms." I was under the influence of booze all the time and lost out. I then took a job as traveling salesman. Booze lost it for me. Next I was steward in a state institution, but being half drunk all the time I was set out. Then I got in as bookkeeper in a large mercantile house. There I lost out once more. My next job was timekeeper on a grading gang. I was a fighter when half "tanked," so was discharged.

Then I shipped out with an excavating gang and eliminated booze from my daily routine. I studied conditions around me and saw that nine-tenths of my fellow-workers were reduced to their misery from too much booze, and gradually I began to drink less. Our gang was now way down in central New Mexico, far from a railroad and far from a saloon. The white glare that the sand gave back caused wrinkles to hover round the corners of men's eyes and the alkali water brought a taste of fever and bad dreams. I was just about to give in my time and walk to civilization when one day, riding out for provisions (I had advanced to commissary) I passed a schoolhouse and saw the teacher and the scholars. She breathed another life; I saw the crowded city; the flare of lights; the State street crowd, and right there I stopped and bared my head.

Our friendship began then. She braced me through the hardest period of my life —that little teacher—my little pal. There was no love between us, except the spiritual. Our souls were bared to each other. She left to be a missionary in foreign parts and I returned to my home with a firm resolve to booze no more. I kept that resolve. Today I am a minister, working among the lowest class on earth—the confirmed drunkards—and spurring me on is my wife, who was the little teacher. S.

Sweetheart Was Killed.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter printed on "What Booze Did to Me." Did it break your heart or lose you a son, a husband, or a sweetheart? Did you ever climb to success and then see drink annihilate it? Write on one side of the paper and address Drink Experience Editor, "The Sunday Tribune." No letters returned.

Several years ago I went from a little country town to Chicago to work in a millinery department. After working several months I met and became engaged to a young man, whom I trusted implicitly. It was he who urged me to take my first cocktail, then light wines, arguing that they were good for me. I then met his friends, and often we had dinners together.

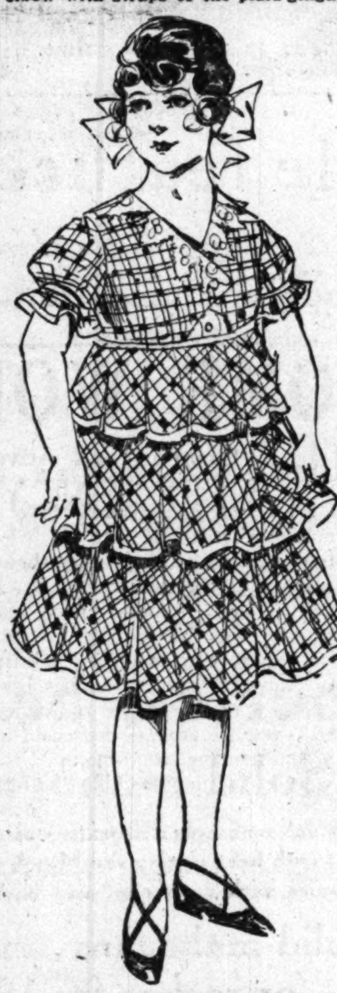
One night, after a lunch, in which liquor played an all too important part, six couples of us went out joy riding. We were all lightheaded enough, the men more so. I remember being sobered up considerably when we almost tipped over going over the railroad tracks. But, once over, it was soon forgotten. We must have gone several miles before, in my drunken state, I missed Theron. I commenced calling for him. The rest laughed and pushed me in my seat. From then on I became so sober I was almost frantic, for I had really cared for Theron. But there was no turning them back.

The next morning they found his mangled body close to the tracks. He had been hit by a train a few hours before. I came home shortly afterward, and have since been living quietly with my parents. But I shudder when I see reckless drivers or joy riders pass the house shouting or singing, for I think how soon they may be silenced.

Please withhold my name from publication, for it would kill my parents. MISS E. S.

Plaid Design for Child's Dress.

Scotch plaid ginghams are particularly stylish right now and this is a particularly pretty manifestation of the Highland material. It is of blue and white and green design and the three full ruffles which make up the skirt are corded with the same and join the skirt to the diminutive bodice. The silk of the underblouse is white and the sleeves are held in at the elbow with straps of the plaid gingham.



A soft rolling collar of the silk outlines the neck and a bow of silk ribbon catches the fronts of the bodice together. A dress of this kind is extremely serviceable in that it may possess several underblouses and serve in this way for occasions dressy and occasions ordinary.

Here is your chance to try your hand and mind in the gentle art of prophesying, to express your notions about the war without hurting any one's feelings, and TO WIN $100 if you are CORRECT.

YOU have often heard the statement, "The war will change the map of Europe." It undoubtedly will. And it probably will change to a certain extent the map of the rest of the world. But how?

Will Germany retain Belgium as an integral part of the German empire, or withdraw and leave the country to build itself up as a kingdom again? Will Austria-Hungary lose Galicia or absorb Serbia? Will a new state of Poland be formed by treaty as a buffer state between Germany, Austria, and Russia? Will France gain back Alsace-Lorraine? Will England acquire land on the continent or lose Scotland, Ireland, or the Suez canal? Will Turkey be forced back into Asia, and, if so, to what country will Constantinople be given? Will Norway, Sweden, and Denmark be drawn into the war and their territory apportioned among the winners or increased as one of the winners? Will England, France, Germany, or Russia yield some of their colonial possessions?

THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE will pay $100 for the prophecy regarding the change in national possessions that most nearly approximates the change which the war will effect. You should send your prophecy or prophecies in at an early date. The map printed on this page may be used, or you may draw another one. In either case, you may supplement your map with written matter. THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE will hold them until the peace conference that will put an end to the war decides upon the changes to be made in the map. Then your prophecy or prophecies will be compared with the reality, and the person sending the prophecy that is most nearly correct will receive the $100.

From time to time THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE will publish some of the maps submitted in the contest. In addition to protecting the authors of the maps in their chances for the prize, THE TRIBUNE will pay $1 for every map published.

The questions suggested above are only some of the more obvious ones that will confront the contestants for the prize. Your chances of winning the $100 will depend largely upon your knowledge of the progress of the war, the issues involved, and the relative strength of the contending armies. Also your knowledge of the feeling of the neutral nations toward the belligerents will be of benefit to you inasmuch as it will enable you to determine whether more nations will become involved in the war and with what result in the final settlement.

Your prophecy necessarily will have to do with the colonial possessions of the great powers, and as an aid in that direction the colonies of nations now engaged in the conflict are given:

GREAT BRITAIN (England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland)—Gibraltar, Island of Malta, Cyprus, Egypt, Suez, Gambia, Nigeria, Gold Coast, Sierra Leone, British South Africa, British East Africa, Aden (Arabia), Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, British Somaliland, India, Burma, Malay peninsula, northern Borneo, Hongkong, Wei-Hai-Wei, British New Guinea, Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, Chatham islands, Fiji islands, Gilbert islands, Ellice islands, New Hebrides islands, Tonga islands, Lord Howe islands, Chagos archipelago, Seychelles and Mahe islands, Mauritius island, Nicobar island, Andaman island, Ceylon, Maldive island, Tristan da Cunha island, Ascension island, St. Helena island, Falkland islands, British Guiana, British Honduras, Dominica island, Grenada island, Jamaica island, St. Vincent island, Tobago island, Trinidad island, Barbuda island, Dominion of Canada, Pitcairn island, Fanning island, Christmas island, Manihiki island, Cook island, Union islands, Duciel island.

GERMANY—Togoland, Cameroons, German Southwest Africa, German East Africa, Kaiser Wilhelm's Land (New Guinea), Caroline islands, Bismarck archipelago, Marshall islands, Ladrone islands, Kiao-Chau.

FRANCE—Algeria, Sahara, Ivory Coast, French Congo, Madagascar, Comorro island, Reunion island, French Somililand, French Indo-China, French New Hebrides islands, New Caledonia, French Guiana, Martinique island, Guadaloupe island, Tuamotu archipelago, Marquesas island, Society island, Austral island.

PORTUGAL—Azores islands, Angola (South Africa), Portuguese East Africa, Cape Verde islands, Madeira islands.

Comment by Mme. X.

By Mme. X.

THE feathered bipeds of Chicago will be surprised a few weeks hence when their nest building time begins to find that other local bipeds have started nest building ahead of them. Every spring sees new structures of all kinds going up—factories, business blocks, apartments, houses, and so forth. But this season apartment buildings in that long untenanted waste between Chicago avenue and East Oak street will soon be springing up like mushrooms.

In Pearson street, in Delaware place, in Walton place, and in that part of East Oak street which is called the lake shore drive, more or less pretentious apartment buildings are beginning to soar skyward. Already the steady, short, sharp bark of the pile driver is heard all day and nearly all night in the district, for the quality of that made land is not such as to insure firm foundations unless reinforced.

What is, however, from the point of view of a society column, the most important architectural achievement on the carpet just now is the founding of a new neighborhood in Lake View avenue. There is general interest in the project undertaken by Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, the Frederic C. Bartletts, George Porter, Abram Poole, Harry Dangler, and (presumably) Ambrose Cramer Jr., to colonize a most attractive piece of land which lies a little south of Diversey parkway and which faces Lincoln park at its narrowest and the lake.

George Porter will occupy the north sixty feet, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson the south forty-five feet, while the intervening space will be devoted thirty feet each to the Bartletts and Mr. Poole, and twenty-five each to Messrs. Dangler and Cramer.

In spite of reports to the contrary, there is to be nothing in common except a central heating plant—unless you also except a uniform architectural scheme. This is going to be smart and effective. All the five houses will be like some of those old London houses in the Inner Temple—wise, clever, sophisticated, self-respecting buildings that have come down from the time of the regency.

They will have English basements. The first story will be built of white stone, the three floors above will be of black brick jointed with white. There will be white cornices and the narrow window-ledges will be of white stone. To lighten it all the iron balconies of the first floor will be painted a vivid bluish green to match the shutters, which will give further color. Blue jars with flowering shrubs will adorn some of the balconies.

Each interior is being designed to suit the owner. The four inside houses will have central glazed courts, which will be unique features and which will give light to middle rooms usually dark in houses so situated. These glazed courts will be treated differently, according to the taste of the owner.

Frederic Bartlett plans to make a picture gallery of his. Harry Dangler has a vision of turning his into a blossoming winter garden. Abram Poole in his mind's eye sees his a stately hall with ancient renaissance furniture and tapestries. Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Poole will each have an up to date studio in his house, while Mrs. Ryerson plans turning a part of the fourth floor of her house into a workshop, where she can continue her work in setting precious stones, which she does with great skill and taste.

The garages will be well to the rear and out of hearing. The architects, Messrs. Dangler and Adler, hope to begin to break ground in April. At any rate, most of the houses will be ready for occupancy in the autumn.

The Frederic Bartletts are in no hurry to leave their charming Dutch house in Prairie avenue. Mr. Bartlett was born and brought up on the south side. However, his father, A. C. Bartlett, has been kept away from Chicago lately by ill health, so that his strongest reason for staying on the south side is much weakened.

Other stanch south siders who are finally yielding to the current are Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hibbard Jr. Mr. Hibbard is going to build a big apartment building on the corner of Fullerton avenue and Lincoln park west, and he and his wife ultimately will occupy one of the apartments. This will be a serious loss to the Hibbard colony in Prairie avenue, where Mrs. Hibbard's children years ago settled down around the old family mansion. The Gregorys, Stirlings, and Casselberrys are still left there. But automobiles have done so much to abolish distance nowadays that the defection will not be as irremediable as it might otherwise be.

Speaking of family residences; old Chicago society, that element which antedates the fire and goes far back even to antebellum days—an element too often overlooked by the self-assertion of the present—is rejoicing in the fact that the charming old Isham house on the corner of Dearborn avenue and Walton place is to continue to shelter members of the Isham family.

The house was one of the fine residences of its day. It was built shortly after the fire by the late Dr. George Isham, and in it were reared his four children, Dr. George S. Isham, Ralph Isham, Mrs. Arthur Farwell, and Mrs. George A. Carpenter.

It is the last named who is taking over the family home and is going to remodel it to the tastes and requirements of today. Holabird & Roche, who are in charge of the work, will give it the ground floor entrance so popular today in made-over houses. The two drawing rooms on the south side of the main floor are to be thrown into one big music room. Mrs. Carpenter will preserve the old time atmosphere of the house while making it comfortable and up to date.

The haste with which one generation is apt to abandon the homes built by a preceding generation is an American weakness. No new house ever has quite the charm, the distinction, and flavor of one that has sheltered two or more generations of people, no matter how splendid your new house may be.

A tangible symbol of that past with which the Isham house is so associated is the three great palm trees which once belonged to the late Ezra B. McCagg, and which during her stay here Mrs. McCagg finally settled in permanent homes, one going to the Children's Memorial hospital and two to the Art institute.

One of them, the tallest one, is over fifty years old, having been bought by Mr. McCagg some years before the fire. All three stood in the charming conservatory which opened out of the dining room of his home in Cass street. Such times as they had accommodating these growing palms! They lowered floors and raised ceilings, and even occasionally cut down the palms so as to be able to keep them in their cool green glass alcove.

Did you ever hear of a "kennel maid"? No more did we. But she is a regular institution in England, her duties being to bathe, brush, comb, feed, and air the dogs of a city household. Not only that, but for some mysterious reason it makes a difference whether she be Catholic or Protestant, one advertisement reading: "Wanted, a kennel maid; must be Protestant." Viewed from a certain angle, it seems almost easier not to have a dog. That Protestant kennel maid presents an aspect of possible complications in the average American ménage.

Perhaps animals are not so indispensable to us Americans as to the English, but when we like them, we like them tremendously. The three Misses Peck (Anna, Josephine, and Haroldine), who were here recently, are an evidence of this. They usually travel with two or three dogs. This time they brought only one, but they shortened their stay in this country and hastened back to their home in Scotland because they got word that their eighteen dogs were lonely without them. When they engage a cook they don't ask as to her culinary accomplishments, but whether she can cook liver and other food suitable for canine digestions. Every day they see personally to the feeding of their eighteen pets.

They have also opened their house in London for the benefit of convalescent soldiers and are taking an active interest in the care of their warrior guests.

These three attractive young women are the daughters of the late Harold Peck and sisters of Mrs. William Farquhar, formerly of Chicago, now of New York.

Mrs. Bryan Lathrop is noted for her quiet, unremitting philanthropy. Her attention having been lately drawn to the valiant efforts of the women who are running the two Red Cross sewing shops, which give daily employment to an average of 100 destitute women, Mrs. Lathrop opened her house at 120 Bellevue place last Wednesday afternoon and gathered together about seventy-five of her friends to enlist their aid in the support of these important enterprises.

Of threefold value is the work. It gives employment to women in distress—many of them hungry and insufficiently clad. It teaches some of them to sew and it provides garments for local charities and for the Red Cross work in Europe.

One shop was founded in October at the Eli Bates settlement in West Elm street and has been largely supported by Mrs. H. H. Porter and Mrs. George Isham, while Mrs. Russell Tyson has devoted much time to organizing the shop and keeping it running. Each day are turned away from ten to twenty women seeking work there, as only the most in want are taken on.

The other shop was started by the emergency employment bureau organized by the Chicago Woman's club. To this enterprise Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter has devoted her whole winter, foregoing all social life to devote herself entirely to this work. Each week day she has left home at 9 in the morning and returned at 6 p. m.

To give daily employment to 100 women at a dollar a day means that a good deal of money has to be raised every week to pay for the materials used as well as for the wages of the workers. The effort at the meeting on Wednesday was to get promises of regular aid for a definite time. Mrs. Carpenter, Mrs. Tyson, Mrs. Depage of Belgium, and Mrs. John J. O'Connor of the Red Cross spoke.

Among those present were Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Miss Katherine Meeker, Mrs. John M. Clark, Mrs. Hugh McBirney, Mrs. George Isham, Mrs. Arthur Farwell, Mrs. Malcolm Caruthers, Mrs. Robert Cary, Mrs. Dunlap Smith, Miss Helen Cudahy, and Miss Harriet Houghteling.

The next lecture of the Chicago Equal Suffrage association will be on Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. Charles Hamill, when Kellogg Fairbank will speak on the work of the Municipal Voters' league—a subject on which he is peculiarly able to dilate, as he has been for many years actively associated with it.

This spring he has given up his extremely absorbed participation in the labors of this body and is for the first time in many seasons enjoying freedom and a measure of family life. Heretofore from early in the spring campaign until election day his hearthstone has not known him and it was only the public spirit of his wife which enabled her to acquiesce cheerfully in what amounted to an eight weeks' exile of Mr. Fairbank from domestic and social life.

The Casino Saturday table d'hôte luncheons promise to be a successful innovation, coming as they do at a time when society functions are not so frequent as earlier in the season.

News of the Chicago Women's Clubs

By Inez Travers.

THE Lake View Woman's club, like a great many other clubs which are doing philanthropic work, grew out of a literary circle that was founded some twenty years ago. From the moment it became a club it began to do things in social service.

The first work undertaken was the establishment of a kindergarten and nursery in the district called Clay Holes. This work was indorsed by business men of the neighborhood, who gave liberally to help the work. The board of education was induced by the club to pay a director and furnish supplies. The club paid the other expenses, and a month after the kindergarten the nursery was opened. The kindergarten grew until the school board took care of it as part of the Perry school.

Answering the appeal of the Chicago Woman's club, this club took charge of the emergency relief work at 80 Elm street.

After the charter was taken out the club created in addition to its philanthropy department the departments of science and philosophy and education and home.

A sewing class which met in the kindergarten was one of the first works of the philanthropy department. The class met on Saturday afternoon and was well attended. It cost the club $115 a year, but the good it accomplished was farreaching.

The club now has a study class, in which the members are much interested. The literary and social activities are made enjoyable by carefully planned programs. The club is affiliated with many organizations, among them the Municipal Art league.

Many interesting programs are given. On March 16 there will be a lecture on "The Psychopathic Child," by Dr. W. J. Hickson of the Municipal court psychopathic laboratory. March 16 will be view day at the Art institute. April 13 there will be a sketch presented by the members of the young woman's auxiliary, called "Our Daughters."

The officers of the club are as follows: Mrs. Frederick H. Gansbergen, president; Mrs. Lafayette S. Berry, first vice president; Mrs. Wesley M. Thomas, second vice president; Mrs. W. M. Hopkins, recording secretary; Mrs. George A. McCorkle, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George W. Williams, treasurer; Mrs. William E. Fisher, auditor.

Nemo CORSETS Stand Alone!

THESE three models—among the best-known Nemos—date back four, five and ten years. Details have been conformed to changing fashions, construction and fabrics improved; but the hygienic features have remained the same.

These models are in greater demand today than ever before.

What does that mean?

It means that women who have worn them can't do without them. There is no substitute—no other corset can give equal style, ease, long wear, and HYGIENIC SERVICE.

Through all the foolish corset fads the Nemo has come out stronger, more popular than ever.

Three models that are friends of millions

No 322 $3.00

NEW YORK SOCIETY.

By Mme. Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There have been a number of emergency calls sent in for assistance to the unemployed. All of the fashionably unemployed have been working to aid those who are out of jobs from other circumstances than choice. Earnest faced women have determinedly boarded elevators of the Waldorf, where they have disembarked at the parlor floor and danced like mad for two hours with men who constitute America's leisure class. For the privilege of this employment they pay from $2 to $5 each.

They belong to a group who need employment so much that they are willing to pay for it, and the money goes to tide over those who need employment so desperately that they would work for practically nothing. Discussion on this thesis belongs to a sociological and not to a society department.

What I had started to say was that all hands were called out to work for the unemployed, even the fashionable dogs of New York. They have had their attention called to the desperate situation of wage earners owing to unsettled conditions, have graciously held council in private kennels, and have decided to take action.

Imported and home bred champions will place themselves on view for the benefit of charity at the Seventy-first armory next Friday and Saturday. The little Jap dog of Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt Jr. will show himself alongside the sheep dog of Mrs. Vincent Astor. Each will be in his elegant temporary quarters and each will conduct himself with that hauteur which indicates that while he is perfectly willing to participate in affairs of a democratic nature he will by no means be a democrat himself. Snobbery and class are no more offensively demonstrated than among the dog four hundred.

Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont celebrated the fifth anniversary of their marriage on Friday. They were hosts at a dinner-dance, which took place in their handsome stone residence in Fifth avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan entertained at a dinner-dance at their residence, 231 Madison avenue. The block on which their place is situated (one is almost tempted to call it an estate) has never looked the same to me since the death of the head of the house. The home of this younger arbiter of finance stands next door to the solemn brown stone dwelling of the man who made the name of Morgan famous. Back of it is the celebrated Morgan library, low standing, new, and of pale colored stone.

The aspect of this triangle of buildings has not changed in years. The windows smile just as austerely, the flunkies stand at the porte cochere just as seriously as on the day when the great man died. They had been conducting themselves in just the same aspect for years. But those who are sensitive to effects say there is a difference—the spirit of the place is changed. The force which made itself felt so potently in Wall street was a factor in its own neighborhood as well, and now that it is no more the little children in the streets seem to feel the absence of its dynamic sway. They used to wait on the curb for the great man to come out to his motor, and now they play quite indiscriminately about the block, not distinguishing the house of the millionaire from countless others.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt and Mr. and Mrs. J. Laurence Van Alen have returned from Augusta, Ga. James J. Van Alen is cruising along the South American coast on board his steam yacht Virginia. He expects to open Wakehurst, his Newport villa, next summer.

One confidently expects Miss Eleanor Sears to be at least one of the sensations of every Newport season. If she isn't talked about for her highly tailored, rather masculine looking attire, or her swimming and other athletic accomplishments, rumor is sure to concern itself with whether she is going to marry Harold Vanderbilt, son of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont.

Now that the war has cut off foreign travel and turned the attention of our rich and great toward their own country we are having a perfectly good Newport season in the midst of winter. The only difference between this and the summer season is that the present activities do not take place in Newport at all, but on Coronado beach, California. The polite world of America has largely retired to the west this winter, where it is introducing its innocent pastimes to an astonished and unsuspecting world, which has hitherto been taken up with its own practical affairs.

Miss Eleanor Sears is one of our easterners who is now astonishing the coast. So is Mrs. Devereux Milburn, wife of the polo player, who was Miss Nancy Steele. Among Miss Sears' other accomplishments is that of throwing dice. Last week she and Mrs. Milburn, according to advices from friends, had a little outdoor game, as a result of which a polo pony changed hands. Miss Sears got it. Word does not say whether it is from the stable of the famous player or was merely the private possession of his wife.

At any rate, Miss Sears will presently have opportunity to use it, for there are going to be some matches held on Coronado beach that are going to draw most of those entered in the social register of New York. Harry Payne Whitney, who never let a continent or an ocean stand between him and a good game, is now on his way to the scene of action.

As if Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont did not have enough houses already, she has now bought one on Long island. A few years ago she had an altercation with the owners of a high office building because, after paying something like $25,000 a year for a suite of rooms for her suffrage society, they would not allow her to fly the suffrage flag from the top of the edifice.

To calm her pique she went round the corner from this building and bought two houses in Forty-first street at a cost of tens of thousands of dollars. She threw them into one, where she established an elaborate headquarters and incidentally flew the suffrage flag from the roof, where on certain days, when the wind blows from the East river, the flag flutters into the very office suite of the anti-suffrage owner of the high Fifth avenue building where Mrs. Belmont rented of yore.

Besides these houses she has a residence in Madison avenue and two in Newport, one of which belonged to Mr. Belmont and has for years been boarded up. There are others—I have quite lost track of them—villas at one place and another in Europe.

Now comes the announcement of her latest purchase of Briar Knoll, the highest point with one exception on the north shore of Long island. During the Spanish-American war the government planned to fortify it. Now Mrs. Belmont has decided to beautify it and make it one of the show places of this lovely and fashionable region.

No collection of State spoons should omit the Michigan State spoon. Sister State of Illinois, Michigan stands 22nd in area and 8th in population. It leads the world in the production of copper and iron. Owing to its position between Lakes Michigan and Huron its climate is much milder than its latitude would indicate, and this favorable climate is responsible for its foremost position as a fruit growing state. The automobile industry has given a tremendous impetus to the growth of the state in recent years.

Dumb Merchants

It might well be said that "there are none so dumb as they who will not speak."

There are merchants who would consider themselves sorely afflicted if they could not talk, yet who willfully and deliberately place themselves in the silent ranks of the non-advertisers.

In the modern business world the non-advertiser is like the unfortunate mute; but with this added handicap:

His failure to utilize this powerful modern weapon—publicity—is a reflection on his courage and intelligence.

His voluntary silence—his failure to tell his story to the world—encourages belief that his story will not stand scrutiny.

For a merchant's proposition must have substantial merit if it is to be advertised successfully in The Chicago Tribune. It is there subjected to the censorship of both The Tribune and The Tribune's highly intelligent body of readers, trained to demand sincerity and cleanliness in advertising.

Tribune readers know that Tribune advertisers are the livest, most progressive, most responsible of all those seeking their patronage.

THERE will be eager expectancy in hearing today the opening sermon of the pastorate of the Rev. George Herbert Thomas, the newly appointed rector of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church, Dorchester avenue and East Fiftieth street, who succeeds the Rt. Rev. Herman Page, consecrated Jan. 24 missionary bishop of Spokane. Bishop Page was rector of St. Paul's parish for fourteen years and left to his successor one of the strongest and most active churches in the Chicago diocese.

The Rev. Mr. Thomas was graduated from Yale university with the degree of bachelor of arts in 1895, receiving his degree of master of arts in 1898. In the same year in which he received his master's de-theological school, Cambridge, with the degree of bachelor of divinity. He was also made deacon the same year. In 1899 he was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop William Lawrence, bishop of Massachusetts.

He began his ministry as assistant at St. Mark's church, Minneapolis, but soon became rector of All Saints' church, Minneapolis, remaining there seven years. Since 1906 he has been rector of Christ church, Fitchburg, Mass.

The members of the St. Paul's vestry are: Jesse Holdom, senior warden; A. Stamford White, junior warden; A. J. W. Copeland, C. Gurney Fellows, W. R. Townley, C. H. Lawrence, John H. Hibbard, J. C. Caruthers; D. J. Molloy, A. H. Noyes, Isham Randolph, and J. H. Brauvert.

The Rev. Frederick Kalbfleisch, who is pastor of the First Reformed church at 1517-21 Hastings street, will celebrate today with special services morning and evening the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the ministry.

The church in which he was ordained is the Reformed church of Stone Creek, O., where he served his first pastorate for three years. The Stone Creek church will celebrate its centennial anniversary next June and the Rev. Mr. Kalbfleisch will be one of the speakers at the celebration. The church was founded in 1815.

The Rev. Mr. Kalbfleisch has been pastor of the First Reformed church, Chicago, for thirteen years. He came to Chicago from Indianapolis, where he had been pastor for nine years.

During his pastorate he has officiated at 692 baptisms, 417 confirmations, 682 funerals, and 471 marriages.

At the quarter centennial anniversary celebration today the Rev. H. H. Hollinger of Waukegan, Ill., will preach an anniversary sermon in German at 10:30 o'clock. In the evening at 8 o'clock the Rev. Ellis S. Hay, pastor of the Grace Reformed church, will preach in English. Pleiades lodge, 478, A. F. and A. M., will attend the evening service. Paul F. Neuffer, past master of the lodge, will speak. Others who will have part in the services are C. Hubenthal, president of the congregation; the Rev. C. A. Koenig, pastor of the Evangelical Zion church; the Rev. E. A. Schipper, pastor of the Dutch Reformed church, and the Rev. John E. Traeger, pastor of the Third German Reformed church. The choir of the First Reformed church will sing at both services.

The Rev. Horace G. Smith is pastor of the North Shore Methodist Episcopal church at Glencoe, which will be dedicated today by Bishop William F. McDowell. The church building is of stone and cost $35,000. The design is modified English Gothic of the Tudor period. It is located at Hazel and Greenleaf avenues, with the main entrance in Hazel avenue.

The church lot is 100 by 150 feet and preserves intact an oak tree which is regarded by the residents of Glencoe as one of the historic landmarks. The auditorium with the extension afforded by the Sunday school and social rooms will seat 500 persons.

The name North Shore church was given because it is the purpose to serve a congregation drawn from a territory between Highwood on the north and Wilmette on the south.

The first services of the church were held Dec. 5, 1909. The church was formally organized March 18, 1910. Ministers who served the church as nonresident pastors were the Rev. S. B. Edmondson, the Rev. James O'May, and the Rev. E. C. E. Dorion. The Rev. Mr. Smith is the first pastor to live in the village and give all of his time to the administration of the church.

On the committee of the new church building were William A. Fox, president; St. John Powers, treasurer; Sperry B. Pope, vice president; William S. Hamm, secretary; J. Fred McGuire, Don E. Marsh and Clark T. Northrup.

There will be three services today, at 10:45, 3, and 7:30 o'clock. The morning sermon will be preached by the Rev. L. F. W. Lesemann, district superintendent. Bishop McDowell will preach at 3 o'clock and the Rev. John Thompson, secretary of the Chicago Home Missionary and Church Extension society, will preach in the evening. The Rev. William J. Davidson, professor in Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston; the Rev. William B. Leach, and the Rev. A. A. McCallum will also assist.

A fellowship dinner will be held tomorrow evening, at which the Rev. J. S. Dancey will speak, and on Thursday evening there will be an informal reception. The Rev. Dan B. Brummitt will preach next Sunday morning, and a church and community service will be held in the evening, addressed by Principal Arthur B. Rowell, the Rev. A. A. McCallum, and the Rev. D. H. Cornell.

Tabloid Book Review

by Fanny Butcher

The Creator of "Ruggles of Red Gap."

HARRY LEON WILSON, author of RUGGLES OF RED GAP"

HARRY LEON WILSON is so modest that if it weren't for communicative friends of his we'd not know much about him. One of them who "knew him when he wore knee pants and apparently had no other object in life except to read, chuckle to himself, and grow fat" vouchsafes the assurance that he is not English, as some folks think he must be from his "Ruggles of Red Gap" (Doubleday-Page). His father came from New York state to Illinois. Harry was born in Oregon, about 100 miles from Chicago. His home town wasn't proud of him, for he wouldn't go to school. The first money he ever earned—$1—was paid for the arduous task of setting half a column of type. He studied stenography, but he didn't do anything with it except to keep it on hand when he went with the men sent out to the wild Sierra Nevada country to write a life of Fremont. Before any one knew it he was sending stories to the east and getting them accepted. Puck offered him a job on the staff, and he's just gone on writing best sellers and jaunting off to Europe. With Booth Tarkington he wrote that shekel luring "The Man from Home." His early books were illustrated by Rose Cecil O'Neal, the Kewpies' mamma, who later became Mrs. Wilson. She isn't any more, though. Mr. Wilson, with a new, charming, and talented wife, is one of the colony of authors and artists living on the coast a few hours' ride from San Francisco. And this is the way he'd look if you met him in the woods.

In William B. Parker's "Edward Rowland Sill, His Life and Work" (Houghton-Mifflin), may be found this bit of literary pessimism from Sill's poetic heart: "The trouble is, nobody agrees with anything he reads unless he agreed with it beforehand—so what's the use?"

"Children of Earth" (Macmillan), the play for which Winthrop Ames presented Miss Alice Brown of Boston with $10,000, is now available in book form. When she was interviewed about writing it, Miss Brown said: "It's all in a day's work, just a part of my ordinary prosaic everyday work. I have always liked plays and I began this one some time before I heard of the prize which Mr. Ames offered. I finished it up and sent it in at the last moment, and then I went on with my next piece of work, that's all."

It appears that Maurice Maeterlinck does not like to speak in public. In a recent letter declining an invitation to lecture in England, he says: "After two minutes' speaking in public I lose my voice entirely. It is a painful spectacle which one ought to spare any audience however indulgent."

The war seen through the eyes of a clumsy, droll Belgian puppy, forced into canine manhood by the need of his country, is told in "Pierrot, Dog of Belgium" (Doubleday-Page), by Walter A. Dyer. Those of us who saw the amazing exploits of the trained dogs in THE TRIBUNE war pictures will be ready to believe that very understanding hearts indeed beat under the shaggy breasts.

A debate on the Nietzschean philosophy between Cecil Chesterton, the brother of G. K. C., and John Cowper Powys, author of "Visions and Revisions" (Shaw), lately a-lecturing to Chicago on things litrary, ought to be worth listening to. Unfortunately it's in New York!

Leonid Andreyev, whose "Anathema" (Macmillan) found many readers in this country, has a new war play called "King Law and Liberty," in which two of the characters are said to represent Maurice Maeterlinck and the king of Belgium.

Ernest Poole's "The Harbor" (Macmillan) has the distinction of being nominated by reviewers as the "best American novel that has appeared in many a long day." It is—remarkably—Mr. Poole's first book.

With nearly 1,000 German newspapers forced to cease publication on account of the war, those who have leisure to read are forced to turn to books. The Berliner Tageblatt recommends to its readers literature warranted to direct the minds of the people into suitable channels of thought. The history of Germany should be read, especially that of Frederick II. Goethe, Bismarck, Luther, and Dante are recommended and foreign novels which treat of war, notably Tolstoi's "War and Peace" and Zola's "The "Débâcle." A German philosopher urges readers to inform themselves about their enemies by reading "Gulliver's Travels" and Voltaire.

The "Khaki library" has been started by an enterprising English publisher who saw the relation between the spare moments of recruits and convalescent soldiers and spare shillings. It is a series of standard and popular novels from the entertaining pens of Ouida, Wilkie Collins, Sir Walter Besant et al., and each volume may be had for 1 shilling.

David Pinski's Yiddish play, "The Treasure" (B. W. Huebsch) is soon to be published in an English translation by Ludwig Lewisohn of the Ohio State university. Special interest attaches itself to the English version of it, for the play had its first performance in Berlin under Max Reinhardt, and was highly praised by such a seasoned critic as Paul Schlenther.

Robert Harborough Sherard, an early friend of Oscar Wilde's, has written a biography of him which is called good. Wilde's elder brother, he says, was a greater genius than Oscar, but wrote only as a Paris correspondent of a London daily. He could give you a splendid plot, entire, for a novel or a play at a moment's notice.

Willard H. Wright's "What Nietzsche Taught" (Huebsch) is a summary of the eighteen volumes from the philosopher's pen. It is said to be invaluable to those who want to know enough of Nietsche to be able to talk about him after dinner.

Miss Anne Morgan has entered the field of authorship with "The American Girl" (Harpers), in which she points out the failings of educational methods in home and school, shows the danger of too much freedom and the need of wisely planned recreation. She believes that a girl should be trained to be economically independent.

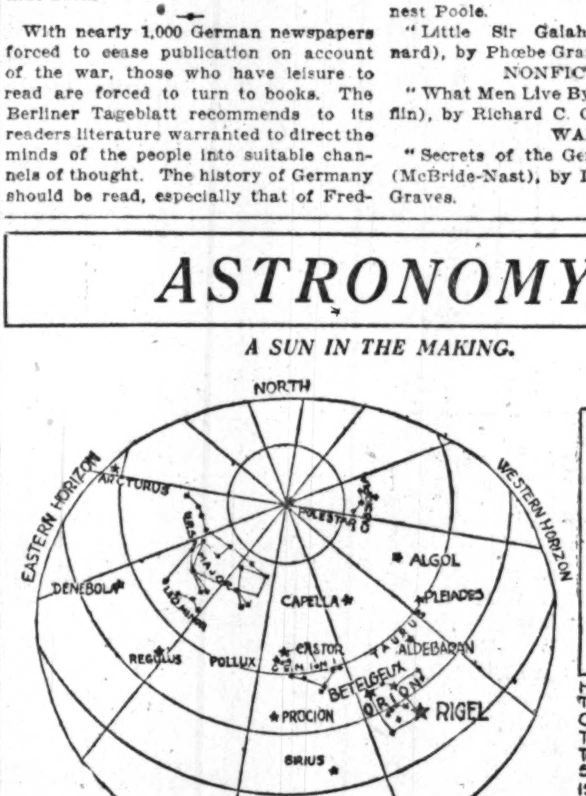
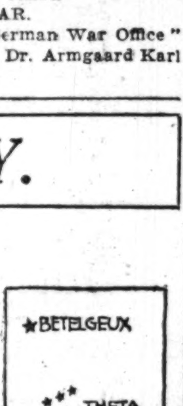
ASTRONOMY.

A SUN IN THE MAKING.



POSITION OF ORION AT 8 OCLOCK TONIGHT



HOW ORION LOOKS TO ORDINARY OBSERVATION. THE ARROW POINTS TO THETA IN THE SWORD. THIS STAR IS INVOLVED IN THE LIGHT OF THE GREAT NEBULA.

THE great constelaltion Orion, a winter spectacle, is leaving the evening sky, but is still visible in the west in the earlier part of the night.

What the eye readily traces in the constellation are the great stars Betelgeux and Rigel, the belt of Orion, and the sword hanging therefrom. The belt presents three stars in line. It is three degrees long, two degrees less than the space between the pointers of the Big Dipper.

The middle star in the short sword or hunting knife pendant from the belt is known as Theta. It glows in a misty light, the light of the great nebula of Orion, one of the two nebulæ visible to the unaided eye. A good opera glass will develop it. Through a telescope it reveals itself as a wonderful spectacle.

By identifying Theta one may be put in possession of the view of a sun in the making. It is enveloped in the glow of a nebula which presents the beginning of the history of a star.

A swarm of meteorites, yielding to their gravitational attraction, are colliding. Their composition is that of cold bodies, which is complex, containing the chemical elements we know on earth. These cold and complex bodies, finding a common center of gravitation, rush toward it and in the resulting collisions heat is created.

The temperature rises as the action continues and in the terrific heat the complex elements of the cold bodies are dissolved and simplified. In the fusion and heat there is a new birth. A live star comes out of death. The mass is resolved into the hottest, simplest form.

Elements and proto-elements disappear. Proto-nickel, proto-vanadium, and proto-manganese disappear. Proto-magnesium, silicon, and oxygen take their place. They disappear and finally there is a sun in the simplicity of hydrogen and dissociated hydrogen, with but small quantities of any other elements.

When meteorites cease to feed it, when it has become an incadescent gas, it turns cooler and joins the receding procession of suns. In the middle of the sword of Orion there is revealed the evidence of a sun in the making.

In the middle of the belt of Orion there is the hottest sun we see, one which, having reached its stage of incandescent gas at the highest attainable temperature, is cooling off. That is Alnitam.

ART

By Anne Ellis.

NOT long ago I heard the lorgnetted representative of culture (capital C, if you please) talking about art with volubility. Among other things she said, "I always make a point of going to the Chicago exhibit because there is apt to be one or two pretty good things by artists who will some day know how to paint."

If she went to the exhibition now in progress at the Art institute with any degree of sincerity, which is doubtful, or if she went at all, which I also doubt, she must have been chagrined to find a number of things by a number of artists who already know how to paint very well indeed.

The exhibit is by far the most satisfying ever held. The showings of other years have been encouraging, but this exhibition is the dawn of Chicago's artistic day. It has been coming upon us gradually; the shackles of conventionality, insincerity, and fear have been falling away until we have at least that which foreshadows originality. Once we had "Lake Como" and the "Grand Canal," now we have "The Lake Front at Twelfth Street" and the Field museum through a snowstorm.

This, however, is only the visible sign of the invisible, salutary change which is taking place. It is the sort of exhibition that speaks well for the public as well as for the artists.

There is something for every one in the exhibit—it is so varied that no matter what your taste is you are not apt to be disappointed. It will warrant a number of visits and revisits before you have thoroughly exhausted its possibilities. In a word, you could go every day for a month and find something new to see and remember.

Some of the prizes have been awarded. To Miss Lucie Hartrath for the "Leafy Screen," the Mrs. Julius Rosenwald prize; to Wilson Irvine the Clyde M. Carr prize for the "Woodland Road"; to Frank V. Dudley the Edward B. Butler prize for "The Willows."

Avid Nyholm's "At the Dressing Table" is beautiful in its smoothness and color harmony. His selections of green and yellows is especially happy as a background for the auburn haired girl at her mirror. It is one of the few pictures that I have ever seen with a number of articles in a small space that does not look stuffy.

"A Morning in Summer" and "Over the Mountains," by Adam Emory Albright, recall instantly all the fresh green springs and gay little songs of one's childhood. "The Morning in Summer" gives the actual impression of heat.

Alfred Jansson has four pictures of winter all deserving of praise and, strangely enough, almost equally so.

One of the most conspicuously artistic bits in the whole exhibit is "Winter," by Albert H. Schmidt. It is the Field museum from a viewpoint that only an artist would have chosen. In the foregoing are two gnarled willow trees and some low red brick buildings that Mr. Schmidt had converted from squalor to rich beauty.

The hanging committee, probably in order not to kill the more subdued pictures by hanging strong ones among them, has made the grave mistake of putting all the highly colored works in a room so small that there is little or no wall space between them.

The result is that when you enter you feel as if you are being subjected to a great deal more than the normal fifteen pounds of pressure per square inch on your body; the air is surcharged with color. It is quite unfair, as it makes the visitor unwilling to give more than a casual attention to this room, which contains a number of good things. "Spring's Beauty Misty Morn," by E. J. F. Timmons, and the "Lake Front at Twelfth Street," by A. F. Tellander, are both deserving of more conspicuous places. The latter is remarkable for its cleanness of coloring and a most realistic sky. It is a joyous picture.

The sculpture exhibit, too, suffers from overcrowding. It has advanced equally with the exhibition of painting over other years. The work that stands out most conspicuously is that of Sidney Bedore, especially the piece called "A New Study." The entries of George Mulligan are marked by strong individuality. Frank L. Ingels has a charming model for a children's fountain. The two monuments of music by John G. Prasuhn and Guido Rebechini, though totally different, are of almost equal merit.

The Gallia Furniture Co.'s High Grade Bedroom Furniture at Half

Few furniture factories had a higher reputation for making really good furniture, the kind that will last year in and year out, that is constructed with thoroughness and care, in a manner that is itself a guarantee of worthfulness and finished in a way that will bring lasting pleasure to whoever uses this splendid bedroom furniture—that the designing of each and every piece was done with forethought is proven by the excellent lines, the attractive proportions, the artistic trimmings—in all, it's furniture you'll thoroughly approve of—and especially so at these phenomenally low prices, which establish a record for lowness, quality considered, that we doubt will be reached again in years—just now, when furniture is being featured everywhere, is the best time for comparisons—the best time for you to find out for yourself how much better these values are than any to be had elsewhere.

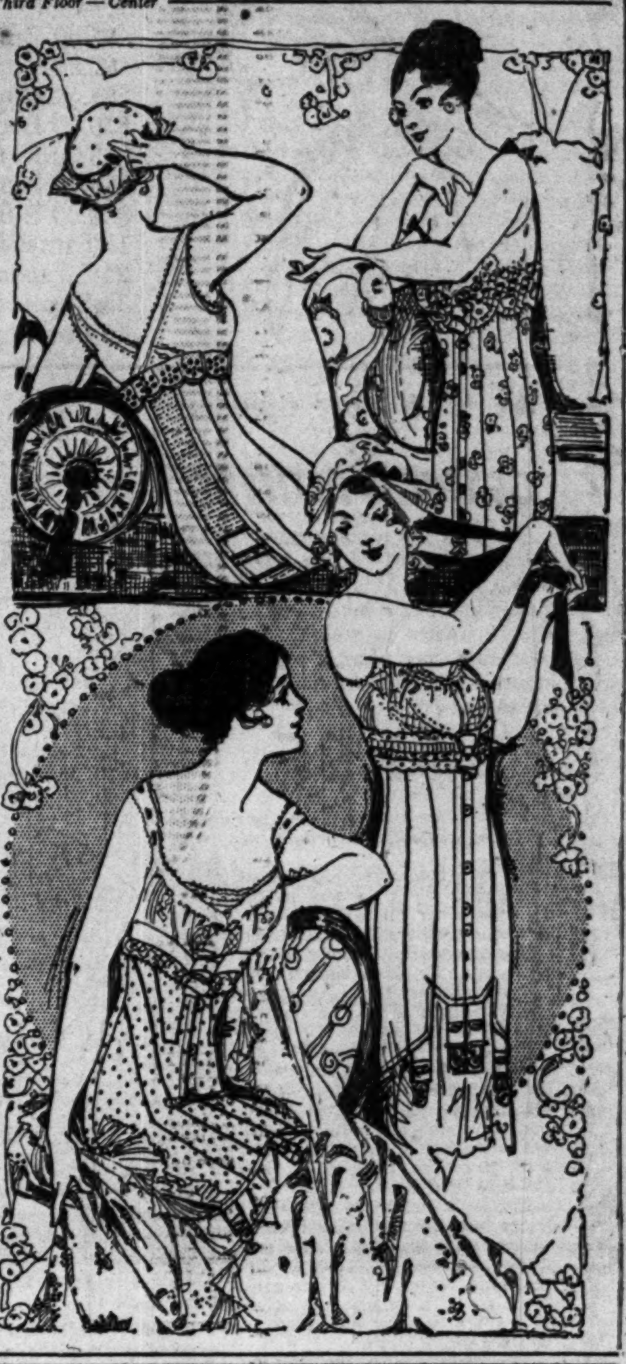
The Easter Corset Is First in the Mind of the Well Dressed Woman

Third Floor — Center



For no suit or gown can look its best, regardless of its cost or the care bestowed upon its making, over an ill fitting corset. Our showing of R. & G. corsets for Easter is indeed remarkable, for it embraces a model to fit every woman in Chicago—and what is more important, a corps of expert corsetieres trained in the foremost hygienic fitting methods, is at your service to help you choose exactly the model suited to your figure and fit it correctly. For this service, already famous throughout Chicago, no extra charge is made.

Two fundamental propositions concern the corset. The first is that the corset should be comfortable and healthful. The second, that the corset should mold the individual figure according to nature's ideals for the well proportioned figure. For these reasons women should never permit themselves to wear corsets that are not suited to the requirements of health as well as to their individual figure needs.

The fashion trend is decidedly towards "more corset," yet toward distinctly good sense in corseting. The Easter corsets will be flexible, yet Fashion at the same time demands that they be boned enough to contain and steadily train the figure, they must be high enough above the waist to support the diaphragm and the flesh above the shoulder blades, with skirt long enough to compress the hips. The success of the Easter gown is largely a matter of proper corseting. There is no excuse for a woman being poorly corseted today. Every woman can find the R. & G. corset which conforms to her natural figure lines, one that will improve these lines and improve her health by giving her the proper support if she will take advantage of our unexcelled fitting service.

R. & G. corsets for the average figure, a fine model that must be seen and worn to fully appreciate its artistic stylishness, unusual beauty and comfort, made of handsome serviceable brocade, medium high bust, tapering at the waist. Long extension skirt, wide unboned section over the hips giving the utmost freedom of body. Elastic section in back at bottom which adjusts to figure properly when standing or sitting and distributes superfluous flesh evenly. All sizes to 30, special at $5

R. & G. corsets made of dainty pink figured batiste for the average figure. This model gives a figure effect that assures the wearer of the fashionable contour and makes possible the fashionable draping and fitting of the gowns, at $3

A complete variety of R. & G. tapering waist corsets, in all sizes, at $1 to $5.

We Want Your Opinion ON OSTRICH PLUMES

On Monday we are going to sell a big shipment of the most wonderful OSTRICH PLUMES, 20 inches long, full broad heads, average 12 inches in width, in perfect condition, and a most complete assortment of colors, also black and white, for and therein lies a story of the working of our style organization which may be of interest.

Our style committee is composed of fifteen experts whom we consider the best in their particular lines. This committee, in connection with our merchandise manager, passes on matters of importance in regard to styles. To this committee some days ago our millinery buyer reported an opportunity to purchase 12,000 of the handsomest plumes he had ever seen (better than one which he had just bought from a competitor for $7.50), so that we could sell them for $2.00 apiece. He added, however, that, although he had never in all his experience seen such wonderful values, he would not recommend the purchase, as he did not want to put anything in his section but the very smartest.

The style committee overruled the millinery buyer, maintaining that the values were so great that there are a great many women who find fine ostrich plumes more becoming for dressy occasions than the more severe trimmings now in vogue, and that there is some indication of an increasing use of them.

The merchandise manager finally decided it. Out of courtesy to the millinery buyer they will be sold, not in the main department, but in a section just off of it. We want your opinion, and so the price will be $1.95. With them will be shown a beautiful line of shapes at from $1.45 to $10.00 each, and when the materials are purchased of us we will be glad to trim free of charge. If you think you are ever going to want an Ostrich Plume do not fail to see these.

Plays for Adults at Fine Arts

By Percy Hammond.

POOR JANET MERWYN, nee York! We left her barricaded in her room at the Fine Arts theater hysterically hating her new husband because of his odious ardors upon their honeymoon. What should be done with a case like Janet's? Mr. George Middleton, who is all wrought up about it, thinks that parents should tell their daughters that there is no Santa Claus, and he denounces as "Criminals" those who do not.

Well, I suspect that Mr. Middleton errs in the especial instance of Janet. Mere knowledge of the brutal facts, one fears, would not have mitigated their shamefulness to so modest a maid. Apprised of the repugnant details of matrimony, she would have jilted her panting suitor and embraced the more conservative joys of spinsterhood. Her husband seemed a decent sort of gander, expeditious, perhaps, but well meaning. It was his ignorance rather than the lady's which caused the debacle. I am inclined to think that the husband's parents, too, should come under Mr. Middleton's indictment for not instructing him as to the disadvantages of celerity. He knocked the icicle off Dian's temple instead of thawing it. At any rate Janet is not an object of public distress, though Mr. Middleton, in "Criminals," is overwhelmed by her plight. Ere this, no doubt, she has hearkened to her husband's modified strephonade and they are now en route to Niagara Falls with the vexatious circumstance forgot. Mr. Middleton tried to make a tragedy out of a contretemps.

The Disappointment of Nan.

IT is a very nice red lady that Mr. Oren Taft Jr. has enshrined at the Fine Arts in "Conscience." She is a rouged and energetic frequenter of the sidewalks, and in her earlier manifestations shows a diligence worthy of a better reward. In case you are interested in this vocation Mr. Taft's Nan is recommended as an ideal practitioner of it. Discovering what she believes to be a despairing exile on the edge of suicide, she takes him to her gloomy chambers and then feeds him with egg and coffee. It is the maternal instinct within her, the passion to minister to a fellow-unfortunate.

He, however, is not a vagabond, but a newspaper colyum conductor, working on Rousseau's theory that people like sob stuff because it enables them to see others suffer without suffering themselves. What new thing he expected to get out of poor Nan I do not know. There is usually but one reason for the outcast, though that is never mentioned in the statistics of the morals commissions. But Mr. Taft, perhaps, is as familiar with journalists as he is with the vivandieres of the street. You can imagine Nan's fury when she found that she had sheltered a penman with funds instead of a hobo without. She set upon the impostor with a carving knife, so disappointed was she, and as he escaped down the stairway flung his abominable gold after him.

Barring the exiguous plot, the sketch holds up pretty well, and if you can be interested in Nan for what she is rather than for what she does you will be entertained by "Conscience." Especially so since the heroine is depicted with uncompromising fidelity to type by Miss Elaine Hyman, an auspicious amateur, acting under the name of Kirah Markham.

Alice on Broadway.

MISS BARNSDALL, who, with Arthur Bissell, makes up the Players' Producing company and subleases the Fine Arts theater, has decided to brave Broadway with her production of "Alice in Wonderland," and is arranging to take thence the quaint settings and the players now engaged in the extravaganza in Chicago. Her enterprise in this matter recalls the costly experiment in establishing a theater for children two years ago of George C. Tyler. A special playhouse was built on top of the Century theater and was opened with a great deal of ritual and ceremony for a season of 4 o'clock matinees, the first (and only) play being Mrs. Burnett's "Racketty-Packetty House."

The cast was good, the play was sufficient for all the purposes of the enterprise, the child mind was catered to in the abstract as well as in the concrete, and the "notices" were what "showmen" call "money stuff." The attendance on the performances following the dedication was steady enough, but too small to permit the revenue to meet the operating cost. Mr. Tyler, asked, made this diagnosis: "The play is of interest only to children; their elders are too selfish to take the children when the purpose is merely the pleasure of the children, and not of the elders themselves; and the law does not permit children to attend without adult escorts. Ergo, a children's theater or a children's play, to be successful, must be primarily of interest to the elders."

Paging Mr. Ibsen.

WHAT can have happened to Ibsen and his loudly hailed abolishment of the old-time bosh and artifice in dramatic technique? After all his conquests and his glories he has shrunk to the little measure of an occasional performance before a nonpaying audience, or a reference in a lecture to a woman's club. Banished, we thought, were the old mechanisms and established the frugal phrase, the "concise and cleaving" dialogue. Yet here are the asides and the soliloquies again, in old plays, it is true; but so great does the reaction appear to be that it i those relics that are most popular. "Diplomacy," "The Henrietta," "The Marriage of Kitty," "Rosemary," and "The Adventure of Lady Ursula"! We seem to have gone back twenty years in our dramatic tastes—the twenty years, perhaps, that Ibsen said was the life of a truth.

TWO BRITISH ACTRESSES AND AN AMERICAN.

MRS. OTIS SKINNER in "THE SILENT VOICE." Illinois

News of the Players.

AGAIN changing his mind in the matter, William A. Brady now announces that his spectacular melodrama, "Life," will be a springtime offering at the Auditorium. It seems that he has arranged to send it to London's Drury-Lane theater in the autumn. Mr Brady has no reason to regard such a venture as in the nature of sending coals to Newcastle, for the New York City critics, reviewing the premiere of "Life" some months back, said that it bettered the best instruction yet had from Drury-Lane itself, as to both the matter and the manner of hip-hip-hurrah melodrama. The date for the Chicago opening has been tentatively set as Saturday, April 3, marking the technical expiry of the penitential period.

Miss Marie Tempest's appearance tomorrow evening in "Nearly Married" will not, despite her press agent's insistence, mark her first experience with an American play. She was the London producer and star of Clyde Fitch's "The Truth"—a play which, by the way, was far more successful there than in the United States. One of the earliest of the numerous Smith-De Koven operettas, "The Fencing-Master," was written for and first sung by Miss Tempest in 1892; and the first of Glen Macdonough's libretti, "The Algerian," was produced by her. It, too, had music by De Koven. The piece was good but not successful; but the "book," founded on Daudet's delightful stories about Tartarin of Tarascon, was the basis of the more recent "Algeria," by Mr. Macdonough and Victor Herbert.

Miss Margaret Anglin says that, next summer, she will give "Iphigenia in Aulis," "Medea" [Euripides'], and "Electra" [Sophocles'] in the Greek theater of the University of California.

Miss Elsie Ferguson is, in the estimation of seventy amateur playwrights, the leading actress of the American theater. The Society of American Dramatists and Composers has been experimenting with a school of playwriting. The pupils, in class, were being instructed in the rules of collaborative playwriting, an example in which was to be undertaken. They were asked for whom they thought the example should be written, and seventy, representing a huge majority, voted for Miss Ferguson.

Antony Mars, one of the most prolific of French farce writers, died Feb. 19 in Paris. He was the author of the French original of the plays known in Chicago as "The Girl in the Taxi" and "The Girl from Maxim's."

Leo Detrichstein's season in "The Phantom Rival" ended last evening in Boston, where the play was not more successful than was "My Lady's Dress" in Chicago. A harassed wife's dream was the device in both plays; and both plays, in their American exhibition, suffered in the casting of the chief character.

A new operetta by the composer of "Sari," Emmerich Kalman, is called "Miss Rabbit's-Foot." Klaw & Erlanger are to give it in the United States.

Prof. Anspacher, author of "Our Children," has another play ready for production, "The Unchastened Woman."

Miss Elsie Mackay, leading woman in the cast of "Grumpy," is an Australian actress, having her first adventures in America.

April 3 is set for the end of the run of "The New Henrietta," which will then have been on view in Chicago for fourteen weeks. It was "booked" for four.

Richard Carle and his co-star, Miss Marie Cahill, were so far from finding Broadway prosperity in "Ninety in the Shade" that their associates of the cast struck between matinée and evening of the last day of the engagement and refused to give another performance until arrears of wages were paid.

"The Garden of Allah" is to be revived for the south and west by two magnates of "burlesque," who have purchased the superb equipment of the play from the receiver for the bankrupt Liebler company.

Miss Bessie Kaplan, who sang with Miss Patricola at Rector's two years ago, is being advertised to the patrons of New York City variety theaters as "formerly of the International Grand Opera company and a protégé of Tetrazzini." However, she has a good voice and sings well.

"Who Am I?" is the name of a farce to be produced by A. H. Woods. It is the work of J. B. Larrie and George R. Hill, both newspaper writers. The former has already been "produced." A one act piece of his, "The Denial," was included in a Holbrook Blinn "horrors" program earlier in the season.

"Peg o' My Heart" is to be done into French for Paris production. The actress will be Mlle. Eva Lavalliere. The French adaptor is to "strengthen the love interest."

Miss Lena Ashwell plans to revive "Fanny's First Play" in London, acting the part of Margaret Knox, with Henry Ainley as Juggins.

Miss Harriett Vernon, a singer from the London halls who visited Chicago on her American tours, is a pauper at home. She was one of the high salaried women of the varieties in a day when her chief rivals were Bessie Bonehill, Marie Loftus (mother of Cecelia), Jenny Hill, and Peggy Pryde, and was famous for her singing of a mildly suggestive ditty called "Ting-a-Ling."

C. M. S. McLellan, the librettist, has had his son naturalized under the British law that he may be a soldier. McLellan is a native of Boston, Mass., but went to England to reside soon after the hit there in the late '90s of "The Belle of New York," which remains his chief success and is still in use. His royalties on his plays and libretti have been in excess of $1,500,000 since he first tried his pen for the stage with a comic opera called "Puritania." His one successful nonmusical play has been "Leah Kleschna," an adaptation. He wrote for a long time under the name of "Hugh Morton," and was for a while editor of Town Topics.

"The Belle of New York" is a San Francisco revival. This early example of home made musical comedy continues to be in great vogue throughout Great Britain, in Australia, and in Germany and Austria. It has been a failure in but one place—New York itself. It was first given there in September, 1897, with David Warfield as the German lunatic—a part in which he was so futile that he was taken from the cast after a few performances.

Klaw and Erlanger have become associated with Frederick McKay in the direction of Miss Blanche Ring's appearances, and she is about to come forth in a new comedy by Catherine Chisholm Cutting, author of "Jerry" and "Kitty McKay."

By Ronald Webster.

MR. IRVING BERLIN, whose contagious melodies are at this time not merely prevalent but omnipresent, was not at the symphony concert when Mr. Stock conducted "North, East, South, and West." I wish he might have been there, for he is an authority on ragtime, and has used extensively the heritage of all Americans, the sense of time of the American negro, though he has not delved deep in its origins. I am led to the opinion that his views would be worthy of exploitation by the ardor with which one of his followers attacked Mr. Hadley's symphony.

This person, who must remain anonymous, was long ago sophisticated in syncopated music to the most rarified extremes. He can enjoy, if he is fortunate, two performances during any given music season—it must be borne in mind that the season for this sort of music extends over twelve months—he required not only technical perfection of performance, and a high degree of intelligent understanding of the music, but, borrowing from a colleague's vocabulary, a genuine poetic feeling.

A Disillusioned Man.

HE admits ignorance of the capabilities of the symphony orchestra, but he explains it on the ground that orchestras have not generally gone in for "rags." He went to hear Mr. Hadley's work as a great event of his artistic development. He believed he was about to hear his cherished art given serious representation, and he rejoiced loudly. He returned from the concert a disillusioned man. Not that he hadn't enjoyed the program. He confessed himself delighted with Hadley's symphony; he also liked the other numbers, but the rhythmic treatment of the melodic material was for him the product of an amateur. The scherzo was buried under the weight of fifteen years' accomplishment. It was to be viewed as drama written after the fashion of Greek tragedy is viewed. It breathed the spirit of the time which begot the Maple Leaf Rag.

This critic admitted that Mr. Hadley showed indications of a definite talent for this mode of expression, but he said it is in a nascent state only, susceptible to frost as well as to sunshine.

His amusement over the critical comment in the daily newspapers was boisterous and disconcerting. And he outlined a staggering course in ragtime for presumptuous reviewers.

Indignant, Also.

HIS indignation was almost as great as that evinced by an elderly gentleman in the lobby of Orchestra hall. "Ragtime!" said the gentleman. He spoke no other word. His tone indicated that Orchestra hall, which has harbored everything from the orchestra to Elmendorf, from Mrs. Havelock Ellis to the moving picture, had been polluted. There were many who agreed with him. There were many who thought Mr. Hadley's work undignified in the extreme; at the very least a sinful waste of time. For they might have been contemplating during that particular forty minute period, the obscure and profound beauties of Brahms or the doleful exuberances of Tschaikowsky shouting the doctrine of despair. A symphony by its very form implies a kind of self-abnegation, and writers of them might, many of them, be accused of "otherworldliness"—of sacrificing the audiences of today to the tastes of yesterday or tomorrow.

Fortunately for Mr. Hadley's work all were not like these two. It was not good enough for the first, it was too good for the second. He had not been educated up to it.

Just why odium should attach itself to "ragtime" is apparent enough. The name is disreputable. A gentleman who has a hand in directing the destinies of the symphony orchestra was much concerned that the word should have been applied to the symphony in C minor, which Mr. Gunn will conduct at the next American concert on Thursday. No, he had no objection to any music Mr. Lang might have written; he had no objection to the performance of any of Mr. Lang's music by the orchestra; but he did object to the use of the word "ragtime" in connection with it.

The Manger of Ragtime.

THOSE who originated the term did so without looking to the future. I have heard that it was born in a shoeshining parlor when a negro in adapting a hymn tune to his own rhythmic sense, marked the time with his cloth on the patron's shoe. The explanation has the merit of ingenuity at least. If it is true, it might explain the horror with which it is at present regarded.

Another theory makes the Spanish people responsible. Ragtime is mostly Castillian. It is to be feared that a reputable birth would not clear the reputation of the "rag" among our ultra-serious musicians. That the rhythm has been associated with "shouters" as highly developed in their technique as the singers of Baireuth—the two methods are not dissimilar—is not of itself especially horrible. But it has been unfortunately too popular.

Its Appeal to the Public.

IT has been horribly maligned. Even encyclopedias, which no man dares contradict, say that "theoretically the music of such compositions is an excessive exaggeration of syncopation" and that "its very exaggeration proved its strongest appeal to the public."

It is safe to assert, however, that if there were a peasant class in this country, and that class sang ragtime, our musicians would be out with phonographs, as they now are among the Indians, collecting the vital peculiarities of the people of the soil and writing symphonies. As it is, most of our musicians scoff at the advice of Anton Dvorak and remain both respectable and uninteresting.

Playbills of the Week.

Illinois—"The Silent Voice," with Otis Skinner, who has the part of a man rendered professedly agnostic by the bitterness of his physical and emotional suffering when bereft of his hearing and the woman he loves. Jules Eckert Goodman based the play on a story by Gouverneur Morris. Mrs. Skinner [Miss Maude Durbin] has resumed activity in this play. First time tomorrow.

Blackstone—"Grumpy," with Cyril Maude, the London actor-manager. The play, which is of English make, classifies as a melodrama of intrigue, although written in the manner of forthright comedy. So eager is the management to convey this information to the public that the play is labeled "comedy drama." Mr. Maude's part is that of a preternaturally shrewd old lawyer who is called "Grumpy" as a tribute to his irascibility, which, however, is at variance with his spiritual attributes of good heartedness and measureless generosity. A baffling murder enlists his nonprofessional attention and interest, and the play has to do with the manner in which he turns detective and runs down the criminal. The company is English and strange here save for Rowland Buckstone, who was for many years in support of E. H. Sothern. First time tomorrow evening.

MISS VIVIAN TOBIN as ALICE in "ALICE IN WONDERLAND"

Garrick—"Nearly Married," with Miss Marie Tempest in the part played last season by Miss Jane Grey in the Grand Opera house run of this farce by Edgar Selwyn. Miss Tempest will play the role for the first time this evening. W. Graham Browne will be seen in Bruce McRae's character of the divorced husband. Second and final week of Miss Tempest's engagement.

Powers'—"The Dummy," one of the most entertaining of the plays involving crooks and detectives. Capitally played. Final week.

Grand Opera house—"On Trial," most successful of the season's crop of so-called "trick plays." Eleventh week.

Cort—"The New Henrietta," with William H. Crane in his old part of Nick Van Alstyne. Eleventh week.

Princess—"Our Children," with Henry Kolker and Miss Christine Norman. Eleventh week.

Olympic—"The Crinoline Girl," with Julian Eltinge. Fourth week.

La Salle Opera house—"What's Going On?" This is musical comedy of a type recalling the pieces which were given in this theater in its first seasons. Roy Atwell is very amusing, and Doyle and Dixon dance even better than they did a year ago in "The Honeymoon Express." Second week.

Fine Arts—Evening performances [save Monday] of four one act plays—"The Burglar Who Failed," "Criminals," "Conscience," and "By Ourselves"—and Thursday, Friday, and Saturday afternoon and Saturday morning performances of "Alice in Wonderland."

Maeterlinck's "Interior" in New York

By Burns Mantle.

New York.—[Special Correspondence.]—The third play in the list of four offered at the Bandbox theater is Maeterlinck's one act observation of life and its mysteries called "Interior." The players are the Washington Square amateurs who have taken the playhouse and inaugurated an experimental season of unusual dramas not likely to appeal to the commercial managers of the theater.

"Interior" may be deeply symbolical, but so far no one has ventured a convincing explanation of its inner meaning. To the lay eye it is rather an impressive picture play to which the dialogue adds little more than the printed explanations used with the movies.

The scene is outside the house of a peaceful and contented family. The mother holds a sleeping babe upon her breast, the father day dreams fitfully in a nearby rocker and two pretty and placid daughters solemnly stick to their knitting. This scene is viewed through two wide windows and is in pantomime.

Outside the bearers of ill tidings gather. A third daughter of the house has thrown herself into the lake and her body has but now been recovered. Other neighbors are bearing it up the hill, moaning and muttering as they approach.

Before the sight of the tranquil and happy family the advance guard hesitates. The scene saps their courage. First one and then another refuses to enter the house and plunge the devoted relatives into grief. They philosophize on the mystery and cruelty of life.

But those bearing the body are coming nearer and nearer. Soon the family must know the truth. And so the appointed spokesman enters the house, and as gently as possible delivers his message. The curtain falls on the resulting consternation as the grief stricken family flee the house to meet the body of their beloved.

Now, variety is the spice as contrast is the seasoning of a bill of one act plays, and the most telling application of these aids to entertainment that I recall is utilized by these Washington Square folk. For, following Mr. Maeterlinck's "Interior," there is offered a pantomime entitled "Another Interior," which is a "gastronomic allegory, and a variation on an old theme." And where, think you, is this other interior located? Inside Mr. Smith, during Mr. Smith's dinner."

The stage is encircled with lead colored curtains to represent the lining of Mr. Smith's stomach. A bright red band at back stands for the esophagus or gullet, and through this the permanent and temporary occupants of Mr. Smith enter. Huddled in one corner are the gastric juices, programmed as "dissolvents in the flesh," a quintet of active pantomimists wearing modified Pierrot costumes of black and white stripes. They are peacefully dozing.

Outside can be heard the voices of a solicitous headwaiter in conversation with the other or upper half of the querulous owner of the stomach. Yes, Mr. Smith will have a cocktail first. Then some oysters. To be followed by a slice of roast pork, with sauce, and——

But the Cocktail has arrived and the busy Dissolvents are aroused. Cocktail is a lively youth on his own account, his costume one of brilliant shreds and brighter patches, and he leads Carbon Dioxide, Hydrogen Sulphide, Butyric Acid, Hydrochloric Acid, and Time a merry chase before he succumbs and rests peacefully in a corner.

Arrives then Miss Oyster, a likely maid who is evidently most welcome. She disturbs not, neither does she irritate, but, holding her mirrored shell before her, she dances gracefully on her toes, followed by the mincing and mimicking gastric juice boys, until she, too, tires and seeks a restful corner of Mr. Smith.

Three Sauces come next, with a sort of whipped cream head dress, and are not at all popular. They are active, however, and during the first moments of their arrival stir things up pretty generally. In the midst of their activities old Mr. Pork arrives, and then there is trouble. Rather a vicious party, Pork, inclined to snap at the others, and when he is finally overcome he turns over on his back with a defiant kick of his feet in the air.

Then the real excitement of Mr. Smith's experience begins. He tops off his dinner with an Irresistible Liqueur, and I. L. is certainly some boy. A wild youth, dressed sparingly, à la Russian dancer, and acting up to the picture. No sooner does he arrive than all the work of the Dissolvents seems likely to go for naught. Up jumps Cocktail as lively as ever. Three rousing cheers are given by the Sauces, Miss Oyster is wonderfully revived, and Old Pork starts cavorting about the Smith preserves as though he were a youngster.

Headed by the lively Liqueur, they start a wild eyed procession around Mr. Smith that is inspiring in its performance, though a bit ominous in its suggestion of consequences, seeing that just at the tail of the procession come the wily little Dissolvents, with their fingers to their noses and their tongues in their cheeks as though confidently awaiting their chance. Very soon it comes. Liqueur is a good fellow and a pleasant addition to any party, but sometimes he overdoes it. He did in the case of Mr. Smith, for soon you see the whole crowd scrambling for the esophagus, and to the expressed joy of the Dissolvents they go out the same entrance wherein they came.

Gossip of the Stage.

Mr. Weeks, dramatic reviewer of the Detroit News-Tribune, is much impressed by the acting of Julius Tannen as Mawrus in "Potash and Perlmutter." Says he: "Mr. Tannen's conception of the part is made notable by many subtle touches which indicate that the actor has a clear insight into human nature, a realization of the fact that the greatest study of mankind is man, and a sound acting method by which he expresses what he has come to believe is going on inside the head of Perlmutter. Those who have seen Alexander Carr play the part declare his picture of Perlmutter is as crudely limned in comparison with the fine picture of Tannen's as Barney Bernard's Potash is nobly pathetic in comparison with the buffoon's tricks of Julian Rose, who played the part here. The ideal combination would be Mr. Tannen as Perlmutter and Mr. Bernard as Potash. Glass and Klein are writing another Potash and Perlmutter play, and it is to be hoped that these men will be chosen to play the partners."

Mrs. Otis Skinner (Maud Durbin), who has been in retirement looking after the education of her daughter, Cornelia, has returned to the stage and is playing in Mr. Skinner's production of "The Silent Voice." Mrs. Skinner was last seen in Chicago in her husband's production of "The Harvester." That was eight years ago. She began her career with the late Helena Modjeska, met Mr. Skinner at the time, and a year later was married to him. When Mr. Skinner began his stellar career, Miss Durbin was always cast for an important rôle, generally the leading one. Explaining how it feels to "come back," Mrs. Skinner recently said, "Did I miss acting? Not a bit! Do you know what I missed more than anything else? I am ashamed to tell you. I missed the glorious vagabondage of the road."

The Canadian Patriotic fund was augmented last Monday night by the receipts for Sir J. Forbes-Robertson's first performance of "Hamlet" in Winnipeg, amounting to $2,000.

A manager who employs a great many performers, Gus Hill, makes it a matter of contract that all who work for him shall hold paid up membership in the Actors' Fund of America.

Cecil Lean expects to star in a farce of his own making. He says that he wrote the play in a week, to meet the requirements of a manager who said that he would make Mr. Lean into a star as soon as a vehicle could be obtained. The actor's dramaturgic facility recalls to Renold Wolf a feat said to have been performed some years ago by Oscar Hammerstein, who made a wager that he would write the libretto and music of a light opera in twenty-four hours, and went into seclusion for that period. He emerged with the completed work, which has a brief public airing as "Santa Maria." "When Mr. Hammerstein," says Mr. Wolf, "announced that he had actually written the work in twenty-four hours, nobody believed him. After seeing the opera on the stage everybody believed him."

Miss Molly McIntyre is to go into the variety theaters in a short play. She is at law to get pay for her services as the star of "Kitty MacKay," alleging that the impresario concerned, William Elliott, was her fiancé also, and that she permitted him to withhold part of her salary in the belief that he and she were to marry at the end of the tour.

The Aborns are to try again, this time in Boston, to interest the public in grand opera at $2 the seat. A story that the Boston Grand Opera company will resume activity under the direction of Charles Ellis is denied in the current issue of the Musical Courier.

The Supreme court of the state of New York last Wednesday made an interesting decision as to a manager's rights in the title of a play even when his rights in the play itself have not been infringed. A "movie" was labeled "A Fool There Was," and exhibited under that title, although its story had nothing in common with Porter Emerson Browne's familiar melodrama of like name. Klaw & Erlanger sued, arguing that the title had value to them because it is the known name of a successful play and that therefore they should not be bound by the federal precedent which holds that a title of itself may not be copyrighted. The court agreed with the plaintiffs and, moreover, ordered that a referee be appointed to make an accounting of the profits on the film. The decision is in agreement with one handed down last May in Brooklyn regarding "Joseph and His Brethren," but in that case the owner of the play, Liebler & Co., was not permitted participation in the money earned by the film for which the same title was employed.

The adaptation of "The Marriage of Kitty" is the work of Cosmo Gordon-Lennox, a previous husband of the star, Miss Tempest.

Gabrilowitsch (there is a movement on foot to spell it Gabrilovich) has chosen Schumann and Chopin for his recital. His first appearance here was with the Kneisel quartet; his second is in competition with them.

In reviewing a performance of the works of Sigismond Stojowski, H. E. Krehbiel of New York remarks that the motto of the composer's symphony should not have been "To be or not to be," as suggested in the program notes, but another phrase of Shakspearean origin, "Much ado about nothing." Otherwise he was kind to Mr. Stojowski.

The Wagner program given by the orchestra a few weeks ago has been chosen for repetition at the benefit concert arranged for March 30. Julia Claussen, the contralto, is to be the soloist. The Orchestra association hopes that a considerable sum may be added, through the sale of seats, to the pension and benefit fund. Seats are from 50 cents to $2.

The program of the Beethoven trio Tuesday evening is made up of Beethoven, Schumann, and Brahms. M. Jeannette Loudon, Otto Roehrborn, and Carl Brueckner are the members of the trio.

Of Estella Neuhaus, pianiste, it is learned that "her lists of patronesses for her concerts in New York, Boston, Washington, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Pasadena, and Portland include the names of the most prominent women, socially and musically, in those cities. Miss Neuhaus is to appear here twice, tomorrow afternoon at the Fine Arts and March 22 at the same place.

The Marshall Field Choral society will sing Coleridge-Taylor's "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast" and "The Crusaders," by Niels W. Gade, in its concert at Orchestra hall on April 15.

Three acts of three operas are to be presented Thursday afternoon at the Blackstone theater by students of the Chicago Musical college.

In a vote instituted by the orchestral association of Los Angeles the patrons of the concerts declared Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony the favorite; Tschaikowsky's Pathetic symphony second, and Beethoven's third symphony a poor third. Dvorak's New World symphony was but eleven votes behind it. Wagner numbers predominated in the second group (overtures, suites, etc.).

Mr. Kreisler plays a popular program at his last recital, to be given this afternoon at the Auditorium—Bach's suite in E minor, his adagio and fugue in G minor, the Mendelssohn concerto (Opus 64), Martini's andantino, Couperin's "La Precieuse," Paganini's prelude and allegro, Boccherini's allegretto, the Tartini variations (which he played by accident at his first recital), Dvorak's "Humoresque," an his own "Caprice Viennoise," "Liebesleid," and "Liebesfreud."

The scholarship and extension committee of the Lake View Musical society offers to the music students of Cook county three $100 scholarships, one each in piano, violin, and voice. The scholarships will be placed to the credit of the winning pupil for tuition with the teacher under whom the scholarship is won. The contest will be held the last of April.

Piano contestants shall be prepared to play one composition each of Bach, Beethoven, and Chopin.

Violin contestants a movement each of a Bach sonata and a standard modern concerto.

Voice contestants a solo and recitative from an oratorio, an aria from a standard opera, and a group of Schubert and Schumann songs.

Those wishing to contest should file application with the chairman of the committee, Mrs. Charles F. Hagenow, 120 East Forty-fourth street, not later than April 1.

Miss Irma Seydel, the young violinist who is soon to appear in the Metropolitan series of concerts, seems to have all the merits of American democratic character and all the attainments of a European prodigy. Mrs. Beach reports of herself that her mother refused to allow her to play real compositions on the piano until she had attained the age of 4. Miss Seydel boasts a first public appearance at 4½.

Rachmaninoff, Debussy, Grieg, and Gounod will be represented in the organ program to be given at the Sunday evening club this evening by Edgar A. Nelson. The numbers, respectively, will be "Prelude in C sharp minor," "En Bateau," "Trauermarsch," and the march from "Queen of Sheba." Gustaf Holmquist will sing "God, Who Madest Heaven and Earth," by Sanderson, as the offertory. Wolf's "Come, Holy Spirit," will be sung by John B. Miller and the choir of 100. Mrs. Mabel Sharp Herdien and the choir will sing "Ye Who Now Sorrow," from "Requiem," by Brahms. The "One Hundred Thirty-seventh Psalm," by Gounod, will be sung by the choir.

Rudolph Ganz, pianist, will be the soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at its regular weekly concerts, to be given in Orchestra hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. The program which Director Stock has prepared is made up of Bach's suite No. 4 in D major, Beethoven's concerto for pianoforte No. 1 in C major, Qukas' symphony in C major, and Liszt's fantasia on Hungarian melodies, for pianoforte and orchestra.

Charles A. Ellis of Boston is accused of planning to start an independent opera company for Boston. He is said to have approached a number of the Metropolitan company's pet singers with a view to luring them to Boston.

Joseph Hofmann's program today at Orchestra hall will be: Schumann—Aufschwung, Warum, In Der Nacht, Vogel also Prophet, Contrabandist, and fantasie in C major. Chopin—Etudes, C sharp minor, A flat major, A flat major, and G flat major, impromptu, F sharp major, valse E flat major, nocturne C minor, and scherzo C sharp minor. Ganz—Fileuse pensive, and rustic dance. Dvorsky—Le Santcaire, east and west, and Penquine. Liszt—Rhapsodie No. 12.

The second of the American series of concerts "for the popularization of American music with Americans," by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, with Mr. Glenn Dillard Gunn conducting, will take place in Orchestra hall next Thursday evening at 8:15. The soloists will be Mr. Burton Thatcher, baritone, and Mr. Alfred Goldman, violinist. The program is made up of novelties, the majority of the works on this occasion receiving either their first American performance or their first performance in Chicago. It includes Cole's Symphonic Prelude for orchestra and organ, with the composer at the organ; Kolar's "Americana" symphonic suite; Brune's "Sea Music," ballade for baritone and orchestra; Lang's Symphony in C Minor; Berwald's Overture; Severn's Concerto for violin and orchestra; Sowerby's symphonic sketch, "The Sorrow of My Death"; Clough-Leighter's "Possession," song for baritone and orchestra; Just's Suite, and Dett's "Inspiration Waltz."

Wallace A. Sabin of San Francisco has been appointed official organist of the Panama-Pacific exposition. Edwin Lemare, who is one of the features of the musical plans of the fair, will arrive about June 1. Max Bendix of Chicago and elsewhere has been chosen assistant director of the official orchestra.

Mr. Ellis has finally explained why the Boston Symphony orchestra will not play in Chicago on its way to the Panama-Pacific exposition. "It was evident," reads his notice to the managers of the fair, "that if the Boston Symphony orchestra could be taken to the coast for a series of concerts in San Francisco and back again without giving any concerts coming or going, a tone would be given to the music department of the fair which would set it far above any exposition that has been held in this country."

Clarence Eddy, the organist, played at the dedication of the Illinois building at the Panama-Pacific exposition. He has already given a series of five recitals and has been engaged for five more.

Eleanora de Cisneros, mezzo soprano, has given up this country for the present and will go to Cuba for a season during April and May. She has been engaged by the management of the New National theater of Havana for six operas.

Comment on New York Music and Musicians.

By W. J. Henderson.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The event of chief importance during the last week of music was the almost tragic death of Rudolf Berger, the giant tenor. Berger served in the Austrian army for a short time and was discharged as physically unfit. Rheumatism was said to be his trouble. So he came over to fulfill his engagement at the Metropolitan. He sang Siegfried in "Götterdämmerung," as told in last week's letter, under the influence of stimulants. He was believed to be suffering from pleurisy. But it proved that his heart was affected and even while Mr. Gatti-Casazza was conversing with him about his next appearance, which was to have been in "Tristan und Isolde" at this week's matinée he fell back and died.

While Berger could not be called a great operatic impersonator, he was a good one and was sometimes genuinely interesting. In this singularly barren period he enjoyed special prominence and can ill be spared. Jacques Urlus, who lately concluded his engagement at the Metropolitan, had not sailed for home and was reëngaged to sing the rôles allotted to Mr. Berger during the remainder of the season. Just a year ago Putnam Griswold, the sterling American bass, was lost to us.

To turn from sad memories of the dead to the acts of living, it is pleasant to record another successful impersonation by Melanie Kurt, the newly engaged Wagnerian soprano at the Metropolitan. Washington's birthday had to be celebrated in some way and there being no patriotic opera the impresario offered "Parsifal." Mme. Kurt sang Kundry for the first time here. As in other rôles, she disclosed a fine intelligence, a carefully elaborated plan of interpretation, with numerous significant details nicely fitted into the general scheme. Mme. Kurt sings well as a rule, though not with that facile flow of phrase which is characteristic of the born vocalist. Her singing, like her acting, discloses the nature of the effort. Yet despite this she at times achieves a high level of illusion. She did so in "Parsifal" in the first act. Her delineation of the wild Kundry was the most searching that our stage has known. In the second act she was excellently garbed and made up, so that she looked the seductive flower girl perfectly. She made much of the two narratives, while her treatment of the temptation united fidelity to truth with a subtle suggestion of refinement. She kissed Parsifal squarely on the lips, a long clinging kiss, and when he tried to escape she seized him in her plump arms and dragged him back. If she had a press agent we should surely have celebrations of the kiss. But she avoided anything that looked objectionable.

Her last act had the proper atmosphere of repentance and subjection. She lacks magnetism, however, and one observes her doings with a calmness which cannot be retained in the presence of some less finely wrought impersonations of Wagner's last heroine.

Mr. Caruso having sailed away toward Italy, Riccardo Martin, the American tenor, has made his reappearance. He has sung Rodolfo and Rhadames. I heartily wish he were not an American. If he were an Italian no one would hesitate to say things which are not said because of the ludicrous sensitiveness of Americans about singers born here. But it does take a certain sort of genius to possess such a beautiful voice as Mr. Martin's and to be so uninteresting. So let us praise him in that he has accomplished an unique thing, a poor thing, but his own.

In the concert world, without doubt the most stimulating entertainment of the week was that given by Ernest Hutcheson, pianist, on Wednesday. He treated us to a Bach afternoon. Sam Franko, who was a resident of Berlin for several seasons and who recently came back (not because of the war, you understand, not at all!), conducted an orchestra of strings, while Mr. Hutcheson played the piano part of the D minor concerto. He was heard also in the B flat partita, a fugue, the Italian concerto, and the Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue. The orchestra played the introduction to the cantata, "Am Abend der desselbigen Sabbaths." The last number was the concerto for two pianos, in which Ossip Gabrilowitsch joined with Mr. Hutcheson. It was a delightful concert, for Mr. Hutcheson is a player who appeals very strongly to thinking listeners. He does not make temperamental impressions, but as I grow older I am less and less certain that these are always to be desired. I know of no reason why I should become agitated over a fugue or expect to be urged to kiss my neighbor's wife by hearing the "Kreuzer" sonata. A great deal of the noblest beauty in the world brings to the soul the perfect joy of great peace. But the temperament hunters seem to wish always to be trembling on the verge of what Swinburne would have called "the cold old crimes that were misbegotten." Well, if these tempestuous souls must always be fed on Swinburne, let them; but there are others who will continue to dwell with the celestial calms of Goethe or even Milton. If Bach's music is anything, it is intensely human, and when some one like Mr. Hutcheson comes along and treats it as a man and a brother should, I for one am grateful to him.

Busoni played the "Emperor" concerto on Friday and Sunday at the Symphony concerts and here the cool contemplativeness of a logical intelligence was insufficient to find the message of the master. Mr. Busoni lacked temperament. So one sees that there is somewhere a golden mean.

Rudolf Schirmer, head of the publishing house, gave a neutrality dinner at Sherry's Saturday evening. The keynote of the occasion was the finding in this country of a home for musical artists of so many nationalities, a neutral ground, where the brotherhood of art remained unshaken. The key was charmingly sounded by Walter Damrosch, who made the one speech of the evening. Hofmann sat on Schirmer's right and Busoni on his left—Pole and Italian. Other pianists were Borwick and Grainger, English; Godowsky, Pole; Von Inten, German; Joseffy, Hungarian; Gabrilowitsch, Russian, and there were still more. Bauer was to have ben there, but had to go to Boston. Violinists, composers, conductors, critics, pedagogues, and even other publishers were in the company. The spirit of the occasion was joyous. And let me add that musicians generally seem to me to show much tact in avoiding the topics of the war. They dwell together in peace and amity and do honor to their art.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

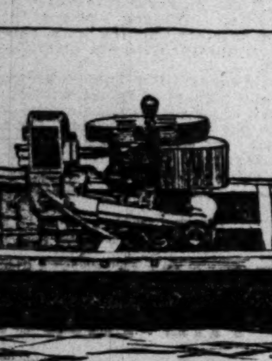
Motor for a Canoe.

THE craving for speed and the modern disinclination to do anything that can be avoided by the expenditure of money has overtaken the canoe, the most delightful and romantic water craft that has ever been devised, for now a method has been developed for fitting a gasoline engine to the boat and the poetic paddle is to be laid aside. An inventive mind has conceived the idea of building a well in the body of a canoe, having an opening in the bottom and watertight sides, in which one of these little motors can be placed and conveniently attached. When thus fitted the motor shaft extends down through the opening in the well and carries the propeller beneath the bottom of the canoe, as shown in the illustration.



Mine Rescue Contests.

In the state of Washington a team of miners equipped with oxygen helmets represents the town in the statewide contests that have of late years become an annual affair. The last first aid and mine rescue contest was staged on the campus of the University of Washington, Seattle, and prizes were given to the winning teams.

A large dummy mine shaft was built before the convention and the various teams brought their own equipment for the contests. Six events were held on each of two days. In the team events, each town or mine was represented by six men—a captain, four men to do the actual work, and a man to represent the victim, who was obliged to submit to bandaging and artificial respiration for two minutes. Arms, legs, back, and face were bound up after the "rescue" while the pulmotor was being applied, and the team that fulfilled the requirements in the shortest time won the event.

An exhibition was given to show how a rescue team would work under special circumstances. A man was slid into the dummy shaft and rescued, the team pretending that he had gone in too soon after a shot and had been overcome by fumes from the exploded powder. Another event was the rescue of the man during a shaft fire. Before the team could leave in good order it was necessary to seal up the burning shaft.

The United States bureau of mines supervised the contests.

Power Developed in Cannon.

M. le Commandant Regnault has calculated the actual horse power developed during the firing of a projectile by some modern specimens of artillery. The results are astounding. In the case of a cannon of moderate size, projecting a projectile weighing seven kilograms with an initial velocity of 500 meters, the deflagration of the explosive lasting about one-hundredth of a second, we have, during that time, work done to the extent of 115,000 horse power. For larger artillery, where the weight of the projectile reaches and surpasses 500 kilograms, the initial velocity being 900 meters, we have no less than 25,000,000 horse power developed during the explosion. These figures give an idea of the formidable efforts which the metal of modern pieces of artillery has to support.

Leaking Faucets Costly.

It may be of interest to know just what the water loss would be from a leaking faucet. Assuming that a faucet leaks to the extent of allowing the escape of two drops of water per second, in one month the leakage would amount to a little over eighty-four gallons. With water at 25 cents a thousand gallons, the money loss per month would be about 2 cents. Should the leak be in a hot water faucet, the loss would be greatly increased because of the fuel required to heat the water. With coal at $5 a ton, burned with the efficiency usually attainable under domestic conditions, the loss in water and heat in the above example would be nearly 10 cents a month. Small leaks do not remain small. The constant leakage of faucets wears passages through the seats and makes tightness impossible. Next thing then is a new faucet with the accompanying plumber's bill.

"You look tired."

"I was in a fight. Man, that other man could fight! I was standing around sparrin' for an opening and he just bus' me in the jaw. He shore had a punch! Powerful? Say, when he bus' me in the jaw, I just sailed through the air and lit against one of these punching bag machines that registers your strength. And, man, that machine, she registered 9,000,000!"

The Tribune and Furniture

The Tribune is the greatest furniture salesman in Chicago. The following statistics of furniture advertising during 1914 prove the regard in which it is held by Chicago retailers.

	LINES
The Tribune,	472,673
First Evening Paper,	265,108
Second Morning Paper,	250,889
Third Morning Paper,	159,463
Second Evening Paper,	137,374
Third Evening Paper,	123,612
Fourth Evening Paper,	52,204

It is notable that The Tribune carried more furniture advertising than the other morning papers combined, and more than three of the four evening papers combined.

And these figures do not include 45,272 lines of furniture advertising run in the classified columns of The Tribune.

Buy Now

The annual furniture sales are now in progress, and The Tribune, Daily and Sunday, is filled with ads listing attractive bargains. Department stores and responsible furniture houses are offering merchandise at prices in some cases lower than the cost of production.

Since most dealers will hold purchases in their warehouses for future delivery if desired, it is obvious that prospective purchasers will do well to read the furniture ads in The Tribune today, and visit the stores tomorrow.

Remember that any other paper will have only a fraction of the offerings to be found in The Tribune, for much of this advertising appears in The Tribune exclusively.

TRAIL of the BOY SCOUTS

BY TERRY RAMSAYE.

ERNEST THOMPSON SETON

[Copyright: 1915: By J. E. Purdy, Boston.]

CHIEF SCOUT OFFICE VACANT.

A CURIOUS situation of interest to every patriotic boy scout has arisen in the relations of Ernest Thompson Seton, the nature writer and for years the holder of the office of chief scout.

At the annual meeting held in Washington Feb. 11 Mr. Seton was dispossessed of his official connection with the scout organization by the simple process of not reelecting him. His office of chief scout remains vacant.

The cause of this action appears to center on Mr. Seton's failure or perhaps refusal to become an American citizen. It is suggested as possible that on condition he becomes a citizen he may be elected to the office. Meanwhile he remains unofficially connected with the organization.

In reply to an inquiry, Dan Beard, national scout commissioner, wired the writer this statement:

"Mr. Seton was not elected chief scout. This office makes the incumbent ex-officio a member of the executive board, hence Mr. Seton is not a member of the board. In response to your question of why, I can reply the Boy Scouts of America is an American patriotic society. Mr. Seton is still on the staff of Boys' Life. Your question of the status of his writings in the handbook is not important. This question is now in the hands of the editorial board. Everything is coming around all right and for the best interests of the boys. We have a splendid executive board, composed of men who are in this not for themselves but for the sake of the boys. Personally I have the greatest confidence in their ability to conduct the affairs smoothly and with credit to themselves and America."

It appears that Mr. Seton, according to the best information obtainable, is still a British citizen. It is said he took out his first citizenship papers about thirteen years ago, but never took out the final papers. This became known only recently and there had been some criticism on account of it. It was held that one of the chief officers in an organization which has for its leading principle love of country should be a citizen of that country.

This was discussed with Mr. Seton, along with matters about some of his contributions to the scout paper. But he sailed for England just before the annual meeting.

Before he sailed Mr. Seton is said to have indicated he would complete his citizenship on his return, and pending this step his office was not filled. This account is vouched for by George D. Pratt, treasurer, and James E. West, chief executive. At the office in New York they said that should Mr. Seton become a citizen and the question of his contributions to the paper be adjusted the executive board would hope to reëlect him as chief scout.

Colin H. Livingston, president of the scouts, gave a different version, saying Mr. Seton was not reëlected because he was in England and it could not be learned if he would accept reëlection.

Regardless of what the official action with reference to Mr. Seton may be, the value of his contributions to boy scout literature remains.

Answers to Inquiries.

HARRY G.: It is probable that you can obtain the United States geological survey maps of your section by application at the office of your county engineer or surveyor. Also most any scientific supply house can furnish them, or you can write to the bureau of publications, Washington, D. C. These maps have not been completed for the entire country, but practically all of the country in which the scouts are interested has been mapped completely. The price quoted in the handbook is low. Probably you will have to pay 10 cents a map. Your scout master probably can show you how to make a map case so that the troop maps can be kept in good order. Exploring expeditions and the army generally use metal tubes, water tight and impervious to the attacks of insects and fire. With a sheet of tin and a soldering iron you can readily make one for yourself. The processes of map making available to scouts will be discussed in the Trail at a later date.

JAMES E. W.: Assistant scout masters must receive their commission from the national council on the recommendation of the troop committee and the scout master.

You're Safe Anywhere on FEDERAL RUGGED HEELS

Slippery tile floors, wet or icy pavements and polished floors have no terrors for the men and women who wear "Rugged" Heels, for they are absolute protection against slipping.

"Rugged" Heels are different from ordinary rubber heels. The raised tread construction puts extra material in the part of the heel that gets the full shock of the step and the greatest wear. It gives "Rugged" Heels extra service and extra comfort. The sharp angles of the projections take a firm grip on wet and slippery surfaces and make for greater safety.

"Rugged" Heels are made of new rubber, full of life and spring. Their high quality makes them exceptionally durable.

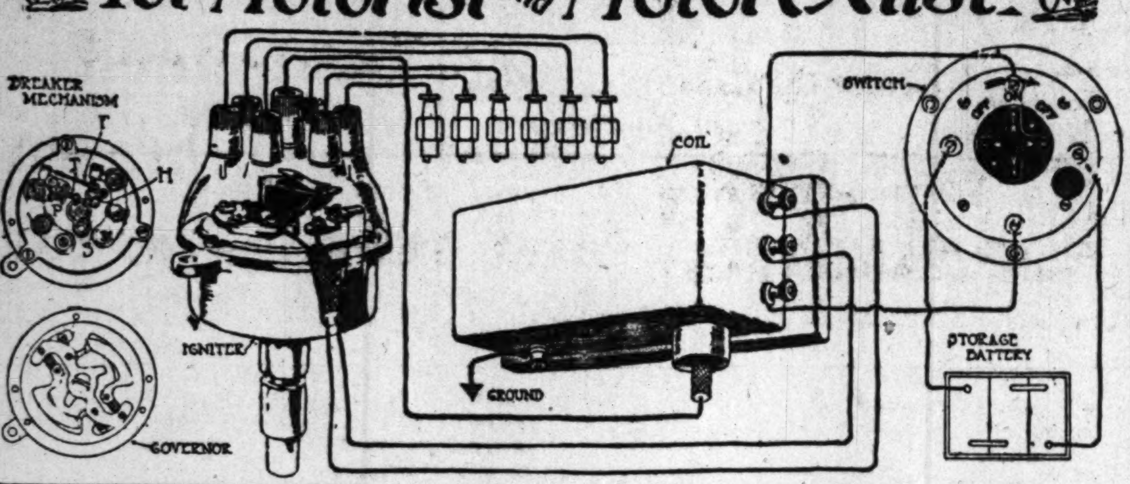
For Motorist and Motorcyclist



Inquiries concerning motorists, motorcyclists, etc., will be answered. Address letters to "High Speed," care of The Chicago Sunday Tribune.

By High

ADJUSTING A CARBURETOR.

HERE is a bit of advice that should be saved. It deals with carburetor adjustments and may be valuable to all motor car owners with the advent of spring and warmer weather. Specifically the article deals with the adjustment of a Rayfield model "G." THE TRIBUNE received a request to print from F. E. Snyder of Lafayette, Ill.:

With throttle practically closed and motor running slow, turn low speed adjustment to the left until motor slows down. Then turn to the right a notch at a time until motor idles smoothly.

Now advance the spark one-quarter or one-half. Open throttle quickly. Should motor backfire, it indicates a lean mixture. Correct this by turning the high speed screw to the right one notch at a time until throttle can be opened quickly without backfiring. If "loading" or "galloping" is experienced at fifteen or twenty miles per hour or under heavy load with wide open throttle, the mixture is too rich. This can be overcome by turning the high speed adjustment to the left.

Adjustments made for high speed will in no way affect low speed. Low speed adjustments must not be used to get a correct mixture at high speed.

It is presumed that the motor in question is in perfect condition in every respect and that you are using a hot air attachment. The use of heated air and in many cases also a hot air jacket is essential with present day fuel.

The automobile motor must be warm to operate correctly, a temperature of at least 150 degrees being necessary. It is a heat motor pure and simple, its principle being the expansion of evaporated gasoline. The operator should exercise a little patience with his car on a cold morning, for if its cooling system is as efficient as must be to keep the motor cool on a July day, most certainly it will take a little while to raise its temperature to a good working point.

Of the motor ills which appear suddenly and without warning, not one time in a hundred can they be remedied by changing the carburetor adjustment, but for some reason, probably because the carburetor has "a thing to turn," it receives first and full attention.

On account of the prevailing attitude of the motoring public toward the carburetor and the readiness to blame it for all sorts of happenings, service stations are being maintained all over the country by the most prominent carburetor manufacturers. Data carefully collected by these service stations shows that 75 per cent of so-called carburetor ills are remedied by attention to other things.

Automobile owners who laid cars up for the winter should look them over carefully before they are again put into commission, is the advice of B. G. Koether, sales manager of the Hyatt Roller Bearing company. A car may come out of the garage or storage looking apparently as good as new, declares Mr. Koether, but there is no telling what may be the condition of the parts that cannot be seen.

"It probably is true," says Mr. Koether, "that the car will run all right the first time out, but there is no telling when trouble may develop.

"Take the matter of lubrication. This is one of the most important factors that enter into the running of a car. The rear axle and the transmission should be well greased, and it would be wise to take off the wheels and see that they are properly lubricated. The wheel bearings might even be washed out with gasoline—which would remove all the grit and dirt—and then be relubricated with clean grease.

"While Hyatt roller bearings require less attention from owners of cars than other bearings, due to the lubricating of the spiral rollers, it is well that they be looked at once in a while. A little attention now and then would enable them always to give a maximum of service—the standard which every owner hopes from his car.

"The ignition wiring also should be gone over to make sure that it is properly insulated and that there is no danger of any breaks. It also will be well to clean out the gasoline line and the carbureter."

During a recent inspection of the Indianapolis motor speedway the writer discovered a novel way to start a motor which has stood for hours in the cold. The motor was that of a Marmon, aged six years. It was the property of F. E. Moskovics, sales manager of the Marmon company. Several attempts by the owner to start the car by hand failed. Near him stood a car of a later model. The water in the radiator of the latter was warm. Moskovics saturated a handkerchief in the warm water and placed it over the intake manifold of the dormant motor. One turn of the crank started the engine. The answer involves a long dissertation on thermal efficiency. If your motor fails to start try this experiment.

Queries and Answers.

Three querists having applied to THE TRIBUNE for details of the Atwater-Kent ignition systems, a drawing illustrating the operation of the system has been worked out and appears on this page. The location of the ground wire which has been the object of two of the queries should be noted in the center of the drawing. THE TRIBUNE advises that this drawing be saved for future reference. The Atwater-Kent system operator on the open circuit principle and delivers a single spark at each plug.

"I am contemplating a trip next summer on the Lincoln highway to Denver, but am told that the condition of the roads through Iowa and Nebraska is extremely bad. I would also appreciate some information about the condition of the roads on the Lincoln highway east of Chicago. Also, can you give me a good motor route from Peoria to Rochester, Minn.? M. T. E., Peoria, Ill."

Possibly at this time of the year you would find some bad traveling in Iowa and Nebraska, but this will apply in any part of the country. In dry weather the Iowa roads are ideal for motoring, as they are constantly graded and dragged and are kept up all the time. During decent weather you need have little fear about either the Iowa or Nebraska roads. Iowa spends more time on its roads than almost any other state. The road surface of the Lincoln highway east of Chicago, generally speaking, is good. There are some spots that will be found bad. From Chicago through Indiana and Ohio the roads are mostly of macadam. There will be some bad spots just before reaching Pittsburgh, but across Pennsylvania the highway is a boulevard. By the time the touring season is reached much additional work will have been performed, so that all together the Lincoln highway will be in good condition. THE TRIBUNE suggests the following route from Peoria to Rochester, Minn.: Peoria, Ill.; Galesburg, 54; Davenport, Ia., 103; Iowa City, 160; Cedar Rapids, 186; Waterloo, 252; Charles City, 303; Owatonna, Minn., 393; Rochester, 435.

"I would like to know the best motorcycle roads to St. Louis from Sterling, Ill., which is on the Lincoln highway. Maybe it would be better to go to Chicago and then direct over the route I saw in THE TRIBUNE a short time ago. I would like to find the best way from Sterling to Peoria, and would like to know if I can go to St. Louis and come back through western Illinois or eastern Missouri and strike Iowa City or some city on the Lincoln highway and then back to Sterling. IRA HEY, Sterling, Ill."

Two of your questions may be answered at once. Go from Sterling through Princeton, Bureau Junction, Henry, and Chillicothe to Peoria. You can go through Pekin, Delavan, and Middletown to Springfield, but you will find heavy sand. It will be better to go to Bloomington by way of Mackinaw and Danvers, and then follow the regular route through Lincoln, Springfield, Litchfield, and Edwardsville to St. Louis. You can return along the Mississippi river, but the roads are rather indifferent. Make inquiries at St Louis as to the condition. There is a road through Louisiana and Hannibal to Quincy, thence north to Burlington through Muscatine to Davenport. From this point you will find a direct road to Sterling without having to go to Clinton or some other point in Iowa on the Lincoln highway.

Detroit's New Traffic Rules.

DETROIT'S revised traffic ordinance contains the following interesting specifications:

"All vehicles, whether motor driven or horse drawn, must carry tail lights.

"Vehicles carrying loads or material which projects out and beyond the dimensions of such vehicles must have the light attached or fixed at the extreme end of the part projecting out of the vehicle.

"All motor cars must be provided with two lamps on the front and two in the rear, one a red light and the other a white one, which is to project its rays on the number plate. All other vehicles must carry a red light in the rear, visible at a distance of at least 200 feet. Motorcycles and bicycles must carry a white light in the front which must be visible 100 feet or more.

"Headlights must be dimmed. The commissioner of police may be the judge as to proper and improper dimming.

"When crossing a main thoroughfare or streets upon which there is a street car track, or making a turn thereon, the driver must slow down to half the legal speed limit.

"No vehicle may be parked within fifteen feet of a fire hydrant or within seventy-five feet of a street car stopping place.

"On streets or boulevards divided by parkways traffic must keep to the right."

PAIGE

"The Standard of Value and Quality"

Lower Price—Bigger Value—Why?

THE new Paige "Six" is the lowest priced seven passenger six cylinder car in the world.

And yet—when you check it up point by point with other "Sixes" costing $100, $200 and even $400 more you find not only equal—but actually greater value in the Paige than in any of the others.

You find more power and greater flexibility in the wonderful Paige—Continental Engine.

You find greater distinctiveness and beauty in Paige design—you find the unexcelled Gray & Davis starting and lighting system—and the always standard Bosch Magneto instead of less expensive distributor systems substituted by others—You find the marvelously flexible easy riding Cantilever springs instead of the old semi-elliptic or full-elliptic—and you find throughout an excellence of manufacture and equipment that is not surpassed by the highest priced "Six" on the market.

And then you come back to the price—$1395—and you stop in amazement.

Your investigation shows you that you really ought to pay more for the Paige Six than for others—and yet you are asked to pay less—

Why?

The answer is very simple.

The buying power of a strong, well financed company, unhampered by bonded indebtedness—supplemented by superb manufacturing facilities and methods—and, equally important—backed by a group of stockholders who are more interested in the production of a motor car that shall actually be "The Standard of Value and Quality" than they are in immediate profits.

That's the whole secret of this Epoch Making Car and its Record Breaking Price.

You will never be entirely satisfied until you own a Paige Six.

MARCH

MARCH

MARCH is, superficially, a vagabond. It has the mood and seeming of a tattered roysterer, mischievous with a touch of malice, willing to coax a display of tender confidence by an offer of smiling friendship and ready to reward that confidence with a buffet and go howling through the woods in transports, having beguiled and demolished credulity.

It seems wanton, to find an impish joy in winning favor by good conduct as a preparation for an extraordinary display of rascality. It will smile like late April and storm like early February. It will coax buds out and pinch them. It will beckon the blue bird and meadow lark north and pelt them with a snow storm. It will tempt the bulbs to reach out their shoots and cover them with a snow drift.

It seems a period devoted to the snarling up of regular processes. A fox sparrow gets a bright, warm day for his song and hunts cover the next. Poor robin gets a worm one day and a chill the next.

March is thus maligned by appearance and is misjudged by act. It is a month of tremendous revolution and revolutions are not always orderly. Creative forces are shaking at bonds which try to hold them. Warmth withdraws the frost and releases the forces. It is not without effort, disorder and uncertainty, not without reverses and misfortunes.

March is a month of re-establishment, not proceeding precisely but with surge and resurge of elements, a month of contention. So look for anything from "fair and warm" to "blizzards."

The Gardener at Work will give expert advice on planning gardens, organizing garden clubs, and planting flowers, vegetables, or shrubs. The amateur gardener is invited to tell his troubles with soil, pests, or plants. Practical aid will be given in arranging suburban grounds, school, vacant lot, back yards, porch, or window gardens. Ask what and how to plant for fine results. Address The Gardener at Work, "Sunday Tribune."

THE GARDENER AT WORK.

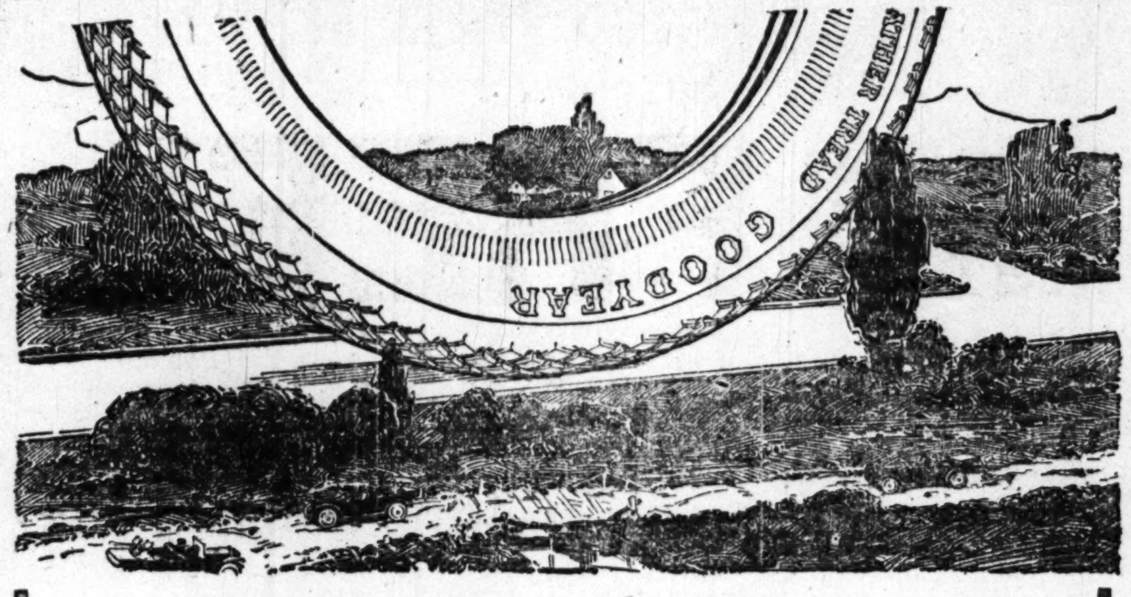
Sunny days in March invite the man with the spade. As no confidence can be had in the promises of this stormy month, March should be spent in planning what to do later; in cleaning up the grounds, making a hot bed, and getting orders to the seedsman. March winds dry out the ground, the fair days thaw the frost, and the chill blusters keep back the buds until the equinox, when the sun is far enough north for growing season.

Every one who has a patch of ground should plan for a flower garden and some vegetables. Planting shrubbery increases the value of real estate, and some shrubs should be set out this spring. Window and porch boxes give pleasure all summer, cost little, and reward with posies for cutting and some vegetables. Seed catalogs may be had free at the seedsmen's shops. It pays to plan on paper, then to buy early before the stock is picked over. Seeds, perennials, gladioli bulbs, dahlia, and peony roots should be ordered now. Try to introduce a novelty or two of the new varieties of plants advertised.

Next week, if the weather has been growing milder, it may be safe to uncover the hardy plants and bulb beds. If he frost is still in the ground and ice or an old snow bank on the northeast side of hillocks or fences, wait a while, and only rake the dry leaves and take covers from the south and sunny slopes. If bulbs have pushed through the leaves, let them alone until after March 15. Roses should keep their sheltering covers until after April 1.

Lawns are turning green, showing dandelions which can be pulled up at once. As soon as the lawn has been raked scatter a good seed mixture where the grass seems thin and the spots are bare. If the winter covering is taken from the iris and peonies give them a light blanket of old, well rotted manure. Examine the shrubs for scale and signs of those frozen in the winter. Consult a pruning book and trim at once, for when shrubs begin to leaf it is too late.

Scientific gardeners say that it is a good thing to rotate annuals and wise not to repeat the same flowers of last year. For example the asters or zinnias or marigolds should change places, and lobelia take the place of the alyssum in the borders. This would require planning on paper, and a new arrangement, or a fresh color scheme, give added interest in the flowering months. However, if the garden is well fertilized, a rotation of crops is not so important, and the old friends can be expected to blossom in the familiar places. It is necessary to dig deeply, use fertilizer, and to work the ground well, letting in the sunshine and air. It is work that pays.



When Tires Go Wrong
Remember There's a Better Road Above You

Goodyears Mean Content

By going wrong we don't mean tires' universal fate. All tires wear out in time. All makes will yield to mishap or misuse. We would not have you pass snap judgment on a tire.

We mean inherent weakness. We mean skimped quality. We mean faults which Goodyear ways avoid.

When you meet such trouble-makers, take the road above you. It is occupied now by hundreds of thousands to whom Goodyears brought content.

Vast Difference

Between a Goodyear Fortified Tire and the best of its rivals there's a wide, wide spread.

Goodyears combat rim-cuts in the most efficient way. They combat blowouts and loose treads by exclusive, costly features. One of them—our "On-Air" cure—costs us $450,000 yearly.

For safety's sake, each Fortified Tire has 126 braided piano wires vulcanized into the tire base. And our All-Weather tread—tough and double-thick—combats punctures and skidding as does no other tread.

How Can You Hesitate?

Note the place which Goodyear holds—the highest place in Tiredom.

Note its users and endorsers—more than any other tire ever had.

Note its growing prestige. Last year men bought 1,479,833.

Are you fair to yourself when you fail to prove out what is known to so many as the super-quality tire?

Reduction No. 3

On February 1st we put into effect our third reduction in two years. The three total 45 per cent. Yet we retain every costly and exclusive feature. We are spending $100,000 yearly to discover other betterments.

You will find that they average best. They mean less trouble, less cost per mile. The place they hold would be impossible without that. Our extra features would be folly.

Racing Car Given Test on Ice Course.

By Reed L. Parker.

THE first of the three Maxwells which Ray Harroun, chief engineer of the Maxwell Motor company of Detroit, is building for the summer's racing campaign, was given its baptism of speed on ice bound Lake St. Clair near Detroit last week. Without adjustment or preliminary road work the car did seventy-five miles an hour over the ice under the guidance of the designer.

The trial was witnessed by D. M. Bell, a mechanical engineer; Bob Durham, Harroun's assistant; and the writer.

Satisfied with the action of the motor, Harroun will take the car to Indianapolis next week for its first trial on the speedway. Little can be learned of the durability and speed of a car when it is driven on a course of rough ice. However, we are reasonably certain that Harroun has turned out a car worthy of his ability and that the story of road and speedway racing in America this season will frequently refer to the success of Maxwell.

In design the cars resemble closely those built last year for Indianapolis. The motors are smaller, of course, being built to compete in races where the 300 cubic inch limit is prescribed. Harroun said after the trial that he had been able, by constant experimenting, to eliminate the "bugs" that appeared in his first 450 cubic machines.

The test on the ice was possessed of thrills for spectator and driver. A stiff northwest wind was blowing when Harroun drove a course which the stern justice of Wayne county road officials made necessary for him to select. He proceeded slowly across the lake in the wake of a touring car driven by Durham. After assuring himself that the ice would stand the weight of the car, which is less than 2,000 pounds, he clocked off a mile straightaway. Given the signal, he started away on the first speed trial of his car. He averaged seventy-five miles an hour for the mile in the face of a severe wind. The trial was carefully clocked.

The Jeffery company boasts it costs only a little more than 4 cents a mile to operate one of its four cylinder models.

A ranchman in California writes THE TRIBUNE he has been getting more than 4,000 miles out of a set of Savage tires he has mounted on his stage.

The winner of the first Vanderbilt cup was Joseph McDuffee, who operates a motor car agency on the Pacific coast. He founded the McDuffee Automobile company of this city. McDuffee drove fast motors before road racing came in vogue. He won the first Vanderbilt on a dirt track, and usually is not listed among the Vanderbilt winners because later victories have been gained on road courses.

Darius Resta's performance in the Grand Prize race was as beneficial commercially to the Thermoid Rubber company as it was to Peugeot. The victory was attained on Nassau tires. Resta had little casing trouble, which in a measure accounts for his victory.

The Service Gear and Machine company of Reading announced last week that it had secured the entire service stock, good will, and patterns of the American Die and Tool company of Reading.

The Hendee Manufacturing company announced last week it had completed the engineering forework of an Indian motorcycle hospital car. This announcement came on the heels of a declaration that the company was preparing to fill orders for quick firing gun models. A speed of forty-five miles an hour is claimed for both vehicles.

The Buick company is sending out literature claiming the 1,500 pound truck is the best adapted for all around service.

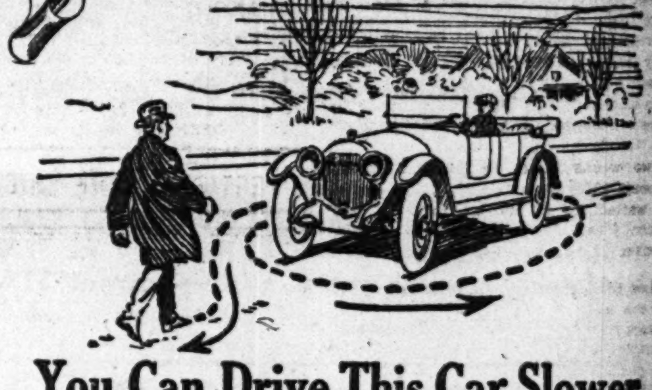
America's Greatest "Light Six" $1485



You Can Drive This Car Slower Than a Walk—on High Gear

You can throttle down to one mile per hour on high gear without causing the motor to labor—yet touch the mile-a-minute mark with ease, in America's Greatest "Light Six."

To convince him that the perfectly balanced motor of America's Greatest "Light Six" would permit throttling down to one mile an hour on high, at our request a business man got out, walked alongside the car, walked around the car, and walked backwards in front of the car—while it was moving on high gear during a demonstration.

This low throttling feature—more than anything else—makes America's Greatest "Light Six" the safest car for women to drive.

FLEXIBILITY

Flexibility is something claimed in varied degree for almost every car built—particularly cars of six or more cylinders. The 22-70 Mercer has but four cylinders (bore 3¾", stroke 6¾"), but it boasts a flexibility heretofore unknown to four-cylinder cars. It is a very difficult hill the Mercer will not take "on high," it is capable of a speed as low as five miles an hour on direct, and it has a quick pick-up on high gear at slow speeds. The pull of the motor is steady and even at all rates of speed.

Another Entry in the "Funny Experience" Contest.

HERE'S another experience, picked at random from the hundreds that are arriving daily in our "funny experience" contest conducted in connection with the Selig Polyscope company, particulars of which are given on the "Right Off the Reel" page. Has something as funny—or funnier—happened to you? If so, now's the time to make it pay for the agony it probably cost you at the time.

TOO MANY GOOD FELLOWS.

One Saturday my husband telephoned, "I'm bringing a couple of boys from the office home to supper." He arrived later with four of the "boys."

After supper they planned, taking me, to go to an amusement park. Finally I consented to go. We dipped the "dips" and ran into five more "from the office." The two crowds joined. I was the only woman among ten men, who decided to show me a "real" time.

We went for a ride through Venice. My husband, discovering a man holding each of my hands, grew peeved.

The ten took me to the palm garden Jumping me, protesting, upon a table, they stood around me with lifted glasses and sang some jolly good fellow song. The crowds around cheered as they finished and cheered louder when I tried to run away. Seeing me running from the crowd, a policeman stopped me. The ten explained. As the crowd saw me released they cheered again. I wanted to go home. No!

The ten carried me off to the "bumps." I watched them, tall, short, thick, and thin, slide down, a tangled mass. Then I tried to pick my husband out while the crowd laughed. I threatened to go home, but the ten promised to behave. Behave!

Shoot the chutes came next. A boat held nine people. Mr. Sheldon and I stepped into a boat while the others stood quarreling about who should ride with the lady of the evening. Our boatman, impatient, shoved off. As Mr. Sheldon and I landed a woman shrieked, "There's my husband! Tom Sheldon, who's that creature with you?" Then the 200 pounds of her took me and shook me. My hat fell into the water, my hairpins fell out. More crowds!

Mr. Sheldon, a little man, could not stop her. She finally turned on him. "Is this the 'boys from the office,' etc.

The rest of the ten appeared and explained. She quieted, but bore Tom away.

Arranging my hair and leaving my soaked hat, I again begged to go home. No! To the café for supper!

Tom Sheldon and his wife entered. While she telephoned he came over, was jollied about his capture, and dropped this, "My wife just telephoned the fraus of you six married men. They are coming out here." He strolled away grinning.

Our table grew quiet. Six married men exchanged sidelong glances. My neglected husband grinned. "Come on, boys, lets go over to the figure eight." Excuses were made. The six benedicts started hurriedly for the gates.

My husband, the two bachelors, and myself listened to the band concert and then started home. Sheldon and his wife were waiting for the same car. They did not "see" us. Poor Tom!

Two weeks later my husband again phoned, "May I bring——?"

I waited for no more. Firmly, very firmly, I said "No," and hung up the receiver. I'd had enough "good time."

Quality. Compare Prices

The Goodrich Tire, like the trained athlete is all brawn and muscle—no fat

THE old Olympic Game promoters were great for what we call "form."

Symmetry, proportion, soundness and proper balance out-bid bulging muscles for favor—yes, and out-won, too, just as they will today.

Mere bulk never was synonymous with endurance—and the truth of this statement drives home with a bang, when you apply it to tires.

IF thick, heavy tires were the last word in tire construction, we could wipe out of existence a Goodrich Research and Test Department employing seventy people. We would take off the road a battalion of ten automobiles, that run twenty-four hours a day and every day in the year, grinding tires of all makes to pieces, just for the sake of information to us and eventual economy to the user of Goodrich Tires.

There is where we learn to cut out of a tire the material which gets the user nothing.

Of course, when we stripped tire price lists of their padding—fictitious values—we expected rivals to say we had stripped our tires.

IT was their only "come-back." They had to say that, in stripping down prices to the point where they were fair to dealer and consumer and left no room for injurious price-cutting tactics, we had stripped our tires of some quality, too.

THE Goodrich Tire, like the trained athlete, is all brawn and muscle—no fat. It represents an achievement—the ability to cut out the extra costs of manufacture, the extra costs of labor, of extra, needless material, and to give you the best, long-mileage, high-standard tire in the world.

There are padded tires as well as padded price lists.

Don't pay for padding.

Now don't forget this—we are talking in the main about Goodrich Safety Tread Tires, for they represent ninety per cent of our factory output for resale.

Furthermore, while we have put the padded prices on smooth tread tires on the run, the evil of padded prices on non-skid tires still is in evidence, as shown in table below:

THE B. F. GOODRICH CO., Akron, Ohio

Note the following table of comparative prices on non-skid tires. Columns headed "A," "B," "C" and "D" represent four highly-advertised tires:

Size	Goodrich Safety Tread	OTHER MAKES "A"	OTHER MAKES "B"	OTHER MAKES "C"	OTHER MAKES "D"
30x3	$ 9.45	$10.55	$10.95	$16.35	$18.10
30x3½	12.20	13.35	14.20	21.70	23.60
32x3½	14.00	15.40	16.30	22.85	25.30
34x4	20.35	22.30	23.80	31.15	33.55
36x4½	28.70	32.15	33.60	41.85	41.40
37x5	33.90	39.80	41.80	49.85	52.05

If you are charged less for any other make than Goodrich, they are taking it out of the tire; if you are charged more, they are taking it out of you.

This is the Famous Goodrich Safety Tread
The standard by which all other non-skids are judged

Why You Must Read Next Sunday's Tribune!

In It There Will Be

An 8x11 inch portrait of ALICE JOYCE printed on substantial paper in sepia tinted ink by The Tribune's new rotogravure process. This picture is all ready to frame.

A wonderful war story written by Lieut. Col. E. D. Swinton, D. S. O. R. E., who wrote the accounts of the battles in France that were first credited to Gen. French. In this story, "The Green Curve," Col. Swinton tells the struggle in the soul of "The Butcher," a brave but hitherto relentless general. It had been mathematically proved that the food supply of the besieged city would last only so long. "The Butcher" faced the alternative of turning hundreds of women and children out of the city to starve, or sharing with them as long as there was a bite left. It was defeat in the end—surrender and death for "The Butcher." It's a thrilling story and its counterpart is being enacted in Europe many times right now. The story takes up two pages and is illustrated in four colors.

A strategic map of Japan and Eastern China—This map is printed in TWO COLORS and will enable you to understand the situation in the Orient.

The World's Greatest Comic Section—Hans und Fritz, the irrepressible pair drawn by Rudolph Dirks, famous originator of the KATZENJAMMER KIDS; Old Doc Yak, Sidney Smith's goat that gets everybody; Bobby Make-Believe, boyhood personified, drawn by Frank O. King, and Mamma's Angel Child, "Penny" Ross' mischievous little girl who's always breezily busy.

The Teenie Weenies, the world's littlest and most popular little people, next Sunday put out a fire. Let your children see the soldier and the dunce riding the squirrel. And let them read about Sindbad's adventure with the Pirates. This story is on the same page as the Teenie Weenies and is a part of Donahey's Arabian Nights, adapted to the minds of children.

The Second "Room Renting" Prize Story—The Tribune TODAY begins a series of stories of success written by women who achieved their success as a direct result of advertising in The Tribune's "Room Renting" columns. The first story—for which a prize of $150 has been paid—will be found in Today's Household Hints section. Read it and then, NEXT SUNDAY, READ THE SECOND PRIZE WINNING STORY. Don't miss it—you'll find it in the Household Hints section of NEXT SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE.

The World's Greatest Movie Page, edited by Mae Tinee. This two-color page next Sunday will contain the picture of Harold Lockwood in "The Frame of Public Favor."

AND HUNDREDS OF DIFFERENT FEATURES
FOR MILLIONS OF DIFFERENT READERS

Facts for YOU to Remember About Next Sunday's Tribune!

The news part of NEXT SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE will consist of two sections—one of twelve pages, another of eight. The news of the world will be found there, collected by facilities unexcelled by any newspaper, edited by newspaper men trained to the highest degree and presented in typographical perfection.

The Tribune's foreign news resources include the Associated Press, the United Press, the New York World cable service, the London Times service, six special representatives in Europe, and a special correspondent in Mexico.

The Tribune's domestic news facilities include the Associated Press, two staff correspondents in Washington, a staff correspondent in New York, and special correspondents in every city and town of importance in the United States.

The Tribune's Chicago news facilities consist of the most efficient local staff in the city, and departmental and special writers who handle matter of peculiar interest to their readers.

The Sunday Tribune's news section also contains its editorial page. There are no editorials printed ANYWHERE that carry more weight and speak more clearly the desires of the people than those written for and printed by The Tribune.

On the editorial page will be found Dr. Evans' department. Dr. Evans' Sunday articles are of more value than his daily articles because on Sunday he has more space and can say more than he can on week days.

Two other public service departments on the Editorial page are The Friend of the People and The Voice of the People.

And there is La Marquise de Fontenoy—" inside stuff " on foreign lands and foreigners.

There is no better writing in any magazine in any language than there is on the " Highbrow " page, also in the news section. On this page there is an essay by the graceful Robert Herrick. The weekly letter of T. P. O'Connor is there, as are also the best selections concerning current topics at home and abroad.

The two news sections contain the best cartoons and photographs obtainable, covering local, domestic, and foreign fields.

The sporting section of The Sunday Tribune is unexcelled ANYWHERE. It consists of four pages, and the contributors to it include Ring Lardner, America's foremost sport humorist; Clare Briggs in " Days of Real Sport "; Harvey T. Woodruff, sporting editor; I. E. Sanborn and James Crusinberry, two of the cleverest baseball writers in America; Ray Pearson, fight expert; Walter H. Eckersall, and all the sporting news of the world.

The Sunday Tribune's Household Hints Section contains the latest in fashions by Bessie Ascough, Louise James, Maude Martin Evers, Jane Barton, and others; the beauty advice of Lillian Russell; Doris Blake's advice to the young on affairs of the heart and the week's best love letter; Bright Sayings of the Children, a department in which thousands participate weekly; The Tribune Cook Book; Marion Harland's Helping Hand, and the popular Dollar Contests, which bring countless letters to The Tribune and furnish much humorous and profitable reading.

The Sunday Tribune's Drama Section contains articles by America's foremost dramatic critics—Percy Hammond in Chicago and Burns Mantle in New York; authoritative and READABLE music criticism by Ronald Webster in Chicago and W. J. Henderson in New York; The Trail of the Boy Scouts, by Terry Ramsaye; Tabloid Book Reviews, by Fanny Butcher; Motorist Technique, by High; Automobile News and Comment, by Reed L. Parker; Movie News, by Mae Tinee; Popular Science, and " the wit they laugh at in vaudeville."

The Society Section contains comment by the inimitable Mme. X; Chicago society news; New York and Newport society news, by Mme. Y; suffrage, by Marion Walters Lovett; church news, by the Rev. W. B. Norton, and art news, by Ann Ellis.

And don't forget to read The Tribune's want ads, comprising the World's Greatest Classified section. Surprising, indeed, is the wealth of interest, satisfaction, and instruction touching almost every phase of human life that is found in this wonderful department.

The only ad that is adequate to tell The Sunday Tribune's story is The Sunday Tribune Itself.

Organized sales forces and advertising departments.

Sold and advertised specialty lines and general merchandise.

Compiled—mail order and manufacturers' catalogues—booklets—circulars—house organs, and followups.

Traveled and organized sales forces selling dealers, jobbers, agents, and consumers over the entire United States and parts of Canada, Cuba, and Mexico.

This experience has resulted in a fund of practical fundamental knowledge developed almost to a certainty. The proper selection of salesmen—how to train them—how to promote sales—how to plan sales campaigns—how to bring the salesmen and advertising together so that they will get the full benefit of each other and how to organize. What better proof of this ability is there than having organized three sales organizations, two of them from their inception.

There is more waste today in advertising than any other medium of selling, due largely to inexperience. This waste is minimized by an advertising manager who knows and has written copy for all mediums—followup letters—house organs—catalogues—booklets, and all mail order branches. Has sold space as an agency and bought space as a national advertiser. Consolidated sales and advertising departments and organized them under one head.

RECORD OF RESULTS.

Having had the practical experience of a salesman—advertising plan man—and copy writer, who came up through the ranks to the head of organizations that he personally schooled and maintained, he is qualified to produce for you a new organization or to increase the efficiency of your present organization.

No matter how big your proposition is or how small—if it has big possibilities you will only get the big results by selecting a man with initiative, who has had the experience, is successful, and has proven ability.

South Shore Apartments

N. E. COR. 73D-ST. AND COLES-AV.

BRAND NEW; READY ABOUT APRIL 10. 4 rooms and large sun parlor, $45, $47.50, $50. 5 rooms, all corners, large sun parlor and 2 baths, $60 and $62.50; convenient to I.C., finest suburban service in the world, 18 min. to city; also within 2 blocks of surface lines; 1 blk. to lake and 2 short blks. directly south of South Shore Country Club. NEARLY EVERY APARTMENT OVERLOOKS LAKE. Grandest location in the city. Light, pure air, sunshine, bathing, golfing, and everything to make life worth living. The owner of this building has given every detail most careful attention, so that nothing that will add to the comfort of the tenants may be overlooked. The rooms are exceptionally large; the plumbing, refrigerators, and gas ranges are best money can buy. THE SANITARY BEDS [one in each apart., making it equal to another room] are of the most approved type. Architectural design of building and interior decorations are so beautiful they must be seen; we cannot do them justice in trying to describe them. When you are in one of them you will feel more like you are in a fine little bungalow than in an apartment. If you come on I. C., be sure to get round trip tickets. Get off at Bryn Mawr sta. REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

They Are on the March.

ON FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26TH, 36 cars of settlers' movables, bound for Michigan, passed through Chicago. Nearly all the cars belonged to former farm renters in Illinois. This represents the immigration to Michigan of 180 people in one day from Illinois. Not all of these were going to the Swigart Tract, but a good percentage were.

THE SETTLEMENT MOVEMENT to the SWIGART TRACT has started earlier this year than usual, and arrivals so far have been as numerous from Indiana as from Illinois, and a number have also come from Ohio and Iowa. More customers are preparing to move on their lands this spring than in any two previous seasons. Our townships have been busy this winter graveling and improving roads, completing a bridge across the Manistee river, and otherwise opening up the country for the newcomers.

THE CAUSE OF THIS movement is the necessity and determination of people to occupy, own, and develop new lands in a good agricultural district; and the inducements to come to the SWIGART TRACT in Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford counties are strong ones, with its proven productiveness of soil, handy markets, excellent transportation, and healthful climate, all of much value to the farmer.

ANOTHER BATTALION of the great army of American farm renters, dissatisfied with high rents and the one year lease system, is on the march for occupancy of their own farm homes in the SWIGART TRACT. As each family takes their place they create an increased value to their own plot of earth and all the ground that touches its four sides. And they at the same time begin to share in the enhancement of values resulting from other improvements by the whole community. This is one of the results of colonizing which is our main work and keeps this project in the front rank of success.

OUR SERVICE: Farm experts who regularly visit every settler's place and instruct and advise him in the best methods. A demonstration farm. A seed distributing arrangement. The largest selection of lands to choose from in Michigan's Fruit and Clover Belt [over 50,000 unsold acres by inventory of last month]. Long terms that give any workingman a chance to buy land for a farm and home. Terms, 7 years by payments annual, semi-annual, quarterly, or monthly, as desired, on the basis of $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month. Prices as low as $10 to $35 per acre, and much of the best lying land now at $18 per acre. When the land is partly paid for you are insured for the balance. This project is a doubly safe co-operative plan of 20 years' growth, with ample financial strength, and behind it the largest colonizing enterprise in the country.

TO THOSE who want to go back to Michigan, I can say there was never a better time to enter farming. It has reached the top wave of prosperity. While all other business is suffering depression and it unsettled, now is the favorable time for you to pull yourself out of the rut and make the start. That's the hardest point, starting, and the only hard thing about it is your own mental condition. Show your grit. Make the first move. Establish yourself in the most substantial and independent business of this period of our history. With the sustained demand for food products by increasing population at home and curtailed production abroad there is as much certainty of permanent prosperity in farming as anything in this world.

TO EXPLAIN all the conditions in the SWIGART TRACT, I have published a 72 page book so well indexed that you can quickly turn to answers to all of your questions about soil, climate, water supply, rainfall, and crops. Get this free book. Bear in mind that ours is a general farming district. Our rye and wheat, oats and buckwheat, timothy, clover, and vetch, 90 day and fodder corn, peas and beans, potatoes and vegetables, are hastening this district's destiny to become a silo country of live stock, dairying, cattle, hogs, and sheep. There is no better place for poultry profits, because one must grow the feed to succeed, and must have enough reasonable priced ground to do it. It is also becoming a district of orchards of apples, peaches, pears, plums, and cherries.

GET THE BOOK. Write for it if you can't call. Better call and also get a large map and see our sample display of 1914 crops and 100 stereopticon views, which are being continually shown in our stereopticon room. Prepare yourself in this way to make an intelligent examination of the land when you go on one of our excursions, which begin again this month. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

GREAT SACRIFICE FOR IMMEDIATE SALE OR TRADE.
A close corporation owning a bearing grapefruit grove of 100 acres, 8 years old, and 144 acres of vacant land on the Isle of Pines, on account of the death of several stockholders, is compelled to make an immediate division of the property. The advertiser is entitled to about 15 acres of the bearing grove and 20 acres of the vacant land. Not being in a position to give the property personal attention, which it requires, will sell it at great sacrifice, on easy terms, to the right person, or trade it for property not requiring personal attention.
Ideal climate the year around, and a rare opportunity for a man in position to take personal charge of the property.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

AUTOMOBILES—ELECTRIC.

Nearly Half Saved On Refinished Woods Electrics.

If good service and real value are of more importance than having the very latest style of car, here's your chance to get a real bargain.

This week we offer thoroughly refinished used cars at $600 and $700, just as good as far as looks and service go as others at $1,100 and $1,200. These cars are in first class shape, will give just as much mileage and speed as shaft drive cars much higher in price. Just because they are not the latest worm gear drive, you save at least 40 per cent and get a fine car. Others are splendid bargains at from $400 to $2,400. A large number, $600 to $1,400, all in splendid condition.

These are cars you will be proud to own. Tires are new, new batteries if desired. We are pricing them down to the lowest, rock bottom figure to make room for the later models. This is your opportunity to pick up a really good car at a very low price.

Remember, the Woods factory is the place to come for any kind of a used or rebuilt electric, where you are sure of getting a thoroughly satisfactory car. Not only do we offer you a large number of cars to select from but exceptional workmanship on each one. We have the only force of factory experts in the city.

Pick out your car now—a small deposit will hold the car until you are ready to take it. Take advantage of the present low price level. Inquiries by letter or telephone, city or country, receive prompt and careful attention. Our demonstrating cars will call for you anywhere in the city.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

INVESTMENT—IF YOU HAVE THE KIND of business judgment we are looking for, you know we cannot afford to waste your time nor our money on this advertisement. We are a large, responsible corporation and want a man to do in some other city just what we are now doing in Chicago and can offer him a chance to make from $10,000 to $20,000 for the next 5 to 10 years; we make the very best and most useful $5 household device ever made, and we sell it through house to house demonstrators, upon 25c weekly payments, entirely upon its merit, and subject to cancellation at any time; we pay demonstrator a commission of 75c [the first 3 payments] and the collector 8% of collections; this business is now in operation in Chicago and increasing by leaps and bounds; sales and collections exceeding all expectations; we have no scheme to sell territory, nor whereby you forfeit a dollar to us, or have a device left on your hands, but will take back at full price all used devices should you desire to quit; we simply wish to sell tens of thousands of these most wonderful devices upon their merit, and if you will come to Chicago and prove to us that you are capable of managing such a business and of financing it, we will show you just how we do it and make you a proposition that is good, safe, and desirable, so free from the possibility of loss and so certain to make you a fortune, that you will mortgage your home, if necessary, in order to finance it, but you must see how fast and easily the devices sell, how easily the collections are made, and know how well the people like the device before you can realize what this advertisement means to you; you can begin next week if you wish. M. W. PITNER, 8 E. Kinzie-st., Chicago.

INVESTMENT EXTRAORDINARY—FIREARMS—Advertiser controls patents for small-gauge and small caliber automatic sporting guns and for high power automatic army rifle. These guns combine greater efficiency, economy of cost and ammunition, better safety devices, simpler mechanism. Belgium is eliminated. Capable parties who can command capital may learn particulars at personal interview. Irresponsible promoters disregard. Address T 177, Tribune.
